London, July 10.—The active British fleet in English waters and the vessels from the Mediterranean station, consisting of some 315 ships of all classes, gathered at Spithead yesterday for inspection of the House of Lords and the House of Commons.

R. L. Borden, the Canadian Premier, with his colleagues, J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine; C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, and L. P. Pelletier, Postmaster-General, who are now in England to consult the British Admiralty on Canada's naval program, attended the inspection which opened with a display of the aeroplanes and hydroplanes now being used for the first time at British naval manoeuvres.

The great fleet later proceeded to sea for the summer manoeuvres. This is one of the strongest fleets, if not the strongest, that has ever assembled, and still many effective vessels remain in the naval ports, including those of the eighth battle squadron and the seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth and eleventh cruiser squadrons, as well as a number of ships under repair.

The manoeuvres are to be held in the North Sea, and although the plans of the Admiralty have been kept secret enough has leaked out to indicate that the problem set for elucidation is concerned with the frustration of an attempted raid by a force of troops under naval convoy.

The ship are to be divided into two fleets, Red and Blue, the latter constituting the defending force under Prince Louis of Battenberg, and the former the attacking force, under the command of Sir George Callaghan.

Twenty-one admirals will have their flags flying, in addition to two commodores.

The attacking force will probably consist of twenty battleships, of which eight will be Dreadnoughts, ten armored cruisers, including one Dreadnought-cruiser, seven protected cruisers and the usual auxiliary fleet; while the defence includes 23 battleships, of which five will be Dreadnoughts, four battleship-cruisers, 16 other armored cruisers, four protected cruisers, a great fleet of submarines, destroyers, torpedo boats and mine layers.

TO PREVENT MORE FLOODS

Galt, July 10.—At a meeting held here yesterday afternoon for the consideration of flood conditions on the Grand River, attended by delegates from Brantford, Paris, Galt, Berlin an' Elora, a resolution was passed recommending the appointment of a delegation to the Provincial Government, to urge the creation of a commission of enquiry, for the purpose of investigating the practicability of storage dams in the basin of the Grand.

Rev. J. P. Jaffray presided and the chief speakers were Chief Engineer Jones of Brantford; W. H. Breithaupt, C.E., of Berlin, the instigator of the scheme; Richard Thompson, of Paris; Mayor Hartman and Frank Cockshutt of Brantford, and Sidney Richardson, M.P.P., of Elora.

The resolution will be forwarded to the Provincial Government and Sir James Whitney will be asked to name a date when he will meet a deputation of representatives of the municipal councils and boards of trade of Brantford, Paris, Galt, Preston, Hespeler, Berlin, Elora, Waterloo and Fergus.

Those interested have been spurred to action by damage done in the heavy spring freshets this year.

DISAPPEARED IN CHANNEL FLIGHT

JAMES VALENTINE

James Valentine, the well known British aviator, left Dover, England, in a Bristol monoplane for Dieppe by way of Calais. He has not landed at Dieppe, and fears are entertained that he has been lost. Valentine has been a prominent figure in many racing contests in England during the last year. He is a pilot of the Aero Club of the United Kingdom.

SIDESTEPPED MANOEUVRES

Montreal, July 10.—Can a member of a militia regiment refuse to attend the manoeuvres of the said regiment when called upon to do so by his superior officers without giving good reason for so doing, is the question that will be threshed out before the police court this week.

Yesterday Major W. E. Date of the 17th Squadron of the Duke of York Lancers, accompanied by H. Bisaillon, K.C., went to the courthouse and obtained summonses against four men of his regiment for having neglected to attend at Farnham camp.

It was stated that the cases had been instituted under specific orders from the Militia Department and that Col. Sam Hughes had decided to have the matter settled once for all.

Italians Win Another.

Rome, June 10.—The Italian troops fought a severe battle in Tripoli, ending in a brilliant victory and the capture of the town of Misratah, 120 miles east of the city of Tripoli, along the coast. The Arabs and Turks fled into the interior, leaving several hundred corpses on the field. The Italians lost nine killed and 124 wounded.

ENGLISHMAN BROKE RECORD

Special To The Review.

Stockholm, July 10.—A. N. S. Jackson, of England, broke the Olympic record in the fifteen hundred metre flat race final, winning in three minutes, fifty-six and four-fifths seconds. This is six and three-fifths seconds faster than Melvin Sheppard made the same distance at the London Olympic games in 1908. Jackson fainted at the conclusion of the race and had to be carried from the track. Abel R. Kiviat and Norman S. Taber, of the United States, were so close for second and third that the judges are awaiting the developments of a photograph of the finish to determine their standing.

ENGINEER HAD BEEN DRUNK

Corning, N.Y., July 10.—That William Schroeder, engineer of the passenger train that ran into the rear end of train No. 9 here last Thursday, causing the deaths of 40 persons in the resulting wreck, was apparently intoxicated at 12.30 o'clock on the morning of July 4, within four hours of the time he boarded the engine which he guided to destruction, was the testimony given at the coroner's inquest here yesterday afternoon by Charles Klapproth of Elmira, for many years a close personal friend of Schroeder.

SNARING THE PORPOISE.

Trapped For Its Hide, Blubber and Famous Head Oil.

The only porpoise oil factory on the Atlantic coast is established about six miles below Cape Hatteras and near Hatteras inlet. Along this coast porpoises are plentiful through about six months of the year, and there are three crews of fishermen who make a business of catching them for the oil factory. For the reason that porpoises are easily frightened the fisherman must be wary and quiet who would meet with success. The method employed is to impound a school in a wide meshed net first and then to take them with a sweep net of much finer mesh.

The porpoises are five to ten feet in length, big and powerful. They are skinned for their hides, and the blubber is removed. The hides are salted down and sent in their green state to a tannery in New Jersey to be tanned and made into leather. Porpoise hide is used for shoestrings, pocketbooks and traveling bags or suit cases. The oil from the blubber is tried out at the factory on the beach and then sent to New Bedford, Mass., for refining.

The valuable head oil, the famous porpoise oil that is used for oiling watches and other delicate machinery, is obtained from the marrow of the porpoise's lower jawbone and from a small quantity of blubber found between the snout and the blowhole. In making the oil this blubber and the marrow are mixed. The production of this oil may range from half a pint to a quart from one porpoise. Refined porpoise oil for jewelers' use is worth from $900 to $1,200 a barrel.

The body oil obtained from a porpoise amounts ordinarily to thirteen or fourteen gallons. This is used for various purposes and brings far less than the head oil. The carcasses are made into fertilizer.—New York World.

BAD FIRE AT THOUSAND ISLANDS SUMMER RESORT

Thousand Island Park Is Swept by a Disastrous Conflagration Which Wipes Out Practcially the Whole Business Section—Columbian Hotel, N. Y. Education Building and Eighty-Seven Cottages Destroyed.

Watertown, N.Y., July 10.—Thousand Island Park was swept yesterday afternoon and last night by a disastrous fire which wiped out practically the entire business section, the Columbian Hotel, the New York State Education building and eighty-seven cottages. The loss, it is estimated, will be approximately $500,000. No lives were lost nor were there any serious casualties, so far as could be learned last night.

The fire started at one o'clock yesterday and burned for more than eight hours. At 9.30 o'clock last night it had been practically extinguished. The blaze spread with amazing rapidity, fanned by a strong wind. The hotels and cottages of the fashionable resort were filled with summer guests, many of whom had to vacate so hurriedly that they lost practically all their belongings. Hotel guests and cottagers did their best to fight the flames, but without a department organization or suitable apparatus their efforts were of little use.

Shortly after the fire had broken out in Haller's department store from an undetermined cause and spread so quickly that it was feared the whole town would go, help was sent for by telephone to both Alexandria Bay and Clayton. Sweeping through the business section and leaving nothing but ruins behind the flames spread to the Columbian Hotel, which was destroyed, and then began eating up cottage after cottage until more than four score of them had been consumed, and there seemed no prospect of checking the blaze. The entire park appeared to be doomed. At one time it was feared that the loss would reach as high as $1,000,000, but it is not believed that it will aggregate more than half that figure.

All wires to the Thousand Island Park went down because of the blaze. Communication with the resort is slow and tedious.

The resort was one of the most popular on the St. Lawrence River and it was having a busy and successful season.

Chinese Reject Loan.

Pekin, July 10.—Finance Minister Hsiung Hsi-Lang's attitude in regard to the six power loan of $300,000,000 to China, which resulted in a deadlock being reached at a conference held Monday between the Finance Minister and the representatives of the foreign banking groups, leaves by only the barest margin the possibilty that future negotiations will be conducted.

Hsiung Hsi-Laing yesterday sent telegrams to the provincial authorities to the effect that he has rejected the loan terms in accordance with provincial desires. As the money is therefore unobtainable, the Finance Minister adds, he is unable to supply the provincial demands.

Crazed by Heat, Drowned Himself.

North Bay, July 10.—A young Swede laborer, employed on the C.N.R. construction near here, became crazed with heat and while being brought to North Bay hospital, jumped from the C.P.R. bridge into Cheney Creek, 100 feet below. His companions hastened down the bank and tried to rescue him, but he eluded them and swam out into Lake Nipissing, where he was drowned. The body was recovered shortly after.

French Aviator Killed.

Chalons-Sur-Marne, France, July 10.—Rene Bedel, one of the most experienced airmen, and the holder of the Pommery Cup for cross-country flying which he won from Jules Vedrines, met his death yesterday before the eyes of some thousands of French troops, who were assembled on the reviewing ground at Mourmelon-le-Grand, near here. His machine struck telegraph wires and collapsed.

RELIEF FROM HOT SPELL

Toronto, July 10.—Cooler weather is promised to-night. The weather man was very optimistic last night, and said that although during to-day it would be practically as hot as yesterday, there would be a few thunderstorms at a late hour, with consequent relief from the swelter.

Ninety-one was the record reached yesterday, but with this there was a slight breeze—one, however, that was not felt in the downtown sections. It is getting much cooler in the west now with an occasional shower. All through the east, the conditions are similar to Toronto, except in the maritimes, where it is a little warmer. But indications point to the coolness of the west making a visit here.

There was only one heat prostration reported to the police. Thaddeus Niraski collapsed on St. Clair avenue, about 5.30, and was taken to the Western Hospital. He is doing nicely to-day.

However, there are many people who succumb to the sun's rays who are not treated in hospitals. In factories where there is very inadequate ventilation, coupled with the intense heat, it is a common thing for a number of girl and men workers to faint.

Two Deaths In Montreal.

Montreal, July 10.—The hoped-for break in the heat wave failed to materialize yesterday. Once more the thermometer topped the 90 mark in its retreat at the McGill Observatory, while downtown the temperature was many degrees higher. At midnight 73 was recorded and the sky was clear.

Two further deaths from heat were reported last evening and seven cases of serious prostration were attended to at the hospitals. Two score less serious prostrations were treated in the outdoor departments. Fred Magessey, an employe of the Northern Electric, fainted at the factory and died shortly afterwards. Mastu Borantki, a Pole, employed laying sidewalks in Montreal West, collapsed in the afternoon and succumbed last night in the hospital.

The death rate among the children has increased enormously, the deaths among those under five years old having doubled since the heat wave set in in earnest a week ago.

Hot In Hamilton.

Hamilton, July 10.—Yesterday was another torrid day in Hamilton, but the temperature did not go as high as most people thought it did, 93 in the shade being the maximum, while, on Monday, three degrees higher were recorded. The intense humidity and absence of any breeze, however, made things most uncomfortable. Several people in the city were overcome by the heat, but no deaths among the residents resulted from that cause.

FIRE FIEND AT TILSBURY

Special to the Review.

Chatham, Ont., July 10.—Fire at Tilbury yesterday destroyed Bennett & Prendergast's livery with fifteen horses, Mather's grist mill and the town pumping plant, entailing a loss of twenty-two thousand dollars. Charles Rhodes, engineer, and his son, Walter, kept the pumping plant running until the roof collapsed and escaped injury.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills Cured

"I think it should be the duty of the schools to teach children how to keep well," writes Miss Nannie E. Naydon, a well-known and highly esteemed resident of Bristol. "Ignorance of the laws of health and the use of improper remedies destroyed my vigor, and led me to the verge of invalidism. I was as a girl ruddy and strong. Nothing seemed to affect me until I was about thirty. Then gas began to form in the stomach. I suffered with bloating and a general failure in strength set in. If I went upstairs my breath hurt. My system was very irregular, and until I grew pretty bad I didn't pay much heed to my condition. Then I got blue, worried all the time, wakened in the night, and couldn't get to sleep again. None of the medicine I took helped me. One day I was reading of a very interesting case like mine cured by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I took the same treatment. It was just right—didn't physic me to death, but took hold of the weak, sick parts of my system, and set things right. It seems as if Dr. Hamilton's Pills have made me young again, and all my color, spirits, vigor, and health of former days have returned to stay."

Every girl and woman should use Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly. They help a woman in many ways. Beware of the dealer who asks you to take an inferior pill on which his profit is larger than on Dr. Hamilton's. Sold in yellow boxes, 25c per box, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone, Co., Kingston, Ont.

ISSUING LICENSES

On the 8th inst. the issuing of licenses to the lessees and owners of moving picture shows began, and there is evidence that so far as a rigid inspection and regulation is concerned the business will be made as safe as possible for the public. It has been announced that 262 machines are licensed or to be licensed in the province, following a tour of the provincial inspectors. It has developed that about 260 men are named as capable to run machines. A new feature is the apprenticeship system by which novices are allowed to serve six months before becoming re-engaged as full fledged operators.

If there is one form of entertainment that is the people's, it is the moving picture. Under proper supervision and in capable hands it should be an educative feature. No better example of this can be adduced than the exhibition of the magnificent views of the Durbar in India, and the reception of King George as Emperor of the eastern dominions beyond the seas. The play of movement, the gorgeous coloring, the fascination of the pageantry of the East were all shown. In no other way could such vivid scenic display be put before an audience. The painter uses his brush and few see the results. The moving picture film is at the pleasure of thousands.

GOVERNOR WILSON'S FIRST SHOT

Governor Wilson, the Democratic nominee for president, has no political past extending beyond a year or two as chief executive in the State of New Jersey and in that is fortunate seeing that neither sin nor blunder as a public man can be laid to his charge. As President of Princeton University he worked himself to the front as the apostle of the remedying of all human ills, social and economic, but whether he can advance from the theoretic to the practical stage is a question yet to be settled. No one can cast a suspicion upon his record, no one can doubt either the purity of his ideals or that he will enter into the strenuous fight which he has before him with all the sincerity and ardor of a man who has the utmost faith in his cause.

He has already declared that the tariff, which he regards the central cause of the present high cost of living, will be his chief point of attack but in this he has sprung nothing new in the way of a weapon. His party, under other leaders, have fought the presidential battle for years on that same issue, only to go down to defeat. Once the Democrats, in 1894, had a chance to put their trade theories into practice and so glaring was their disregard of campaign pledges, so disastrous to the business conditions of the country was their tariff tinkering, that the public lost faith in their professions and refused to trust them further.

Unless the majority of the people of the United States have changed their present creed, and there is nothing to indicate that they have done so, Governor Wilson has no more chance of election next November than had Bryan in his three attempts, or Judge Parker had eight years ago.

In the meantime Col. Roosevelt, with his ear to the ground, is listening for that call to form a new party of progressives and lead his nation from the impending doom which he would have the world believe none but Roosevelt can avert. Seeing that Governor Wilson and his followers stand for everything the colonel preaches the public will continue to wonder where the ex-president is to obtain a new foothold. All his past convention talk is seemingly regarded as pure and simple bluff, the expiring boasts of a man who refuses to die game.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Two Guelph men solved the keep-cool problem. They turned on the spray sprinkler in the backyard and took turns at dosing the other fellow. It was great, but they felt embarrased when they found that all the neighborhood back windows were full of sight-seers.

The Romaine street sewer is again a perplexing problem. A good many people think that that particular sewer could have been projected and laid nicely and efficiently, if Mr. W. J. Francis, had been commissioned to handle the job. So far no satisfactory results have been had.

There may be a hot time in the Guelph Public Schools when they reopen at the end of the summer term. A local paper says that Messrs. Hammer and Staughter, two of the teachers on the public school staff are at the O.A.C., taking a course in Normal training.

Three officers of Canadian regiments have felt it necessary to resign their commands, because they failed to see that the order of the Department, relative to liquor in militia camps, was observed. Other resignations are expected. In this connection, the remark of the Minister of Militia, Hon. Col. Sam Hughes will be approved by all who desire to see the camps free from at least, the sale of liquor;—"It is the business of an officer to see that there is no liquor in the camp," said Col. Sam Hughes. "I know the militia business," he snapped when asked about the canteen, "and I know the evils in connection with it. Liquor is one. The liquor business in the camps has got to be stopped or I'll know the reason why. Most officers realize this now."

Paris Postage Stamp Exchange.

"A curb market in Paris" was written on a picture postcard received from that city by a Wall street broker. It showed an open space thronged with men, women and boys, many of whom held books and portfolios. A letter by the same mail explained that this was the "postage stamp exchange," where dealers and collectors assembled once every month "to do business and to regulate prices." "Here one may find schoolboys, great lawyers, society women, shrewd traders, writers, merchants and men of all professions exchanging, buying and showing stamps, and, although there is no organization, all seem to follow unwritten laws, and the gathering is as interesting to look upon as that stock market in your city which has no roof over its head."—New York Tribune.

Hindu Weddings and Burials.

The expenses of a Hindu wedding come upon the bride's father, and they are so great that a family sometimes is ruined or impoverished for many years by the marriage of a daughter. The next most costly affair to the Hindu is the burial services. Should the head of the family escape bankruptcy when his daughter is married the eldest son is almost sure to be ruined when he buries his father.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, July 9.—The foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat showed some improvement, and as the prices bid for No. 4 and No. 5 grades were in line sales of 200,000 bushels were made for July-August shipment, but cables this afternoon were easier and bids 3d lower. There was a good demand for oats from the United Kingdom and continent, and as the prices bid were 3d higher, sales of a number of loads of extra No. 1 feed were made for July-August shipment. On spot business was quiet and the feeling easy. The trade in flour is fair for local and country account, but the export trade is dull. An active trade is being done in bran and shorts, and prices are firmer. Butter and cheese is remaining steady, with a fair business passing. Eggs in fair demand and prices are barely active.

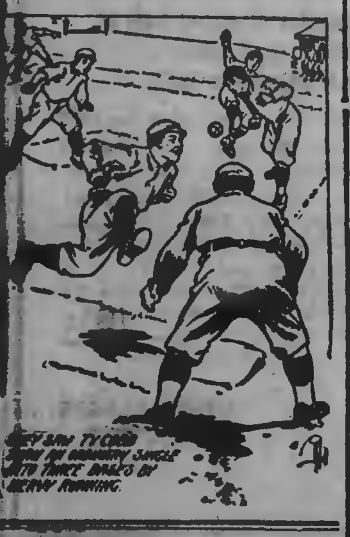
CHAPTER XIV.

Detroit—home of automobiles and Ty Cobb—is a pretty place. It was vastly appreciated by the boys, both for its natural beauty and the fact that they encountered Cobb on Monroe avenue. Tyrus, who had met Brockett some months before in Washington, was not only affable, but anxious to go out of his way to guide the youngsters round the burg. Solano, like many others who had never made the acquaintance of the Georgia Peach, had always believed him a swell-headed, inflated, disagreeable character, and was amazed to find him a splendid young fellow, gentlemanly and entertaining. After Cobb had left them the Cuban shook his head in a bewildered fashion.

"Finding out my mistake about Ty Cobb," he explained, "was some jolt, believe me. I'll not be surprised to discover, after that enlightenment, that Baron Zollern is our dearest friend and that Mr. Yazimoto would not die to make us happy!"

"They don't grow any nicer than Cobb," said Brockett. "He is pretty nearly the best ever."

Naturally, the messengers went to see Cobb perform that afternoon, after securing tickets and berths on the Chicago train. The great Georgian was at his best, giving a wonderful display of his speed and matchless hitting powers. After seeing him turn an ordinary single into three bases by nervy running, the boys left the ball yard, garrulous as monkeys, wildly delighted at the doings of Tyrus Cobb, but not forgetting the dangers and demands of their situation. Nobody bothered them at the game; no spies or shadows seemed to be on their trail as they walked from the park, and there appeared to be no reason for special caution. Much adventure and many unpleasant happenings, however, had converted the youngsters into thoroughly suspicious and watchful individuals, and every bulky German, every passing Japanese or Chinaman, loomed large as a possible emissary of the foe.



THEY SAW TY COBB TURN AN ORDINARY SINGLE INTO THREE BASES BY NERVY RUNNING.

Marching majestically amid the throng, and towering above them like Gulliver among the Lilliputians, a gigantic negro came up the street. The black man must have been seven feet high, and was gayly costumed in scarlet coat, blue trousers, and silk hat. With either hand he dealt out the advertising cards of some dentist, and kept a continual stream of pasteboards flying through the crowd. The boys sidestepped to let the giant pass, but the mammoth negro checked his course for the fraction of a second and thrust a couple of his cards into Brockett's astonished hands. Resuming his march, he paraded up the street, with a mob of small boys stringing in his wake, turned a corner and disappeared with his attendant train.

"Some advertising agent, that boy," laughted Brockett. "Wonder who hires him, anyhow?"

One of the cards bore the name of some "dental parlor." Across the other, in small but clearly written letters, were these hieroglyphs:

"Instructions at Chicago," Brockett translated. "Say—let's catch that black man and ask him where he got this card."

They hurried to the cross-street where the negro had changed his course, but the gigantic African was nowhere visible.

"It occurs to me, Harry," he ventured, "that anyone who is tracking us on sleeping cars will naturally prowl into the lower berth. Why not frame up a dummy, leave him in the lower, and both of us climb into the upper? Then we can take turns watching, and ought to come pretty near to landing any inquisitive gentleman who gets his locations mixed."

The idea appealed to Brockett, and was quickly carried through. It was by no means difficult to construct a fair imitation of a sleeper in the lower berth, simply by rolling up the blankets, rumpling the pillows, and arranging a few articles of clothing 'round the bunk. When the work was finished, and the electric light turned off, the life-like effect was wholly satisfying, and the boys could hardly restrain their laughter as they climbed like Alpine chamois into the mountainous regions above. Brockett took the first watch—and nothing happened to disturb the tranquillity of the car except a wrangle between two claimants of lower seven, each, through some mistake, holding the proper coupon.

Solano was on guard, and Brockett was peacefully dreaming, when the green curtains were slightly agitated. The Cuban stretched himself towards the edge of the berth and peered downward. Nothing visible. If anyone had been trying to rummage in the lower berth, he had fled with snake-like silence and lightning speed. Solano, deciding that he had been in error, drew back, and waited out his watch without further incident.

With the first rays of sunlight, both boys were astir. Slipping down into the aisle without waiting for the porter's ladder, they looked into the lower berth. Something was jutting out from the blanket-roll that had simulated a peaceful sleeper—a black handle, from which fluttered a tiny bit of paper. Brockett seized the handle, and drew forth a vicious knife, with a strangely modeled, almost half-moon blade.

"A Filipino knife," exclaimed Solano. "Spanish writing on the paper. Let me see. 'With the compliments of Aguilar!'"

CHAPTER XV.

"These sleeping car adventures," complained Ramon Solano, as they disembarked at the Chicago station, "are somewhat wearing to the nerves. I suggest, after this, that we either walk or sit up in the day coach. Three strikes and out, you know. Twice we have been extremely lucky in Pullman car happenings—the third time may be bad for both of us."

"I agree with you," assented Brockett. "We can figure out ways and means of transportation, though, after we get through with our mission. I wouldn't mind going back by sea, if such a trip is possible. You have a pocket atlas, haven't you? Yes? Then we can map out a sea voyage to divert ourselves during the afternoon."

"Your cipher," said Solano, thoughtfully, "notified you that you would receive orders in Chicago, didn't it?"

"Yes. So I understood."

"How will any orders be given us? Where would we go to meet any message-bringer? How does any government agent know where to locate us?"

Brockett shook his head. "All way past my understanding, Ramon. All I know is that we are supposed to receive orders here—somebody, somehow, will hand them to us before we leave Chicago. I am as certain of that as I am of—of—well, of eating breakfast this morning. Remember how we were given the card in Detroit? Some one will pass the newest orders to us, and do it just as queerly."

"One thing sure, my boy," remarked Solano, "we will have to wait around Chicago till such time as orders reach us. We can't proceed, helterskelter, slipshod, taking long chances, and start for Mexico this afternoon. No chance to migrate till we have the word."

"Quite correct. Still, I think the next cipher message won't be long delayed. It will be in our hands within a very few hours. While waiting, we can see the town, and incidentally keep a sharp watch for our Filipino friend."

The boys were more worried than either of them would admit. Neither had counted the vicious little Filipino, Aguilar, as an active factor in the situation. They were fairly well prepared to deal with the wily Japanese emissary, Yazimoto, or with the burly, hot-tempered German, Baron Zollern, but neither had for a minute made any calculation involving the brown fellow from Luzon. The affair in the sleeper, when the dummy arranged by Brockett had been stabbed with Aguilar's keen-bladed knife, was like a bombshell to them, and their worries were intensified by the fact that no trace of the would-be murderer could be found. Nobody even resembling the little Filipino had left the train in the morning—the boys had scrutinized every outgoing passenger—and the porter and conductor asserted that no one even of a brown complexion had been aboard that train as far as they were aware. "Fore Gawd, gemmen," protested the porter, "if any dahk-brown pusson had got into dis heah cah, Ah'd have sized him up fo' notheh niggah, an' Ah'd suttin suah remembeh any niggah dat had de nehve to ride in a Pullman."

BUTTERMILK.

It Is Rich in Protein, the Most Costly of Food Ingredients.

An ordinary glass of buttermilk contains about as much nutriment as two ounces of bread, a good sized potato or a half pint of oysters, says a bulletin of the United States department of agriculture. It thus contains about the same food constituents as skimmilk, but it has an added hygienic value because the protein is more easily digested than the protein in skimmilk and therefore is often prescribed by physicians for children and invalids, especially those suffering from intestinal trouble.

Protein, being the most costly of food ingredients, is the one most likely to be lacking in inexpensive meals, and this is the nutrient which both skimmilk and buttermilk supply in a cheap and useful form, and when taken with bread or used in cooking they form a very nutritious addition to the diet. Two and one-half quarts of skimmilk or buttermilk contain about the same amount of protein as one pound of round steak and cost about one-quarter as much. Two quarts of milk have a greater nutrient value than one quart of oysters. The nutriment in the form of oysters would cost 30 to 50 cents, while the skimmilk or buttermilk would have a value on the farm of from 2 to 4 cents.

Things China Knew Long Ago.

There is a distinct tradition of flying machines at a very remote date in China, according to the author of "The Civilization of China," and rough woodcuts of such cars have been handed down for many centuries. There are even hints of the X ray, there being a record of a physician of the fifth century B. C. who was able to see into the viscera of his patients, while another physician, who lived about 1,800 years ago, was accustomed to use an anaesthetic and operated upon the bowels and offered to cure the headaches of a military commander of his day by opening his head. Hypnotism has been used for hundreds of years, but is forbidden by law. The ranks of the Boxers were largely recruited from the society of the vegetarians, who neither eat meat, smoke nor drink.

AN UNPUBLISHED NOVEL.

Burnaby's Handwriting Was So Bad It Could Not Be Read.

It was stated at the time of Colonel Burnaby's death that he had left behind him the manuscript of a novel for which there was considerable competition among the publishers.

This is quite true. The manuscript, a bulky parcel, was handed to me with discretionary power either to publish it myself or to use it in connection with the proposed biography.

Here a singular and, as it finally proved, a fatal obstacle presented itself. Familiar for many years with Burnaby's handwriting, I could not after diligent endeavor make out more than a sentence here and there on the crowded page of manuscript.

Burnaby's writing was, possibly with the exception of Dean Stanley's, the worst I ever saw. It looked as if before sitting down to write a letter he had pulled a twig out of the hedge, mixed a little blacking and then gone ahead.

He wrote the whole of his "Ride to Khiva" and his "Ride on Horseback Through Asia Minor" with his own hand. But before they reached the printer they were fairly written out by a copyist.

The hapless man used to make out as much as he could, then leave blanks for filling up which he had to seek the assistance of the author. Sometimes there were more blanks in a page than words.

Despairing of making anything of the manuscript of the novel, it was submitted to a publisher, who turned upon it his most skillful decipherist. Neither head nor tail could be made of the manuscript, and the intention of publishing the novel was consequently abandoned.—Sir H. W. Lucy in Cornhill Magazine.

YOU CAN BE ABSOLUTELY SURE OF VALUES

If you carefully read the store advertisements and follow them in your buying.

Merchants advertise certain lines because they know these lines will advertise their stores. Because there is something about certain goods, they are put in conspicuous places and the people are told about them. It may be the exclusiveness or newness of design, it may be an unusual quality, it may be an attractive price.

But there is at least one definite, sure reason why a merchant advertises an article and is willing to stake the reputation of his store upon it.

Therefore, when you see an article advertised in THE REVIEW, depend upon it, that article is good value, as good value as can be obtained in that particular store.

SIX MONTHS' TERM IN MERCER REFORMATORY; JIM WILSON'S INGRATITUDE

Mrs. Welch, guilty of keeping a disorderly house on Elm street, was sent to the Mercer Reformatory this morning for six months. She has four small children, who will wait at the Children's Shelter until their mother is liberated.

"THAT'S GRATITUDE?"

The notorious "Jim" Wilson was convicted to-day of a very mean assault on P.C Brown, in the police station last night. P.C. Brown was in charge of the station, and "Jim" was resting in the cell, where he had been placed for being intoxicated. He was sober enough, however, to be perfectly aware of what he was doing. "Jim" called for a glass of water, and P.C. Brown thought he was fulfilling the golden rule when he obligingly approached the cell with the cooling liquid. But "Jim" lacked gratitude. He picked up the bucket of slops in the cell, and doused the contents through the bars, completely "sousing" the officer.

For this "Jim" was fined $10 in police court to-day, or the alternative of thirty days on the hill. To the fine was tacked $5.75 for being drunk in a public place.

Another connoisseur of intoxicants was relieved of $2, after pleading guilty of being under the influence of liquor.

WHY DID MR. STRATTON NOT PROTECT THE PUBLIC?

When Mr. Culverwell, C.E., got a lease of Burleigh Falls power, from the Laurier Government for one dollar a year for sixty years, it was provided in the lease that no assignment of the lease could be made without the Government's consent. Mr. Culverwell sold out at an enormous profit to himself and friends. But what did the public get for consenting to the assignment? Nothing — and why? The county of Peterborough, which has a large debt and which virtually owned the power, got nothing—and why?

The People of Peterborough county are easy—any why?

A CHANGE AT Y.M.C.A.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Young Men's Christian Association was held last evening and important business was transacted. One of the important changes made was the age limit in the Boys' Department. In the past no boy could join the Y.M.C.A., unless he was twelve years of age or over. This kept many boys from enjoying the privileges of this important organization. Boys can now join at the age of ten and no doubt parents will be glad to learn of this wise decision on the part of the Board of Directors. The Property Committee was authorized to make necessary repairs on the building. New games of different kinds will be introduced in the Senior Department, and the present reading room will be changed into the Senior Game Room and one of the other rooms will be used as a reading room. The Senior Camp begins July the 13th, at Juniper Island, and many of the young men of the city will avail themselves of the advantage of this outing. The Board of Directors are anxious to make the Association one of the most attractive and helpful organizations for young men in this city, and have adopted an agressive policy for the year. There will be something doing in the Y.M.C.A. at all times, in all of its departments.

The General Secretary, Mr. Hainsworth, who was operated on for appendicitis, shortly after he came to Peterboro, has recovered and has assumed charge of the Association again.

The outlook for the year is very promising and during the month of June, several new members joined the Association, and young men of good moral character are eligible to membership, irrespective of creed.

PROGRAM ON CIVIC HOLIDAY

Two Machines to Fly at the Driving Park

Peterborough will be initiated into the mysteries of sky flying on Civic Holiday, 12th August, when the Curtiss Exhibition Company, of New York, with whom the contract has been signed, will give exhibitino flights on two aeroplanes in the Exhibition grounds. The aeroplanes are capable of attaining a speed of more than 60 miles an hour and are driven by a first class driver. There will be two flights by each machine of 30 minues' duration. No doubt this will prove a strong attraction for Civic Holiday. In addition to this there will be a five mile motor cycle race for a silver cup, open to the district. Excepting professionals, all who own a motor cycle are asked to compete in this race.

The horse races will consist of a free for all, 2.18 class and 2.35 class, the distance being half a mile.

All these events are taking place on the Exhibition grounds. On this same date there will be a Canadian League baseball match between Peterborough and London. Keep this date open for these events.

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF HEALTH

At a meeting of the Board of Health yesterday afternoon, a letter was read from the city Clerk, enclosing a copy of a letter to the City Council, Complaining of a nuisance caused by the gas works. Several recommendations were passed for the building of sewers.

A letter was read from D. B. Denison, regarding a refuse ground at the east of his hotel. The Board recommended having a man at the dumping ground, east to Water st., on each day, until Sept. 1st., to see that nothing deleterious is deposited there.

A recommendation to the City Council, to have the market square cleaned regularly, also carried.

Those who attended were Mayor Bradburn, Messrs. J. Murty, D. H. Kerneghan, and J. R. Metheral, chairman.

THE WEATHER

While thunderstorms have apparently passed on all sides of us during the past few days, none have favored us with their cooling influence and much-needed rain. Yesterday's highest temperature was 87 degrees; to-day at noon the thermometer was at 90 degrees. The lowest temperature last night was 70 degrees. This is the highest night temperature we have had this summer.—W. P.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sir,—Why is it, Mr. Editor, that both the regimental band and the S. A. Temple band cannot complete the National Anthem at their concerts in the park.

Let's have all or nothing.

"GOD SAVE THE KING."

THE AMERICAN FARMER.

To The Editor of The Review.

To-day's Globe says there is a great throng of American farmers invading Western Ontario. They are taking up farms along Lake Erie. It is probable that this question will be a big one in Ontario before long. Are our Canadian farmers to be displaced? I believe the Canadian farmers to be the equal of American farmers but the American farmer seems to think he is not. The American farmer thinks so well of conditions for the farmer in Ontario that he is coming over to take advantage of it. Are our own farmers to be driven out? Is it a case of need or of better farming? The American farmer seems to think everything is in favor of our farmer and he is coming over to get a piece of it. We hope he wont get control.

Yours truly,

"INTERESTED."

NAILED THE WRONG MAN.

The Reporter Didn't Get an Interview, but Did Get a Story.

The late Representative Bingham of Philadelphia, who was for many years the "father of the house," served in congress with the late General Meyer, who for years represented a New Orleans district in the house. The two generals, one a Yankee, the other a Confederate, were not only good friends, but bore a strong resemblance to each other, each being short, chesty looking, nattily dressed and having a pink bald head.

One day the correspondent of a Philadelphia paper was called away from Washington and left a Baltimore man to do his work. The substitute received a telegram from Philadelphia to interview General Bingham on what congress would do with a bill, then pending, vitally affecting the Philadelphia mint.

Hurrying through Statuary hall, the "sub," who was new to Washington, ran into General Meyer. The Louisiana statesman was a little grouchy and when asked for an interview about the Philadelphia mint exploded. The reporter insisted.

"I don't care a —— about the Philadelphia mint, I tell you!" shouted General Meyer and tore himself away.

The story the correspondent sent to Philadelphia that night sizzled, and the Philadelphia paper the next morning on the front page heralded to the world how profanely indifferent to the Philadelphia mint General Bingham was. It took Bingham a month to square himself with his constituents. —New York World.

Umbrellas and Parasols.

Fashions change in umbrellas as well as in clothes. We find on visiting the London museum that George IV. used to carry a green silk umbrella fringed with gold and about twice as large as the umbrella of today. Parasols, too, have diminished in size since they first came into use. Henri Estienne, writing in 1578, speaks of a parasol as capable generally of sheltering four persons from the sun. And when they diminished in circumference the material remained of the heaviest. Red velvet parasols, with heavy gold fringes, were carried by ladies of fashion in the days of Louis XIV. At that time it was possible, when crossing a bridge in Paris, to hire a parasol at one end and deposit it at the other, the charge for the accommodation being a sou.—London Chronicle.

RUBE DENEAN AND HIS BUSY BEES HERE FOR FOUR GAMES

It has been ascertained that the League will not permit of two games being played on Friday, July 12, and the only fixture of the day will be called at 3.45 o'clock.

The Petes returned home this morning after an even break at Berlin, to open a four game series with the Busy Bees at Riverside this afternoon.

Yesterday's game went to the champions by 5-3, with Jimmie Beard twirling for the locals.

Weirdman and Weaver who were tried out, were released again. Both are promising looking youngsters.

Johnny Barthold has been resting up, the first sack being guarded by Manager Rowan. Should Barthold's arm return to form he may do some twirling.

The Berliners are strengthened considerably by new players, and the series for the remainder of the week should serve up some interesting baseball for the local fans. The Petes will fight to get out of the cellar, while the business of the visitors is to prevent their descent to the bottom honors of the League.

CRESSMANS' TEAM HAD QUARTET OF RUNS TO SPARE

The ball tossers of Cressman's Ltd., defeated a bunch picked from the dry goods stores, at Riverside Park last night. The score board read 19-15 at the close of the game, the balance in favor of Cressman's counter hoppers. The batteries are reported to have played a phenomenal game, whatever that means.

F. Cressman twirled for the winners and Halpin had difficulty in recognising some of the contortions of the pitched sphere.

White and Sharpe were the battery of the losers. Umpire "Fat" Ray, is said to have given some weird decisions, a la Cancella-Johnson, and it whispered that he will not again volunteer to place his person in danger on a ball field. Some of his awards were said to have been very much uncooked.

BREEZES FROM THE DIAMOND

London Free Press:—Gilhooly, the speedy shortstop of the Niagara University team, reported to Manager Bowerman yesterday and left with the team for Guelph to-day.

Blake has been released by Manager Bowmerman. Blake should be holding an indicator in the Canadian League. He has for the past two seasons been an umpire in the South Michigan League. From reports received about his work there he would prove a valuable man for the Canadian League.

CERVERA'S SUNKEN SHIPS.

Two battered masses of rusty iron rising out of the sea off the Cuban coast near the village of Juan Gonzales are memorials of the victory of the American fleet, under the command of Admiral Sampson, over the Spanish squadron, commanded by Admiral Cervera, in July, 1898. They are the remains of Admiral Cervera's flagship, the Viscaya, and the cruiser Almirante Oquendo.

After crossing the ocean on their disastrous voyage the Spanish warships, consisting of four fine cruisers and several torpedo boats, sought refuge in the harbor of Santiago. The imminent capture of that city by the American army under General Shafter compelled Admiral Cervera to make a desperate dash to escape with his ships, an attempt which was defeated by the skill of the gunners of the American ships. The Viscaya and the Oquendo sank after being shattered by shells and otherwise damaged by flames.

The project of raising them has been brought up several times, but abandoned, as the condition of the vessels makes them of little value. So for thirteen years the sea has been allowed to batter them. The portions of the vessels above the water are stained by the weather and encrusted with barnacles. The Viscaya still raises above the sea a turret from which a gun projects.—New York Sun.

The Next Great Tunnel.

Swiss engineers have convinced the Russian government that it is perfectly feasible to bore a tunnel through the Caucasian mountains near Tiflis in order to join the Black and Caspian seas. This will be a tremendous undertaking, as the tunnel will be about sixteen miles in length, and the Russian government had practically decided that it was beyond the limit of possibility. However, the Swiss experts have reported that the tunnel could be built within seven years without much difficulty, but at great expense. A Paris firm of bankers, it is understood, is supporting the enterprise, which will be put into execution about the early part of 1913 and with Swiss engineers in control.

Why Madge Declined Tea.

Madge, three years old, is of a positive nature and always ready with independent opinions. A woman visiting Madge's home sat next to the little girl at table and offered her a spoonful of her tea, which was declined with an emphatic shake of the head.

"I ain't dot no tummick ache," was the indignant reply. — Indianapolis News.

Monster Map of London.

A large map of London, which has been in course of preparation for seventeen years, is still incomplete, and it is expected that four years of work will be necessary to finish it. This map, which will be 580 feet square, will show practically every building in the 116 square miles that go to make up greater London. Already $85,000 has been spent on research and labor in connection with it, and the London county council, under whose direction it is being prepared, expects a further expenditure of $25,000 will be necessary.

Giving His Son His Own Way.

"The czar," says a French paper, "will not permit the least fault to be found with his son. 'My son,' he says, 'should know only absolute independence. That is the only education that is suitable for an emperor. They tell me that I am weak. This is because when I was little I did not dare to lift my finger without permission. I do not wish that my son should resemble me.'"

Bugle Calls In French Army.

In accordance with the minister of war's settled policy of reviving the military spirit in the ranks of the army as well as among the general public it has been decided to reintroduce the traditional "reveille" and "lights out" bugle calls, which were abolished a few years ago.—Paris Cor. London Times.

"I don't know."

Her Explanation of It.

"What are you laughing at?"

"Maud's letter. She writes that they had foggy weather all the way across."

"I don't see anything funny in that."

"No, but she adds that the captain must have neglected to take out clearing papers."—Boston Transcript.

REV. R. POGUE WAS APPOINTED MODERATOR

The regular meeting of the Presbytery of Peterborough was held in St. Paul's church, Port Hope, yesterday. The first matter dealt with was the election of a Moderator for the coming twelve months, and Rev. Robt. Pogue was appointed to serve in that capacity.

Among several things considered was a call extended by the Bellwood congregation to the Presbytery of Guelph, to Rev. D. D. McDonald, of Keene, Ont. A special meeting of the Presbytery was set for July 18th to deal with the call.

The committee on Church Union was enlarged, and in view of the recent activity of the General Assembly looking towards church union in the near future, they were authorized to continue work on the Basis of Union.

LITTLE LAD IS IN SERIOUS CONDITION

The Fire Brigade had a call to a pile of smouldering coals at the V at the junction of Park and Reid street. A line of hose was connected to a nearby hydrant and the burning mass thoroughly drenched to eliminate the possibility of its starting up again.

Chief Howard called to see the little boy who was severely burned at this point a few days ago. The little fellow is in a very critical condition owing to the serious nature of the burns he received and his recovery is merely a matter of conjecture.

HEAD OFFICE AT WINNIPEG

In connection with the transfer of the Head Office of the Union Bank of Canada from Quebec to Winnipeg, some matters of general interest are to be noted.

The Honorable John Sharples, who for some years past has so ably filled the chair of President, has found it necessary, owing to failing health, to relinquish the position. His resignation we understand was accepted by his co-Directors with the utmost regret, and to show their appreciation of the man and his service to the Bank, he was unanimously appointed Honorary President.

The position of President was filled by Mr. John Galt, of Winnipeg, and it is interesting to recall that his father, Sir A. T. Galt, was a former Vice-President of the Union Bank.

Mr. Wm. Price and Mr. R. T. Riley were elected Vice-Presidents of the Bank.

The vacancy on the Board of Directors caused by the death of Mr. E. J. Hale, was filled by the election of Lieut.-Colonel John Carson, of Montreal.

While the Bank has found it necessary through resignations and death to fill some vacancies on the Board, they are to be congratulated upon the calibre of the men they have chosen.

The transfer of the Head Office of this important Institution from Eastern Canada to Western Canada brings home to us very clearly the growing importance of the Western Provinces, and after all, it seems only natural that the Union Bank, with its two hundred and sixty-six Branches, one hundred and seventy of which are west of the Great Lakes, should have chosen Winnipeg as being the centre of its operations.

FINE CONCERT BY S. A. BAND

Varied Program Given to Appreciative Audience in Park

The Salvation Army Temple Band gave their weekly concert in Victoria Park, last night, to an audience that did not fail to show appreciation of what was a high class program. The music by this band is certainly winning popularity.

Included in the program was the vocal selection "Upward and Onward" by the male choir, a vocal solo with band accompaniment by Bandsman Moyns, and a quartet by Bandsmen Robinson, Ford, Merrett and Richardson, the tw cornets with the euphonium and tenor horn, blending clearly.

DELIVERY HORSE CUT BY SHAFT

A runaway occurred on Aylmer st. outside the Fire Station this morning. The horse attached to Innis' Express wagon, became frightened and bolted. In swerving across the road the shaft of the express wagon struck the horse of Bishop's wholesale delivery wagon, in the neck, and inflicted an ugly wound on the animal

The other horse was caught, no further damage being caused.

SOME NEW LAUNCHES PLYING IN THE OTONABEE

As the placid old Otonabee rolls everlastingly on his ancient bed, by his bays, through his winds and turns, he no doubt feels, cutting, twisting and curving his waters a number of new launches, which he has no cause to be ashamed of. Maybe he notices Mr. Bert Hunt's new launch, "The Witch," thrusting aside the waters at about 15 miles an hour.

It may be that it is Mr. Jack Mehanry's launch the "Trixie" that causes all the commotion on the river banks as she scoots down the river leaving ten miles behind her in the 60 minutes.

Messrs. Oke, Baker and McClelland each have a new motor boat on the river. Mr. G. N. Osborne and Mr. Chris. Wood have new "water witches" of 7 and 8 miles speed respectively. Another snug little boat is that of Mr. Painter's, "The Hazel," as is also E. L. Payne's, having a rate of 10 miles per hour.

But it remains for Mr. McKenzie to give those large fish in the river a tight race with a speed of 16 miles per hour to reckon with. It may be that our old Otonabee will give a deep sigh of regret as the landmark of the river the "Rob Roy," leaves for the upper lakes. This boat, which was the summer home of the late Mr. R. M. Roy was sold to Mr. Lydes Windover, a lumberman, who intends to use it at the head waters of the Kawartha system.

ANNUAL PICNIC AT TARA GROVE VERY SUCCESSFUL

Good Time Provided for the Large Crowd—Sports and Speeches.

It is a safe bet that Ennismore folk enjoy no event of the year more than their annual picnic in Tara Grove. The success of yesterday's outing was but another evidence of it. "Breathes there a man with soul so dead," who would not take the day off, hitch up, and drive to the picnicking spot. If so Ennismore does not appreciate his spirit. But the "biled" shirt and the venerable whisker were much in evidence yesterday. Old timers were there who wouldn't miss the picnic on any account. Pretty maidens and bashful swains were well represented.

The old dancing pavilion was crowded, and the strains of the squeaky fiddle, and the nasal tones of the master of ceremonies rang out, as they have in years gone by. The eyes of old men brightened as they gazed upon the scene of gayety, and their thoughts flew back to younger days.

The fun commenced very early. The crowd began gathering as early as seven and eight o'clock in the morning. Booths were quickly stocked with all the dry weather requisites. Rigs, democrats and automobiles filed into the grounds. Soon the grove resembled a big camp, horses tethered everywhere, contentedly munching the green grass. The clearing re-echoed with laughter and talk, and the eagerly anticipated day of pleasure was assured of success. In the afternoon the crowds continued to pour in, including a large contingent from Peterborough. The Carey Moher Motor Company brought several loads from the city. One auto party was seen peacefully seated on the road-side on the route out, engaged in observing the chauffeur replace a punctured tire. The explosion was heard at nearly half a mile distant.

The sporting program was run off under Mr. Will O'Brien's direction. "Mike" O'Brien was again in the limelight, annexing several of the prizes.

PRIZE WINNERS.

Putting the shot—1, P J O'Reilly, 34 ft. 4 in; 2, A Crough

Standing broad jump—1, M O'Brien, 10 feet; 2, D Begley.

Running broad jump—1, M O'Brien, 16 ft. 10 in.; 2, W O'Brien.

Standing hop, step and jump—1, M O'Brien, 25 ft. 7 in.; 2, P Perdue.

Running hop, step and jump—1, E Mortha, 36 ft, 2 in.; 2, P Perdue.

After the sports were over the crowds scattered and participated in the various amusements on the grounds.

THE SPEECHES.

Soon after the speeches commenced, The platform contained Father McGuire, of Downeyville, who officiated as chairman. Right here let it be said that Father McGuire was the right man in the right place. Wit and repartee sprung from him like water from a mountain stream. Father McGuire by his witty introductions of the speakers kept his hearers laughing all the time. The others on the improvised platform were James Kendry, ex-M.P., E. A. Peck, M.P.P., Hon. J. R. Stratton, R. R. Hall, Harry Phelan, Ald. G. N. Gordon and Father Fitzpatrick, rector of St. Martin's, Ennismore.

Ex-Ald. Harry Phelan, the first speaker, said that he didn't come to make a speech. He wished the Ennismore folk all kinds of success.

Ald. G. N Gordon was introduced next as the man who tries to keep Peterborough clean. Mr. Gordon explained that although it was his first appearance before an Ennismore gathering, he recognized the great success which the parish had attained under Father Fitzpatrick's guidance. He also eulogized the rector for the great and good work that he was doing in the community, and the efforts that were being exerted to make Ennismore a brighter and better parish than it even was at present.

R. R. Hall was next called. He was well received. After extending congratulations to all present, he referred to the efforts that were being made to secure Home Rule for Ireland.

E. A. Peck, M.P.P., was received with applause. Although, like Mr. Gordon, it was his first appearance at an Ennismore picnic, he had decided that it would not be his last. Several striking things in regard to Ennismore had been drawn to his attention. One was that Ennismore should, owing to its location, be divided so much from Peterborough, although this had been overcome by the building of the Chemong bridge.

Another good thing about Ennismore was that it was a poor township for a lawyer. It was a law-abiding locality and was almost entirely free from litigation proceedings.

James Kendry, who was the succeeding speaker, made a very neat and appropriate address. He brought sincere greetings to the Ennismore people and wished them all success. Next year he hoped to do himself the honor and to have the honor of being present at the picnic again.

Hon J. R. Stratton, the next speaker, was warmly greeted when called upon. Mr. Stratton said that he had been attending Ennismore picnic for the last thirty years. The picnics were a valuable means of promoting good fellowship and friendship in the community.

Father Fitzpatrick concluded the speeches by thanking all present for their work in connection with the picnic, and the speakers who, regardless of denomination, had attended to do honor to the occasion.

Cheers for the various men on the platform and for the King concluded the program.

A splendid supper was supplied, all arrangements being supervised by the T.A.S. committee of St. Martin's

NEWS FROM OMEMEE

Special Correspondence

Omemee, July 9.—In the Township of Emily the death occurred on Friday afternoon, 5th inst., of Prudence Fee, relict of the late John Widdis in her 79th year. For the last 6 years of her life she had been a great sufferer from rheumatism but maintained a bright and cheerful spirit throughout her illness. She had been a member of the Methodist church from her girlhood. The deceased was a retiring woman who loved her home and her family more than all other earthly treasures, and whose truth and honest friendship was recognized and esteemed by all her acquaintances. She leaves a family of 4 sons and one daughter, as follows:—Wesley, of Merlin; Henry, of the Hydro-Electric Co.; Fred, of Victoria Road; Jeffrey at home, and Mrs. George Henderson, of Omemee. Besides these she is survived by six brothers and three half sisters, the latter being, Mrs. T. H. McQuade and Mrs. James Evans, of Omemee, and Mrs. George Endicott, of Lake Valley, New Mexico. The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon from her late home and a large concourse of people paid their last respects to a noble woman. Interment took place at Emily Cemetery. Warmest condolences are extended to the bereaved.

The announcement of the promotions of Senior Third and Senior Second await the approval of the inspector.

On Thursday an electrical storm broke over the village and the current played tricks with some of the dwellings, three being struck. The chimneys were demolished and one house set on fire, but the flames were quickly extinguished. There was a heavy rainfall and the gardens, which had suffered from long drought, absorbed the moisture with avidity.

Late hours account for a lot of premature wrinkles.

The local Orangemen are busily engaged erecting a speakers' platform and booths for refreshments in Mr. Elliott's Grove, east of the village, for the accommodation of the speakers and also of the mammoth crowd that will doubtless throng the grounds on Friday, July 12th. It is expected that some twelve or fifteen lodges will take part in the parade and these, with other visitors will have to be looked after and entertained. In the evening the Church of England will give a grand concert in the Town Hall.

On Monday evening, one of the Bell Telephone line men climbed the 50ft. flag pole in front of the town hall, and attached the rope which had become detached. Quite a number of people witnessed the feat and said it was as good as a circus. The pole is not more than eight or nine inches through at the base, and about three inches through at the top, and he went up so steadily that the pole scarcely could be seen to sway at all.

What is the matter with the Norwood Band? The summer has half gone and we have had no open air concerts yet.

The Norwood Voters' List for 1912 is in the hands of the printer, and will be ready in a few days.

The residence of the late Mr. John Burkell has been sold to Mr. Darling of Roseneath at the very moderate price of $1300.

CANADA WANTS SHARE IN DEFENCE SAYS BORDEN

Canadian Prime Minister Gets a Great Ovation From the Colonial Institute and In a History-Making Speech Declares That the Dominion Will Share Burden But Must Have a Voice In Policy of Empire.

London, July 11.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Hon. R. L. Borden made an historic first speech last night at a record-breaking gathering at the Royal Colonial Institute. The company, numbering 270 representatives of every part of the Empire, measured the dignity of Hon. Mr. Borden's enunciation of the Canadian policy, which deeply impressed the many British Parliamentarians present. When, he pronounced emphatically that Canada stood for one King, one flag, one Empire and one navy, the cheering was vociferous. The long continued applause was renewed when Hon. Mr. Borden added that no jot of Canada's dearly won autonomy need be or should be sacrificed.

Perhaps the two most impressive passages of his speech were a tribute to French-Canadian loyalty. He wished to say that there were no better, worthier, more loyal subjects of his Majesty than those who were represented by his colleague, Hon. Mr. Pelletier. (Loud and prolonged cheers.) This was immediately followed by a declaration that the supremacy of the navy on the seas is the very breath of life of the British Empire, and, as regards both immediate co-operation to meet the present emergency, and a permanent basis of partnership in defence, it was enough for the present to say that the Canadian people came of races who had never failed to realize and act upon a deep sense of their responsibilities to the English public.

Men of long experience, who were present, agree that no more remarkable demonstration ever greeted a colonial Premier in this country than the one when, at the conclusion of his introductory remarks, the chairman of the institute made way for Hon. Mr. Borden. Many British M.P.'s of both parties were present, and about 80 Canadians, among whom was a fair sprinkling of Liberals. Mrs. Borden, Mrs. Pelletier and Mrs. Doherty were among the ladies in the gallery after the banquet, and both Mr. and Mrs. Borden were the centre of congratulations by friends.

Lieut.-Gen. Sir Bevan Enwares was presiding. Amongst those attending were the Duke of Argyle, Lord Strathcona, Earl Brassey, Earl Stanhope, Admiral Bowden-Smith, Earl Onslow, Lord Cowdray, Sir Hartman Just, all the Canadian Ministers with the exception of Hon. J. D. Hazen, Rear-Admiral Kingsmill, Brenton McNab, Sir Joseph Pope, Sir Charles Rose, Norton Griffiths, M.P., and Hamar Greenwood, M.P.

Responding to the toast, "Our Guests," Hon. Mr. Borden dealt with the important questions.

"We have come," he said, "by the mandate of the Canadien people to discuss some matters of great Imperial concern. In advance of the discussion it is not to be expected that I should make to-night any announcement as to our co-operation in naval defence, but one or two declarations which were made many times in Canada may, perhaps, be repeated with advantage.

"It is a trite saying that the naval supremacy of the Empire is the very breath of its life, without which it cannot possibly endure. It has also seemed to us that this supremacy can only be maintained by one united navy. Our ideal is one King, one flag and Empire and one navy, powerful in a day of stress or of peril to vindicate the flag and maintain the Empire's existence.

"There are two considerations before us. The first touches the possible immediate gravity of existing conditions; the other touches the more difficult and more complex question of permanent co-operation in the Empire's defence upon the high seas. The second of these considerations raises in concerete form the question of the future constitution and organisation of the Empire.

"It is sufficient for the moment to emphasise our view that any great dominion undertaking to share upon a permanent basis in the sea defence of the Empire must have some voice in the policy which shapes the issues of war or peace. Canada does not purpose to be merely an adjunct even of the British Empire. She faces the future to-day with a proud spirit, conscious of her ability to solve them. Watchful and prudent of her resources, she is determined they shall be developed in the interest of her people. Mindful of her opportunities and her responsibilities, she is resolved to play her full part in maintaining the unity of the Empire, in promoting its influence for the cause of civilization and humanity and for peace among nations."

King Descends Mine.

New York, July 11.—A cable to The New York Times yesterday from London says: Notwithstanding the explosion in the Cadeby colliery in Yorkshire, which cost probably eighty lives, King George carried out his plan to descend into a coal mine at Elhecar, near the Cadeby mine, and see for himself the conditions in which his miner subjects work. A Daily Mail correspondent, who accompanied the royal party, says:

"When the news of the Cadeby disaster became known it was feared that His Majesty would postpone his descent, but the King waived all objections aside. His determination was fully appreciated by the miners. As the cage descended the surface men gathered at the pit-head and raised a vociferous cheer.

"After penetrating a considerable distance underground the King borrowed a pick and struck several blows, bringing down a rush of coal. He carried away a piece as a souvenir."

Berlin, July 11.—The new city is preparing for a genuine celebration to commemorate its rise to urban rank. From July 15 to July 20 there will be high carnival, July 17 being set aside for particular cityhood festivities.

SIR DONALD AND THE NAVY

Suggestions as to What Canada Should Do.

Victoria, B.C., July 11.—An interesting contribution to the discussion on what part Canada should take in naval defence developed in the course of an interview with Sir Donald Mann here.

Sir Donald would have Canada make an immediate grant for the construction of a number of vessels, while for a permanent policy Canada, he says, should proceed to create fleet units to be stationed on the Atlantic and Pacific at the call of the Admiralty. The construction of dry docks on both coasts, together with the establishment of steel shipbuilding industries, should go hand in hand with the creation of these fleet units so that, eventually, the vessels comprising these shall be built in Canada.

His third suggestion that Canada may have a choice in the Imperial councils, is to make the Imperial conference a permanent organization. The personnel of such a body should, he considers, be always resident in London, ready to advise oversea Parliaments.

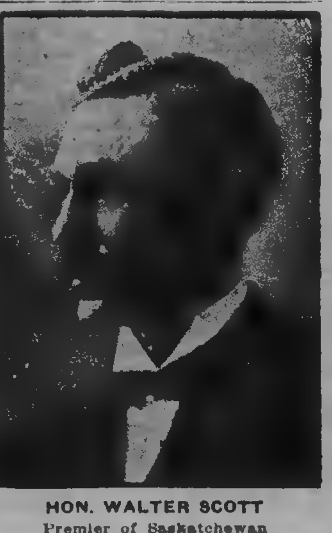
FORECAST ON ELECTIONS TO-DAY IN SASKATCHEWAN

Some Districts Report Trouble But No Violence—Workers on Both Sides Arrested—Conservatives Claim Majority of Ten for Haultain

Special to the Review.

Regina, July 11.—Election day opened this morning bright and with a clear sky. At the headquarters of both parties here reports from outside districts showed much trouble, but no violence. There were charges and counter charges of fraud, and a number of workers on both sides have been arrested. The lowest estimate of the Liberals give Scott a majority of ten. The Conservatives claim Haultain will have ten of a majority. The indications are that the vote will be so close in many constituencies as to require an official recount.

One of the fiercest and most bitter poltiical campaigns ever held in the Dominion of Canada has been in progress for over a month in Saskatchewan, and will be decided to-day in the election of members of the Legislature in that province. Fears have been entertanied that there will be violence and bloodshed at the polls, and indeed more than one leading paper has counseled the clubbing of any man who essays to interfere in any way with the rights of the electors.

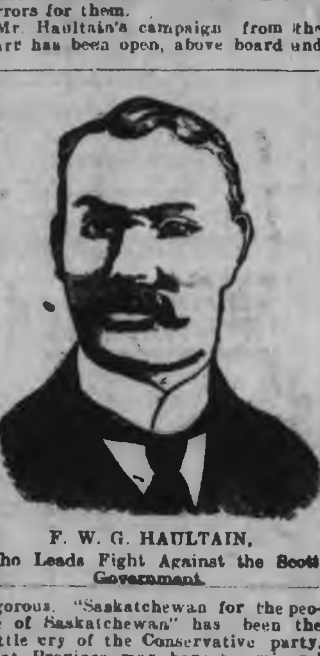


HON. WALTER SCOTT
Premier of Saskatchewan

Premier Walter Scott is the leader of the Liberal party, while the Oppositionists are followers of Mr. Haultain. The latter has all along made his fight squarely on purely political issues and has assailed the record of the party now in power. Premier Scott handed over to the Laurier administration the control of the resources of his province, but with the defeat of that Government he has experienced a change of faith, and now believes that the land question should be handled by the Provincial Legislature and not by the Federal authorities. With him it makes all the difference who is in power at Ottawa.

With a view to diverting public attention from the record of his government and from local questions, Mr. Scott has made Reciprocity a leading issue in this campaign in spite of the disclosures which have been made since the last Dominion election as to how that agreement was regarded by the Americans who were prominent in its promotion. A majority of the Saskatchewan voters were in favor of reciprocity last September and Premier Scott evidently believes that they have not changed their minds, and that the position of "adjunct" to the United States has no terrors for them.

Mr. Haultain's campaign from the start has been open, above board and



F. W. G. HAULTAIN,

vigorous. "Saskatchewan for the people of Saskatchewan" has been the battle cry of the Conservative party. That Province may have no mineral or timber wealth, but it has some of the finest land in the West, and the income from the original sale of these lands should go to the treasury of Saskatchewan. Mr. Scott has never done anything for the farmer. Although he has pledged the credit of his province to grant aid for railways he has never lifted a finger to secure lower freight rates for the grain growers.

To-day's election is the first one at which the Saskatchewan electors have voted from a printed list. The Conservatives claim that in the preparation of these lists the names of leading voters have been omitted, so that a serious percentage of the Conservative electors have become disfranchised. And if a man's name has been left off the list, no provision has been made for his swearing in his vote. Men who have voted from the time of the first election, and whose names do not appear on the new lists, declare they will do so at all hazard. hence the fear that the election to-day will be marked by rioting, or worse.

In spite of the odds against which they fight, the Haultain party is hopeful of victory. Premier Scott has issued one last appeal for support, with "wider markets" as his leading theme, but there is a swan-like ring about his latest cry which seems to portend defeat for the Liberal party.

THE DEADLY EXPLOSION

Special To The Review.

Pittsburg, Pa., July 11.—Eight men are reported to have been killed by an explosion in the Pamana Mine at Moundsville, W. Va., this morning. A rescue car and a crew from Pictairn, Pa., have been ordered to the scene of the accident. Two men have already been taken out so badly burned, that it is feared they cannot live.

ROWELL AT BELLEVILLE

He Invites the Conservatives to Assist Him.

Belleville, July 11.—A strong appeal to Conservatives to unite with Liberals in the campaign to abolish the bars was made by N. W. Rowell, K.C., at a meeting in Victoria Park yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of the 20th Century Club. There were about 800 present.

Mr. Rowell also attacked the liquor licenses in clubs, and claimed there was too much political influence in connection with the whole liquor business.

"We have a unique opportunity in this Province to-day," said Mr. Rowell. "If the people who believe that the bar should go will unite to do that, if Conservatives will say to Sir James Whitney, 'You must choose between the bar and our support,' both parties will unite at the next session of the Legislature and forever wipe out the licensed bar in this province.

"It matters little," said he, "whether Sir James Whitney abolishes the bar or I abolish the bar; the important issue is whether the bar shall go."

Owing to the limits of provincial jurisdiction, he said that any possible temperance reform would have to be less than prohibition. "By the abolition of the bar we mean the bar room, the room behind the bar, the entire sale of liquor in hotels, the complete divorcement of the sale of liquor from the business of keeping a house of public entertainment. Recognized by law, the bar was a social institution. 'By their fruits ye shall know them,'" he declared. "Conservatives are just as much interested in the future welfare of this province as Liberals."

It was impracticable, Mr. Rowell went on, to make a distinction between the bar and the club, so the club would have to go with the bar.

M. S. Madole, K.C., of Napanee, was chairman. Other speakers were: S. Clarke, M.P.P. for West Northumberland; Mr. Sinclair, M.P.P. for South Ontario; Mr. Munro, M.P.P. for Glengarry, and Racine, M.P.P. for Russell.

TORONTO WAS VISITED BY ELECTRICAL DISTURBANCE

Considerable Damage Is Done In and Around Toronto by Gale and Rain But Temperature Is Lower—Belleville Man Stunned by Lightning—Four Deaths From Heat Are Recorded In Montreal.

Toronto, July 11.—Relief from the sweltering heat, which has prevailed throughout Ontario for the past few days, came yesterday in many districts in the form of rain, wind and electrical disturbances which cooled the atmosphere, but did considerable damage. Between heat fatalities and storm accidents the province had an eventful day.

The Toronto street railway service and many industries were crippled because of a break which occurred in the transmission line of the Electrical Development Co. between here and Niagara. Lightning did the damage in this case, as in the one of last Friday night.

Damage of various degrees and descriptions was created in, around and about Toronto Bay and the Island. A number of boats were capsized, tents blown over and the Reiffin hydroaeroplane was slightly damaged and narrowly escaped destruction in the storm.

Three of the larger motorboats cruised up and down the bay when the second blow came, picking the people off the smaller craft.

Two victims of the heat were treated at St. Michael's Hospital. Wallace Keyes, who lives on Bathurst street, was picked up at the corner of Richmond and Yonge street, at 10.30 a.m., having been prostrated by the sun. Another young man, who works in Nasmith's, Bay street, collapsed in the afternoon, when the fans were not working, owing to the power being off.

Struck Senseless by Lightning.

Belleville, July 11.—During a thunderstorm Tuesday evening in Madoc Township, Mr. Charles Conley's residence was struck by lightning, and a large hole was torn in the roof. The bolt descended into the sitting room and struck a chair upon which Miss Conley was sitting. The chair was broken to pieces and Miss Conley was rendered unconscious by the shock, remaining in that condition for some hours.

Severe Storms In London.

London, Ont., July 11.—The heat wave of the last two weeks was broken yesterday when a terrific downpour of rain, accompanied by thunder and lightning, fell over this city.

The mercury dropped suddenly. Prior to the rainfall a severe windstorm swept across the city for a few minutes, but no damage was done.

Niagara Power House Shut Down.

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 11.—Trolleys on the main line of the Niagara Central between here and St. Catharines, were tied up several hours yesterday afternoon, when the Toronto-Niagara power house shut down. The power company was forced to suspend operations for a time because of damage done by a severe electric storm. The power house suffered little, officials say.

William Doran, father of Wm. T. Doran, Victoria Park Commissioner, and Charles J. Doran, both prominent Niagara Falls manufacturers also Joseph O. Doran of Buffalo, died suddenly at one o'clock yesterday afternoon at the Rosli Hotel, where he lived. Death was due to heart failure superinduced by the heat.

Four Succumb to Heat.

Montreal, June 11.—There was no relief from the extreme heat yesterday. Four deaths occurred, besides six serious cases of prostration and numerous minor ones.

Yesterday's victims of the heat are all men. They are: Ernest Dupius, aged 60; Bernard King, aged 38; Alfred Bonnet, aged 32, and John Fernand, aged 52.

TWO WERE DROWNED

Special to the Review.

Sorel, Que., July 11.—While endeavoring to change from a row boat in which they were riding, to a raft, Mrs. Adelard Chevrier and her brother-in-law, Felix Chevrier, were drowned this morning. The woman's husband, who was on the raft, was saved.

The fellow who talks about the depths of his love seldom elaborates on the length of it.

LIVES OF TWO GIRLS ARE SAVED BY GALLANT ACTION

Special To The Review.

Toronto, Ont., July 11.—By crawling out on a narrow strip of piling for a hundred and fifty feet in the face of a sixty mile an hour gale yesterday afternoon, Walter Pearse succeeding in rescuing two girls named Cariette, who were overtaken by the storm while in a punt on Ashbridges Bay. He caught one of the girls before she sank, after the punt capsized and grasped the other by the hair as her head showed in the trough of the sea, after the water had closed over her. All clung to timbers with waves breaking over them for twenty minutes until storm subsided and they were taken off in a row boat.

MARITIME EXPRESS JUMPS TRACK AT GRAND LAKE

Two Trainmen and an Unknown Tramp, Who Was Stealing a Ride, Perish In Disaster on the Intercolonial near Halifax—About Forty Persons Suffer Injuries—Two Cars Roll Down Into the Lake.

Halifax, July 11.—Three men killed and two score injured is the toll of one of the most disastrous wrecks in the history of the I.C.R. Railway.

The maritime express was derailed and smashed up at Grand Lake station yesterday afternoon and piled up on both sides of the track, the engine and express and mail cars taking a plunge down into the lake and the mail and baggage cars piling up at right angles; the first leaping to the main road above and the second swinging at a dangerous angle over the bank. In the big locomotive were James Clark and Fireman Peter McGill of Halifax, who went to their deaths, Clark being found in the cab of his engine crushed and scalded and his skull crushed in. Fireman McGill's body has not been found, and it is presumed that he is under the engine in Grand Lake.

A tramp who was riding the blind baggage, lies on the roadside dead, his body crushed and mangled. He had been put off at Shubenacadie and circled around as the train started, regaining his position on the blind baggage.

The locomotive lies in a reversed position at the foot of the embankment almost submerged, having taken a complete turnover. The mail and express car lies on top of the engine, trucks in the air, with the roof crushed in. A little further up and hanging from the main line head downward to the lake, is the baggage car, from which Andrew McKim was taken seriously hurt, cut in the head and over the eyes and suffering greatly from shock. The express messenger was badly cut, and his arm and thumb broken. Thomas Keith, postal clerk of Halifax, was hurt, and a commercial traveler was seriously injured. He had just opened his sample case in the baggage car when the disaster occurred.

The roadbed resembles a plowed field, rails being torn up and bent in every conceivable fashion, and it will require some eight or ten hours to permit the passage of trains.

The passengers in the second and first class cars and the Pullman car received a shaking up, but escaped serious injury.

Farmers' Bank Enquiry.

Toronto, July 11.—It has been definitely announced that the Farmers' Bank enquiry will resume at Toronto on July 16th, when the investigation of Mr. Travers' statements regarding Mr. Peter Ryan will be searchingly made. It is intended to have a session at Ottawa on July 17 or 18. Mr. Peter Ryan has been notified to this effect.

Killed by Street Car.

London, Ont., July 11.—William Thomas, a middle-aged single man, an employe of the Street Railway Co., was instantly killed at noon yesterday when he stepped from one car into the path of another.

TRAIN ROBBERS WERE FOULED

Parsons, Kansas, July 11—Missouri, Kansas and Texas passenger train No. 9, known as the "Katy Limited," which left here at 10 o'clock Tuesday night, was held up by six masked men near Coffeyville, Kansas, early yesterday according to a report received at local headquarters.

The bandits held the train two hours, during which time the passengers and trainmen were corralled and guarded in the coaches by two robbers, while the others made unsuccessful attempts to blow open the safe in the baggage car.

They exploded nine charges of dynamite in their attempt to blow open the express safe. No effort was made to rob the passengers, and no one was injured.

Montreal Girl and Escort Held up by Foreigners

Special to the Review.

Montreal, July 11—Thos. Finn, of Bluebonnets and Miss Grace Brown Montreal, were held up by five foreigners, one armed with a shot gun and two others with revolvers, last night on Sherbrooke street. Two of the men stood guard over Finn, while the others dragged Miss Brown to a shanty. The latter's screams attracted the attention of two men in an auto, who arrived on the scene and the ruffians, becoming alarmed, made a hasty get away.

RESIDENCE AND THE FRANCHISE

One feature of the Electoral Reform Bill, introduced in the British House of Commons, is that an elector who moved from one constituency to another, retains his right to vote in his old constituency, until he has qualified in his new one. This is another suggestion for legislation that Canada might take from the Old Land. Every election, many men are disqualified because they have moved a few miles, and by so doing have made homes in other constituencies. A change of residence of that kind should not deprive a man of his rights as a citizen. A man who moves across the Otonabee river from Otonabee to North Monaghan, or from North Monaghan to Otonabee, is none the less a Canadian citizen, yet, by such a change of his home, if made shortly before an election, he might not be able to vote in either township, and lose his right to have a voice in the selection of a representative in the Legislature or of the House of Commons. This appears to be a feature of our law that might reasonably be amended.

THE CHURCH AND THE LAW

A decision of the House of Lords that a man who had married his deceased wife's sister could not be refused admission to Holy Communion in the Church of England has caused considerable discussion on both sides of the Atlantic. This decision is in some quarters taken to mean that Parliament controls the church's doctrine and law, and that one who obeys the national law must be accepted as a good churchman. It is questionable if the decision goes as far as that. If it does there will no doubt be strenuous efforts made for Parliamentary action to remove such control. Ecclesiastical law cannot override national law or make rules for the state, but it would seem to be going to the other extreme for the national government to revise or make church rules.

If there is no rule in the church that would exclude a member of the Church of England from Holy Communion because he had married his deceased wife's sister, then the law would uphold him in his right to be admitted to the rite. The vicar whose action caused the appeal to the courts appears to have relied upon the rule that "open and notorious evil livers" should be excluded, and the courts have held that a couple who are married in accordance with the law of the land are not "open and notorious evil livers" and consequently do not come within that rule.

If a church or its officers, as in the case of any society or association, attempts to deprive a member of his rights in the church or association, he can appeal to the courts to remedy the injustice. But the state does not attempt to make rules for a church, and should not. If a Methodist church wishes to make a rule that a person who dances cannot be a member, it can do so, although dancing is not illegal, and a church can if it wishes exclude from membership a person who engages in a business which it condemns although the person may hold a legal permit authorising him to carry on the business. But if a person is excommunicated contrary to the rules of the body he can have the wrong made right by the courts. If the decision in the case referred to means more than this—if it establishes that the state makes rules for the church and that state law is church law in the Church of England, there can be no doubt that the situation will lead to an agitation for a change.

NOTE AND COMMENT

In the English papers there is a discussion as to whether a twin ever becomes famous. Some twins do. The Siamese twins for instance.

An international conference for drawing up measures of safety for sea-going vessels, is to be held later in this year in London. It required a great disaster to bring this about but it is satisfactory to know that the nations are going to provide measures to prevent the recurrence of such a calamity.

HIS ONE HUNDREDTH BIRTHDAY

On Thursday, July 18, Mr. Robert Hope of Villiers, will have rounded out a century. One hundred years is a long span, and it is granted to but few men in these latter days to reach this ripe old age. Mr. Hope has spent nearly all his life in Otonabee, where he is well known and generally esteemed, and his friends are planning a little demonstration, which will take the form of a recognition of his attaining the honored age of one hundred years, and it will also be an evidence of respect in which he is held by all those who know him.

Mr. Hope's years have been fruitful. With the passing decades he made new friends and retained the old. His is the character that remained true. Quiet, unassuming, speaking ill of no one, always kindly and considerate, Mr. Hope has proved himself a good citizen and neighbour, practically in the Scriptural sense of the word.

On his birthday, July 18th, his friends propose to gather at his home about three o'clock in the afternoon, bringing their own lunches. They will have supper there and remain until after seven. The program is quite general, and the principal fact is the desire of many to pay this little tribute to one whom they esteem most highly and whom they consider worthy of the regard of everybody. It is hoped by those planning the affair that there will be a large attendance of neighbors and people from the countryside. A number are going from Peterborough and during the evening there will be a number of speeches. It will be seen that the whole affair is simple, but it is expected that its very simplicity will make it the more emphatic.

Mr. Hope has never married, but this fact did not narrow his interests to him. The welfare of his neighbors was always a concern.

In this recognition that is planned for him an opportunity will be presented to all who know him to pay a little tribute to one who not only has lived one hundred years, but who has lived them well.

It is felt that no invitations are required for the affair, and it is hoped that there will be a large number present.

TERRIFIED THE SHAH.

The Persian Monarch Suddenly Lost All Interest in Radium.

Radium, most mysterious of the new mysteries in modern science, is so little familiar to unscientific men that the panic of the oriental potentate described in a recent book by M. Xavier Paoli, a French detective, is easily understood.

Once while in Paris the shah of Persia, Muzaffar-ed-din, expressed a wish to know something of Professor Curie's famous discovery. M. Paoli made the necessary arrangements. Complete darkness is of course needed if radium is to reveal itself in all its brilliancy. With endless trouble Paoli persuaded the monarch to descend into one of the hotel cellars that had been arranged for the purpose.

But at length his majesty, with all his suit, proceeded to the underground apartment. Professor Curie closed the door, switched off the electric light and uncovered his specimen of radium. Suddenly a shout of terror between the roar of a bull and the yell of a man being murdered rang out and was echoed by a hundred others.

"Amid general excitement and consternation," writes M. Paoli, "we flung ourselves upon the electric switches and turned on the lights.

"Then we beheld a strange spectacle. In the midst of the prostrate Persians, with his arms around the neck of the grand vizier and his round pupils dilated to their very rims, stood the shah, shouting at the top of his voice in Persian:

"'Come away! Come away!'

"The switching on of the light calmed his mad terror as if by magic. Realising the disappointment and chagrin he had caused M. Curie, the shah tried to compensate him by the offer of a decoration. But the austere man of science," concludes Paoli, "thought fit to decline it."

Von Kubelik's press agent was awarded $750 in a London court for the violinist's failure to perform at a benefit concert.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, July 10.—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending July 6, were 1850 cattle, 1400 sheep and lambs, 1650 hogs and 1700 calves. The offerings on the market to-day for sale amounted to 700 cattle, 800 sheep and lambs, 850 hogs and 700 calves.

Owing to the continued exceedingly hot weather prevailing the trade in cattle today was slow, as buyers showed no disposition to operate freely, consequently the market was dull with an easier undertone, as the supply was far in excess of the requirements. The top price realised for the best steers on the market was $7 and the lower grades sold from that down to $5 per cwt. The demand for butchers' cows was slow and prices ranged from $3.50 to $5.50 per cwt. The quality of the bulls offered was generally common and sales of such were made at $3 to $3.50 per cwt.

A fair trade was done in sheep and lambs and as the supply was not large, a firmer feeling prevailed in the market and better prices were realized, with sales of sheep at $4 to $4.50 per cwt., and lambs at $5 to $6.25 each. The demand for calves was fair and sales were made at prices ranging from $3 to $10 each.

The tone of the market for hogs was steady, owing to the smaller offerings and sales of selected lots were made at $8.40 to $8.65 and mixed lots as low as $8.25 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

Salted Telegraph Poles.

Soaking telegraph poles in brine for three or four months, in which time the wood absorbs 70 to 100 per cent of its weight of salt solution, is a Russian method of greatly increasing durability. It is said to have been discovered accidentally many years ago from the effects of a few pounds of salt buried in the ground near a telegraph pole.

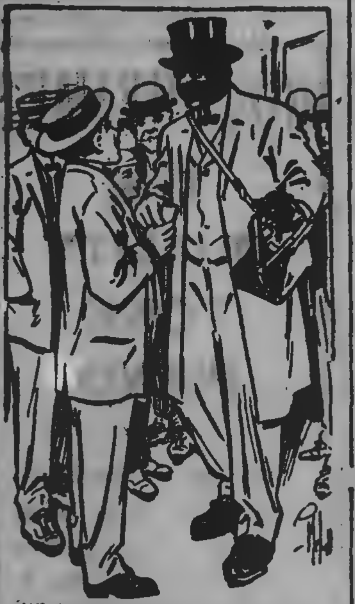
Was Aguilar in the employ of Yasimoto, with whom he had been closely connected back in Washington? Was he now an emissary of Baron Zollern?



HE THRUST A COUPLE OF CARDS INTO BROCKETT'S HANDS.

Or was he pursuing a policy of private, personal revenge, of vengeance for the thrashing the boys had given him only a few days before?

Solano, whose Spanish relatives had told him much of the Philippines and the brown, treacherous Tagalogs, was positive that Aguilar was following his own road, fighting for his own hand, and trying only to get even for the beating he bad sustained. "A Tagal," argued Ramon, "would forget his employer, his position, everything else on earth, to follow an enemy to the bitter end. That little devil, from the moment we laid hands on him, forgot Yasimoto, Zollern and his own people's cause. All he thought of, from that time to this, was getting even. He may have been trailing us right along, on his own hook. He may have crossed our trail last night by sheer chance, and at once tried to take advantage of the opportunity. He may possibly have been with either Zollern or Yasimoto, allowing them to pay his way around the country, but he wasn't thinking for a single minute of their interests—all that he hoped and dreamed about was his personal revenge."

"I figure it just a little differently," answered Brockett. "I think that he has remained in the employ of one of the two spies—more likely Yasimoto, as two Asiatics would more probably stick together than one Asiatic and a German. Yasimoto, as I see it, followed us on behalf of the Jap; but when he actually got in the same car with us his vengeful spirit was too much for him, and he stabbed me—as he believed—before he could hold back his hand. On calmer afterthought, he must have been utterly embarrassed and unnerved at his deed, and at the light in which he would now appear to Yazimoto. How can he ever make good to the Jap? How can he explain his failure to steal the documents he was after, and make excuses for letting his temper take him outside the path of his duty?"

"Good logic," dissented Solano, "but it doesn't fit in with what I have heard of Filipinos in general, and Tagalogs in particular. Anyhow, we will have to add Mr. Aguilar to our list of special dangers, and watch out for him a little more carefully than for either of the others. One thing sure—he'll take you for a ghost if we meet him anywhere, and we ought to gather him in without much trouble before he can recover from the shock."

Throughout the day that followed the youngsters kept sharp lookout for trouble, but were agreeably disappointed. No burly and boisterous Germans swooped upon them; no Filipino daggers glittered in the surging crowds, and none of the numerous little Japanese gentlemen whom they encountered during the day resembled Mr. Yazimoto except in size and color. They went ecstatic during the afternoon over Comiskey's new ball park, a veritable paradise of the fans, and even enjoyed the treat of a short conversation with the Old Roman himself as he held court among the faithful "bugs." Not till late in the evening did the sights and sounds of the city pall upon them, and they began to dimly remember that they had enjoyed but little sleep on the previous night in the Pullman.

No message had been handed them all day, and they had received no sign of any character, although ears and eyes had been alert in eager expectation of a slip of paper quickly passed amid the hurrying crowds. It seemed evident, therefore, that they would have to wait over for at least another day, and rest had grown insistently imperative. They selected a downtown hotel, not one of the largest caravansaries, but a small, quiet-looking place, engaged a room and went to bed without delay. Recent experiences, however, had taught them a little caution. Reconnoitering all angles and appurtenances of their room, they soon convinced themselves that there was no chance for an intruder to enter by way of a window. They were on the fourth floor, and the only windows in the room looked down upon a sheer drop to the street below. Not even a fire-escape was within close reach; a glass door, twenty feet farther down the hall, bore the red-lettered inscriptions which told of exit to safety in case of a sudden blaze. The door of the room was locked and a chair braced against it, with its top under the knob, where it would rattle if anyone became too busy on the farther side, and the transom was tightly secured. These simple precautions taken, the boys climbed into bed; need of sleep soon impressed itself upon them, and within half an hour both were dead to the world and all its doings.

Daylight was just stealing into the room when Brockett woke, yawned, turned over and stared half-drowsily at the door. The door was still shut; the chair was still against the knob, and Brockett, smiling sleepily, was closing his eyes once more when he saw his coat, which had been draped around the back of another chair, seemingly taking wings and gaining animation. The coat rose, disengaged itself from the chair, and floated lightly through the air, navigating the upper strata of the atmosphere like a perfected biplane. It halted suddenly at the level of the transom, and the bewildered Brockett saw a lean brown hand clutching the garment, while another lean brown hand vanished into the inner recesses of the pockets. And then Brockett, with one wild yell, flung himself out of bed, charged across the room, and tore madly at the chair he had himself placed against the knob as additional protection. His coat fell squarely on his head as he clawed at the chair, blinding him for a moment; the chair was clumsy and hard to handle, the lock stuck, gripped the key like a thing of malice and hostile wishes, and when Brockett, clad only in the chaste garb of slumber, finally burst into the hall, with Solano at his heels, not a soul was visible. Retreating hurriedly to the room, Brockett caught up his coat and ran a trembling hand into the pockets. They were empty—secret messages and cipher, all were gone.

Stopping only to draw on a few necessary garments, the boys, white-faced, almost sobbing, flung themselves into the hall, and sprinted towards the elevator. As they rushed frantically forward, they smashed heavily into a large, middle-aged gentleman who was just turning in from a cross-hall. The large, middle-aged man, with surprising quickness and dexterity, harpooned each of them with a huge and mighty hand, and smiling amiably, held them unwilling prisoners.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to earn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. DON'T SAVE 1910 NICKELS.

There has been much advice to "save 1910 nickels because they have gold in them and there will soon be a premium on them." Many people have taken the yarn seriously and endeavored to obtain and keep all they could of the coins in the hope of profiting from the predicted increase in value, but there is nothing in that story.

One possessor of several nickels that had a yellow tinge wrote to the director of the mint at Philadelphia, asking about them, and got this reply from U. V. Kelley, the acting director:

"In reply to your letter, I beg to advise you that the report that the five cent pieces of 1910 contained gold is erroneous. The slight discoloration sometimes noticed is probably due to the metal having come in contact with sulphur fumes during the process of coinage.

"A widely circulated report relative to these coins has brought many inquiries to this bureau, and we have made an effort to overtake and correct the impression as far as possible through the press."—New York Post.

Sure It Was Safe.

"You say that your airship is absolutely safe," said the investigator. "Now, how can you make that statement?"

"We haven't been able to get it to leave the ground," replied the inventor.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

PARALYSIS COMPLETELY CURED

"Fruit-atives" Performs Another Miracle

Bristol, N. B., July 25th. 1911

"I had a stroke of Paralysis in March 1910, and this left me unable to walk or help myself, and the Constipation of the Bowels was terrible.

Nothing did me any good and I was wretched in every way.

I then took "Fruit-a-tives" for the Constipation and it not only cured me of this terrible trouble, but gradually this fruit medicine toned up the nerves and actually cured the Paralysis.

Lighting the Summer Cottage.

In the matter of lighting it is only the comparatively rich country home that is equipped with electricity, and so even the most civilized of inhabitants will fall back upon candles and oil lamps. One of the very good ideas of the year is a lamp, for either oil or electricity, in wicker to match the furniture, and every size and shape may be found. Any model, too, may be imitated in the particular color—gray, green, brown, blue or what not—of your reed chairs and tables.

Then there is a capital fad at the present moment for utilizing vases as lamps. Either a vase shaped lamp may be bought, or a fine specimen of a Chinese jug may be ordered transformed, or some vase of which you are especially fond, but for which you have no particular use, may be given a new lease of life by having a lamp attachment adjusted for a small amount. The shade in this case is usually of wicker or a light material, lined with silk or cretonne to correspond with the color scheme of the room. The lamps are very odd and attractive and quite novel. It is the custom to have the cretonne with which a room is decorated made up into lamp and candle shades for the country home.

THE PRICE OF HOMAGE

ONCE when King Edward VII. paid a visit to Sheffield, all the fires in factories and plants were allowed to die out. Not a wheel in Sheffield turned for twenty-four hours. ℭ The primary object of this was to lift the pall of smoke that hovers over that wonderful steel-producing city, and to ensure, as far as man was able, a bright day and a blue sky for an auspicious occasion. ℭ It was Sheffield's expression of respect.

BUT the action was unique—it was unprecedented—it was unthought of that those hundreds of mighty furnaces, raging night and day, and those seething boilers, with quivering valves, should ever be allowed to cool. ℭ This extinguishing of fires cost Sheffield hundreds of thousands of dollars—the price of the effort to get back again to high-power efficiency.

SOME business men in Canada pay an unwitting homage, not to a king, but to a superstition—the superstition that hot weather justifies letting the fires of business energy go out. They stop Advertising in the Summer months. By paying homage to tradition, custom, superstition, they have allowed Summer to become their "dull" season. ℭ You know how dull it can be when you don't advertise. Do you know how brisk it can be made by Advertising? Do you realize how much momentum you now lose in the Summer that must be regained in the Fall?

DON'T LET YOUR ADVERTISING FIRES DIE OUT THIS SUMMER.

Advice regarding your advertising problems is available through any recognized Canadian advertising agency, or the Secretary of the Canadian Press Association, Room 503 Lumsden Building, Toronto. Enquiry involves no obligation on your part—so write, if interested.

Spotted Muslin Popular.

There is a place in the summer toilet year after year for spotted muslin. Here we have a fabric that has never been so great a favorite among women that it became commonplace in their estimation. Modest and demure it is, but withal very charming.

There are dainty white muslins with colored rosebuds and green leaves scattered over the surface, and there are others spotted with white that are given colored borders in the delicate summer shades that are always delightful, the pale blue, the clear pink, the soft mauve and green shades.

House Struck by Lightning

A few belated items of the recent storm are coming in. One tells that the dwelling on the farm owned by Mr. G. W. Bennett, North Monaghan was struck by lightning during the storm of the 9th inst. The chimney fell and damaged the roof and fire started in two places, but was put out by prompt work.

Mr. Brains is nearly always too busy to talk.

THE CROP CONDITIONS IN AND ABOUT PETERBORO

Early Potatoes Were Damaged but Later Crops Will Be Somewhat Better.

The crop prospects in the country adjacent to Peterboro, and throughout the adjoining agricultural divisions, may be said to be reasonably good. The farmers however, have had much with which to contend this season. Late seeding, severe frosts, followed by droughts have all played part in hindering the farm yields. While this, undoubtedly has worked deletriously, the yields in certain products are decidedly excellent.

The conditions in the township of North Monaghan may be taken as a fair standard of conditions in other surrounding farming communities. Fall wheat and vegetables there, are in a very flourishing condition. The spring grains, like barley, and oats were very badly hit by the wet and cold weather, and unfortunately prospects point to only about one half of the usual crops being garnered. Some fields where the land was fairly high and dry survived and their outlook is much better.

PLENTY OF HAY

Rye will yield a very good crop, having managed to evade being winter killed.

Turning to the outlook for the pea crop, fortunately it can be said to look very promising. The recent dry spells however, have not benefitted them and some fields show this unmistakably. In fact it is the unanimous opinion of farmers and agriculturists in this vicinity that the weather changes have sorely tried their patience and effected exceedingly injurious work to many crops.

It is somewhat encouraging to report an exceptionally good hay output. Haying operations are in full swing and the recent rains caused the growth to gain greatly.

POTATOES HARD HIT

In the potato line condtiions in this section will not exceed last year which were by no means good. The early potatoes were badly hit, and there will be no money made from them this year. Many rotted in the ground. Those planted late in June will, to a certain extent, ameliorate conditions as their chances look bright for a healthy growth. The wet cold weather worked irretrievable ruin to first planting. There was also an exceptionally good strawberry crop, in fact the best and most remunerative of many seasons. Garden vegetables are now reported to be coming along fairly well, although meeting drawbacks along with the rest earlier in the season. Clover was also good.

Just at the present stage it is a little previous to venture what the apple and raspberry yield will be this summer.

NORTH MONAGHAN COUNCIL

May's School House, July 5th.—

The minutes of the last two meetings were read and confirmed.

Mr. M. Carton and Mr. A. E. Dixon came before the Council with a plan of Mr. Carton's property, being a sub-division of lots 23 and 24 on plan No. 31, for North Monaghan and being a part of lot 15, plan No. 11, North Monaghan, and being a part of township lot No. 12, Con. 12.

The Council decided that all interested parties sign an agreement that Ford Ave. shall be made the required width, namely 60 ft., from Chamberlain St., south to Business St., at any time the Council desires to open up this avenue for an outlet from the West end of Chamberlain St. The street shown on this plan being a continuation of Chamberlain St., and being 60 ft. in width.

Mr. W. J. Grady came before the Council with a plan of Mr. Edward Brioux's property, which he asks them to accept. The plan shows a subdivision of part of park lot No. 19 and lot No. 40 Registered Plan No. 47, North Monaghan, being a part of lot No. 13, Con. 11.

Moved by Mr. Forster, seconded by Mr. May, that the Council accept Mr. Brioux's plan, showing Brioux Ave. 60 ft. in width, with a 40 foot lane, as an outlet, near the west end of this property, running to Edison Ave. The Township does not accept for maintenance this lane of outlet.

Mr. G. W. Hatton put in a bill to the Township, asking for $25.00 for tile and putting in same, and repairing the road in front of his property. No action taken.

Moved by Mr. Foster, seconded by Mr. Morrow, that a grant of $5 be made to Mr. L. Minecola for repairing Erskine Ave.

Moved by Mr. Forster, seconded by Mr. Morrow, that the Clerk be authorized to write Mr. Burnham, M.P., and ask him to urge the Dominion Government, to build a wharf near Whitfield, at the end of the concession line between North and South Monaghan.

Moved by Mr. Forster, seconded by Mr. Robson that the Clerk write to the C.P.R. and ask for the plan and dimension of the culvert on their road about one mile west of Peterborough and known as Sucus culvert

Moved by Mr. May, seconded by Mr. Morrow, that Mr. J. H. Forster be authorized to removed the stones from the road on Harper's Hill, con. 12.

Moved by Mr. May, seconded by Mr. Robson, that J. T. Stinson's bill for $1.00 for a grip for the township book be paid.

Moved by Mr. Foster, seconded by Mr. May, that 2nd Ave on the Stinson lot be graded.

Moved by Mr. Foster, seconded by Mr. May, that teamsters employed in doing work on the public highway shall receive the following pay:—

Teamsters hauling gravel, etc., $3.50 per day; teamsters employed on the grader, $4.00 per day.

Moved by Mr. Foster, seconded by Mr. Robson, that Mr. John Little's letter be referred to the Township Solicitor for advice.

Mr. Jas. C. Morrow reported that Dr. Marsh's complaint about water running in around the church property at Springville had been remedied.

The meeting adjourned until the call of the Reeve.

THE THURSDAY HALF HOLIDAY STORE CLOSING

There are in the neighborhood of eighty stores and places of business on George street, between Charlotte and Brock. Some of these of course such as barber shops, banks, restaurants, cigar stores, do not make any attempt to close theri doors on the Thursday afternoon holiday.

Including such places there were therefore about fifty-five places still remaining open in the district mentioned, when a Review representative made an observation this afternoon. Nearly all the dry goods and clothing stores had their sign out, stating that they were closed. In nearly every case noted, it was the smaller store or establishment that kept its doors open. The banks of course, locked up at three o'clock, increasing the number of places closed. The fruit stores also were all open.

TRADES COUNCIL AGAINST IDEA

At a meeting of the Trades and Labour Council last night, a resolution to the following effect was passed, "That it would not be in the best interests of the city to have the Toronto Carpet Company locate in Peterborough for the reason that they are alleged to be in opposition to union labor, and also that they are alleged to have imported alien labor.

The program for Labor Day was also discussed.

THANK YOU

PROSPERITY IN ENNISMORE

A gentleman who attended the picnic at Tara Grove in Ennismore on Tuesday, remarked that he had never seen the people so well dressed and bearing the signs of prosperity as on the occasion of Tuesday's gathering. There are about one thousand people residing in Ennismore, which township has not seen the sale of liquor for about twenty-five years. At one time there were five hotels in Ennismore. Now there are not more than four hotels, exclusive of men over 60 years of age, who do not belong to the Total Abstinence Society in connection with the parish. This is certainly a remarkable tribute to the work of Rev. Father Fitzpatrick.

It is not perhaps generally known that the township of Ennismore, financially, takes first place in the county, the farmers being in better circumstances than those of other townships. One recent sale of a farm is reported at $12,000.

WEDDING BELLS

WILSON—POGUE.

A very pretty wedding took place yesterday afternoon at three o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Pogue, 280 William street, when their eldest daughter, Lily, was united in marriage to Mr. Harold Wilson, by Rev. W. C. Riddiford, pastor of the Park street church. The bride was given away by her father, and the wedding march was played in a most able manner by Mr. Clayton Kemp, of Lawrence, Mass. U.S.A., a cousin of the bride. The bride was the recipient of numerous wedding gifts, the groom's present being a handsome pearl brooch.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson will take up their residence on Chamberlain street, south city, and will be pleased to meet their numerous friends in their new home.

MAKE AN IMPRESSION ON THE VISITORS

To-morrow there will be hundreds of visitors to Peterborough, who will come here with minds wide open to recevie impressions of the city. Also Mayor Bradburn personally asks citizens to display their flags and thereby do much towards adding to the beauty and attractiveness of the city.

An Unhappy Case

The children of Mrs. Charles Welch were taken over as wards of the Children's Aid Society this morning, by order of Magistrate Dumble. While the papers were being made out, their father sat back and openly gave way to tears.

Slayer at Large.

New York, July 11.—After having lost two days on false clues in an attempt to fix the identity of the man who brutally murdered twelve-year-old Julia Connors in the Bronx last Sunday, the police say they have established facts upon which to base a belief that the girl was lured into the flat where she was killed by a young man she knew. The theories that a white-bearded old man or a foreign-looking man of middle age had perpetrated the crime have been discarded.

The authorities are reticent about the new clues, but now declare that the murderer was not an Italian and that he did not inflict the forty stab wounds on the girl's body with a stiletto. Instead he used a penknife. The coroner's physician says the wounds were too shallow to have been caused by a stiletto. The police believe that the murderer was not only known to Julie Conners but her girl friends, and it is on this assumption that they are now working.

Won Wimbledon Cup.

Bisley, July 11.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—The Wimbledon Cup was won by Morris Blood of the Irish Artillery, who tied with Col. Hepton Mate, Highland Light Infantry, and Lieut. Barnett, Ulster Royal Artillery, 73 each. Hepton had 10 centres and Blood 8. Shooting off Blood made 4 centres and a bull's-eye and Barnett 3 bull's-eyes, and Hepton 2.

Kingston Deckhand Drowned.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., July 11.—Joseph Bedore, 20 years of age, whose home is in Kingston, was drowned from the steamer India when the vessel was about for miles from Shelter Lake. The deck of the vessel was loaded with square timber and Bedore fell into the lake while walking over them. The body was not recovered.

Wheat Crop Good

Regina, July 11.—The present condition of the grain crops of Saskatchewan, according to the seventh telegraphic report issued by the Department of Agriculture, is excellent. Crops sown on last year's summer fallow and on spring plowing are showing to the best possible advantage and have not apparently suffered from the hot and dry weather of the last week of June. Grain sown on stubble has suffered somewhat from the drought.

Prince Arthur Not Engaged.

Winnipeg, July 11.—His Royal Highness yesterday authorized the statement that he knew nothing of the report emanating from The Echo de Paris to the effect that Prince Arthur of Connaught was engaged to Princess Irene Alexandrovna, daughter of Grand Duke Alexander Michaelovitch, cousin of the Czar.

CANADIAN GENERAL TO TURN OUT GASOLINE-ELECTRIC CARS

Will be Used by the C.P.R. and C.N.R. for New Services.

Hamilton, July 10.—The announcement that both the C. P. R. and the C. N. R. in the near future will have a gasoline-electric suburban service out of Ottawa and Montreal was received with interest by city officials posted on the railway situation here, and who are confident that it will not be long before there will be a general electrification of branch lines by steam roads in this district.

"The plans of Mackenzie & Mann, which practically call for covering Western Ontario and the Niagara peninsula with electric feeders for the C.N.R.'s main line, will be a big factor in hastening the time when the other steam roads will have to turn their attention to electrifying branch lines and developing local traffic for the purpose of meeting the competition," said a prominent official, discussing the matter to-day.

"These electric feeders contemplated by the C.N.R., and which recent developments show are to be completed at once," he added, "would be bound to give that road a big advantage unless the other companies at the outset protect themselves by electrifying branch lines where heavy local traffic would justify it.

"I notice that up in Galt the farmers in the rural sections at the present time are circulating petitions calling on the Grand Trunk to electrify its line from Galt to Elmira. I think there is a strong prospect of the request being granted, and this is one of the first steps in a general movement.

"I think that you will find the C.P.R. ultimately using gasoline-electric cars on the recently opened Guelph extension to handle the local traffic between Guelph and this city. The T.H. & B. a couple of years ago gathered considerable information with a view to some day electrifying the line between Hamilton and Waterford, and it would not be surprising if something along this line developed in connection with the big plans on which the company is now working."

Gasoline-electric cars were formerly built in the United States, where they are used by a number of roads, but a Canadian factory is now to be erected at Peterborough by the Canadian General Electric Company, which will turn them out to fill the demand that is expected to exist for them on railroads of the Dominion.

SIX MONTHS FOR BICYCLE THIEF; HEAVY FINES FOR THE CHINAMEN; LIVERYMEN CALLED TO COURT

This morning an intelligent looking young Englishman pleaded guilty of stealing a $25 bicycle from Mr. T. C. Elliot, the proprietor of the Bee Hive stores. He elected summary trial and was sentenced to six months in the Central Prison.

Back in the man's life there was unmistakably a period of better days. His actions and speech were plainly above the average, possessed by police court patrons.

He offered drinking habits as the excuse for the theft.

Freeman has been in Peterborough for the past two or three weeks, living in company with another man's wife. He came from England seven years ago and has been doing all kinds of work. His last position was an hotel hostler. During his stay in Canada he claimed to have been all over the country.

Running out of money in Peterborough he pilfered Mr. Elliot's wheel endeavoring to realize something from its sale, but was apprehended in the nick of time.

CHINAMEN FINED.

Judgment in the case of the nine Chinamen charged with playing cards on Sunday for money, in opposition to the Lord's Day Alliance statutes, was given this morning. Each player must forfeit $40, and costs of $2.10, forthwith, or spend sixty days in jail. None of the celestials were present, nor J. W. Curry, K.C., of Toronto, or Mr. Gordon, counsels for the accused.

Mr. Curry was informed by a wire from Chief Thompson that judgment would be passed this morning but no reply was received in return.

AFTER THE LIVERYMEN.

Sanitary Inspector Spence has been getting after the livery men and others for not properly complying with the Health Act in disposing of manure from their stables.

The complaint in each case was in not having the manure receptacles provided with a covering. Those who appeared were James Clancy, J. P. Pulkinghorn, Robert Gibbs and Mr. A. R. Rountree. Mr. J. B. Larocque's name was called but he was not present.

The cases were enlarged for a week to allow all parties an opportunity to devise means for overcoming the defect.

His Worship's interpretation of the reason for the Health Act calling for coverings to the receptacles was that it prevented rain from getting at the manure, which would cause decomposition and a consequent objectionable odor.

ROUTE OF THE WALK TO-MOROW

Orangemen Will Leave Central Park at Two O'clock

The main streets of the city have been tastefully decorated by Turner & Sons for the Orange celebration. George and Charlotte streets especially are favored with flags and banners. There are many lodges coming to the city from Cobourg, Port Hope, Lindsay and surrounding district.

There will be a grand procession to-morrow, starting at two o'clock, from Central Park down George street to Hunter, out Hunter to Aylmer, south on Aylmer to Dalhousie, then to George, up George to Hunter, east to Water, north on Water to Dublin, west on Dublin to George, south on George to Central Park.

There will be ample time for people to see the parade and then to witness the Canadian League baseball match between Peterborough and Berlin on Riverside Park at 3.45 p.m.

On account of Orange Demonstration the Steamer Monarch will not run her regular trip to Stony Lake on Friday, July 12th. 1d

New York, July 11—Mrs. Agnes Jane Shipman, who was prominent in the public eye until two years ago as Miss Roselle Knott, leading lady for Richard Mansfield and Robert Mantell, was granted an absolute divorce on Saturday. This point is 1097 miles west of Winnipeg and 51 miles beyond the summit of the Yellowhead Pass.

REPLY FROM HON. MR. MURPHY

Ottawa, July 11.—Hon. Charles Murphy, former Secretary of State, made a statement yesterday respecting the report of the Public Service Commission in the case of R. E. Cook of the Printing Bureau.

"The refutation of every one of the extracts from the report of the Public Service Commission," he said, "is contained in the bureau enquiry report that was presented to Parliament in 1910, and the affidavit that I filed with the Public Service Commission. Judging by the article, the sole object of Mr. Morine's commission was to reinstate Mr. R. E. Cook. If the Government take that step the Liberal party will have no more cause to regret it than they had to regret the appointment of Mr. Morine."

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS

It is stated on reliable authority that there is a good prospect of the conclusion of peace between Italy and Turkey.

PETES TOOK FIRST HONORS IN SNAPPY GAME WITH THE DUTCHTOWN CHAMPIONS

Locals Were Two Behind at the Seventh When Three Runners Came Home, Two Being Hit Across by Swartz—Another Brace Came in the Eighth—Clever Work by Connor in Middlefield.

As we won yesterday the standing of Berlin and Peterborough to-day is:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Berlin	19	30	.388
Peterborough	16	32	.333

If we win to-day the standing will be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Berlin	19	31	.380
Peterborough	17	32	.347

And with another win to-morrow the figures will show:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Berlin	19	32	.369
Peterborough	18	32	.360

Then with the Saturday game coming this way the two teams will change places.

	W.	L.	Pct.
Peterborough	19	32	.369
Berlin	19	33	.365

Thanks to the thoughtfulness of Johnny Derr, who took the coacher's box along third base line in the seventh of yesterday's game, succeeding singles by Nasher and Rowan and a three ply larrup to the brewery barn from Jimmie Swartz, the Petes broke things up a bit, and with some more wafting in the eighth, managed to turn defeat into victory, and the first of the series was theirs. The score was 5—3, the hits 7 and 5, with the miscues 2 and 1, the Caps taking the big end in all three.

Derr may not be a lucky heaver, but the Dame smiles sweetly on the Petes when he patrols the coaching territory.

In one of the games with London at the Oval, some of the fans may remember that the Petes started a heavy batting rally and looked good to breeze out a winner. It was in the seventh and Derr had gone to third base in this innings. With two runs across, two on and none out, Templin, who then had charge, undertook to do the coaching. The result—the next three batters went out in succession.

There was plenty of good baseball in yesterday's affair. Like a real ball team the Busy Bees started to score right off the reel, Burns, who was hit, being driven home by Manager Deneau, who placed a high teaser between White in right and Rowan on first bag. The score looked good to win the game, as the pitchers were working nicely and the fielding was clean.

In their half of the seventh the visitors took another after two were gone and the side looked good for retirement, when Matteson knocked an easy grounder to Nasher at short. The ball was fielded sharply, but alas! Nemo uncorked a low throw and Dinsmore, who had doubled to right came home with run number two.

THE PETES
TAKE THE LEAD

Nasher had to redeem himself, so he began with a clean single through second. Rowan duplicated the trick, sending his shortstop to third, and when White sent a fielder's choice for the pitcher, he took a chance on getting Rowan at second, allowing Nasher to count. Connor sacrificed neatly and White was on second. Babe Tully was passed. and Swartz coming next made the shingles on the brewery barn rattle by connecting with the first pitched ball. White and Tully came home. That ended Hadley's performance for the day. Bramble took up mound duties and Byrnes made the third out with a grounder to Deneau.

The Bees came right back. but could tally but once. After Burns had skied to Connor, Reidy was passed and sent across by a beautiful triple to the sawdust by Bullock. Deneau fanned and Hesberger flew out to Connor.

A bad throw from Bullock at third allowed Trout to make second base. Osborne sacrificed his catcher and Nasher walked. Rowan dumped a sacrifice that scored Trout, and Nasher was hit in by White's drive to left.

Introducing Marly Connor in full armor array.

Three base hit—Swartz, Bullock. Two base hit—Dinsmore. Sacrifice hit—Rowan, Connor, Osborne, Reidy. Struckout by Osborne—2; by Hadley 3; by Bramble 1. Base on balls—off Osborne 5, off Hadley 1. off Bramble 1. Double play—Miller to Burns to Deneau. Stolen base—White. Hesberger. Hit by pitcher—by Osborne 2, by Hadley 1. Wild pitch—Osborne. Left on bases—Peterborough 3, Berlin 5. Umpire, Pearson.

◆

The only double play of the game went to Berlin, White and Rowan being gathered in the first, Miller to Burns to Deneau.

◆

The work of Marty Connor in centre field was beautiful to behold. The ex-Bowermanite had seven outs several of which were pretty running catches.

◆

Berlin was retired in the second on three grounders to Nasher.

◆

Trout's high throw to second, following a wild pitch by Osborne, allowed Bullock to make third. Trout however, came back by grabbing Deneau's foul fly.

◆

The game to-morrow is called for 3.45.

◆

Many fans will await with interest a performance by Dubbie Shea, behind the bat.

◆

With the fence still doing duty in left field, two homers would have been recorded yesterday. Swartz's biff would have meant three runs instead of two, and Dinsmore's double would have given the champions another counter.

◆

It was a rattling good game of baseball and here's hoping the same standard is maintained.

The game on Saturday will be called at 2.30 o'clock, as the visitors wish to catch an afternoon train.

CHANGES ON THE FARM.

Each Bushel of Wheat Now Requires but Ten Minutes of Labor.

Figures from the United States department of agriculture show that in 1855 the amount of labor expended in producing a bushel of corn in the United States was four hours and thirty-five minutes. Under modern conditions the amount of time required is only forty-one minutes. With wheat the difference is even more marked. In 1855 three hours of labor were expended on each bushel of wheat. At present a bushel of wheat requires only ten minutes of labor. This changed condition, while dispersing labor from the country, has created a condition demanding more intelligence, wider knowledge and larger ability on the part of the farmer. To meet these new conditions the farming population needs greater educational opportunities.

The three fundamental and mothering occupations which nourish and sustain all the rest, it is maintained, are farming, making homes and teaching and training the young. By improving farming the remaining two occupations will be benefited, because all three are interrelated. For example, more successful methods of agriculture will result in better living, better homes and more money available for training the young. The schools in the country will also be improved by more public spirit as well as by more money if agriculture is successful. The improvement of the schools will result in increased ability and will be one of the chief means of conservation and progress in rural communities.—New York Post.

Most Powerful Poison Known.

A poison, the most powerful known, is reported to have been extracted by a German chemist from the seeds of the ricinus, the familiar castor oil plant, and has been attracting much attention on account of its remarkable properties. Its power is estimated to be so great that a gram—about one-thirtieth of an ounce—would kill a million and a half guinea pigs. If administered so as to cause severe illness without death it gives immunity against a larger quantity, and the dose can be gradually increased until more than a thousand times as much can be endured as would kill an untreated animal. Though arsenic, morphine and other poisons can be taken in larger and larger quantity, says Popular Mechanics, nothing approaching this marvelous increase in dose can be borne.

BIG FIGHT CLOSES.

Some Surprises Are Predicted To-day in Saskatchewan Election.

Regina, July 11.—To-night will see the close of the election campaign. Fifty-two out of the 54 ridings will vote to-day, two, Athabaska and Cumberland, being deferred. In 47 constituencies there are straight party fights, with no third candidates to complicate matters. In Voda there is no Conservative candidate, although the Conservatives have endorsed an independent, J. Wright. The Liberals claim Wright will, if elected, support Scott. There is also a second independent in the field, a French-Canadian name P. Larow. Outside of carrying the solid vote of the small French colony, he is not considered a serious contender. Voda is almost entirely foreign and no one would pretend to predict what might happen.

There is a strange situation in Canora, where a Galician, Mike Gabora, is running. Moosejaw has a Socialist candidate who is not looked on as a factor.

There is little betting on the result, which depends largely on two things, the foreign vote and the reciprocity sentiment. Both sides have made a desperate fight for the foreign vote.

The Scott Government has had it in the past, and if it swings towards the Conservative column it will endanger the Government in many seats. The Liberals have staked their whole campaign on the reciprocity issue.

It promises to be an election of surprises. One freak bet was made at long odds that both Scott and Haultain would lose their own seats.

Naturally.

Belle—Cholly told me last night that I was the hope of his after years and the chance of a lifetime. Delle—Good. What happened after that? Belle—Why, he very naturally embraced the opportunity.—Philadelphia Record.

Battling With the King of "Sweet Water" Fish.

Thrills of Landing a Big Salmon in the Alexis River of Labrador

BY LAWRENCE MOTT.

(Copyright, 1913, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

"WELL be there come daylight, sur!"

Skipper Alf, of the little schooner that I had chartered, spat vigorously to lee'ard—"Breeze 'll freshen up a bitty—my think!" he added.

At last the long winter months of waiting and of longing were behind us; my Lady Dainty and I were once more bound down the grim Labrador coast, this year to cast our flies for salmon in as yet untried streams.

Although it was July the night air was very cold, made the more so by huge icebergs whose massive forms and minaretted peaks seemed to appear mysteriously from the hazy, moonlighted distances over our bows and, as strangely, to vanish astern.

To port the black line of the Labrador swung past as a whole sail sou'westerly wind hurried us on, to the drone and swish of disturbed waters and the complaining creak of an ungreased mainthroat halliard block.

"Aye, sur—g'night, sur."

But the sun was just coming over the rim of the world as I stepped on deck.

We were slipping easily "down 'long." Gray and green, green and grey—always the same monotony of rock and barren tundra. A tracery of white at the foot of the cliffs showed clearly and the ponderous roar of the heaving ground swell as it dashed itself to foam came softly over the laughing, sun-kissed waters.

First "White Water."

"Yon's he," the skipper sung out, as we rounded a bold headland, and an hour later the anchor was let go off the mouth of Alexis River, of whose wealth of salmon I had so often heard from the Montaignais Indians.

My boys took all the camp dunnage in the two big dories, the Lady Dainty and I following by canoe.

"Good luck an' good fishin', sur. I'll hang on unless it comes fer t' blow, then I'll stan' out till de wind shifts off'n de lan'."

Our hungry eyes feasted on the magnificent stretches of river as it came rushing from the hinterland in a wide sweep to the sea. The first "white water" above the tidal pool glistened brilliantly, and we blessed the day that we were born.

A most comfortable little bank, that was protected from easterly winds, offered an excellent camping place for the first night, and while the boys were uptenting I put the rods together.

"What shall it be?"

"A silver Doctor, No. 6, double," she said, fastening the cast on her line.

"I'll try my luck with a Jock Scott, then."

We crossed a long, pebbly bar to the head of the lower pool. And such a pool!

Beginning at the top in heavy whirling rapids it slowed bit by bit until it was lost in the weight of the ocean.

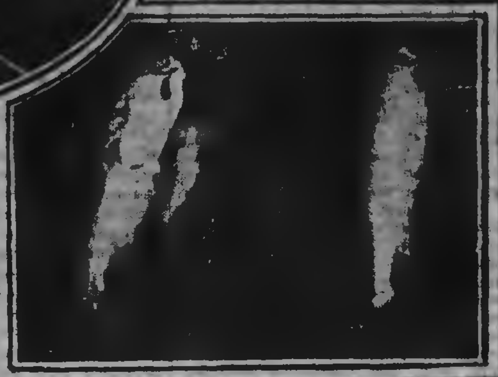
On the Upper Waters

Camp on the Alexis

The Big One

Five Good Ones

Casting from a Light Dory



Two Fine Ones and Some Big Trout

An ideal spot for salmon. Here and there bowlders created great eddies, where the silver fish like to rest and accustom themselves to the taste of fresh water. Long ribbons of foam trailed away down stream in which sea trout broke repeatedly; over it all the bluest of blue skies and a genial sun.

I waded across, and my Lady Dainty reached a flat rock just under the quick water.

"Done with you for ny amount!" I shouted.

At my sixth cast, the fly well out in the stream, I saw the old familiar flash of a silver side and the flirt of a black tail.

"First rise!" I whooped gleefully. Whe-e-e-e-e-e!

"First fish," she called in return, as her reel's music came shrilly over the rush of the river.

Out of water he hopped.

"Nice one! About twelve pounds!"

What life and go that fish had! He started at once for the open sea, my Lady keeping pace as best she could over the rough shore until she could go no further.

"Snub him!" I yelled. She did. The rod tip flew back and a limp line dangled forlornly from it.

"Gone, by thunder!"

She replaced the broken cast, put on another fly and silently took up her old position. I could not find it in my heart to chuckle, even quietly, for the loss of the first fish hurts.

Very slowly my fly swept across the salmon that I had risen, and he took it with a vicious rush, tearing off twenty-five yards of line without the least idea of stopping.

"About the same size as yours."

This chap flew all over the pool, now skittering on the surface like a mad thing, then plunging recklessly backward and forward.

Little by little I wore him out until he was content to float in an eddy, his fins barely moving.

My gaffer came across. A quick, deft jerk and a beautiful fresh run female fish was lying on the pebbles, the sunlight causing its scales to radiate all the colors of the rainbow.

I looked for my Lady, but she was gone! Down stream? No; I should have seen her.

With my rod I scrambled up the low cliff that lay between me and the next pool, and there she was, lying flat on a projecting ledge, staring into the crystal clear water below. She beckoned imperiously, motioning to be careful. I crept beside her.

"See him?" she breathed.

When my eyes became used to the wavering of the eddies I, too, saw "him."

"Thirty pounds if an ounce!" I began to shake.

Slowly moving to and fro as the water pushed him, lay a huge salmon, whose dark length was magnified by the angle from which I looked, until he seemed a veritable monster.

"Slip off and get out on that point; you can reach him from there, and I'll watch."

She wriggled out of sight, and with my gaffer at her side to steady her, reached the desired position. As her line lengthened I could see the fly plainly, drifting nearer and nearer to the giant.

He saw it, made a half hearted lunge upward, then settled back behind his rock. Three times more she tried, but he refused to move.

"Try a 'Dusty Miller'!"

No result.

"Durham Ranger No. 4," I advised as a last resort, though this is a large, gaudy fly, rarely used except when the water is heavy and dark from rain.

King Salmon's Fight.

Rush! Splash! It was done so quickly that I could not see it, but she had him! In my excitement and delight I slipped, and rolled comfortably head over heels into the river. When my head came up the first thing that appeared was the monster, as he leaped full and clear of the surface and not fifteen feet from me.

With that I made for the shore, fearing that I might foul the line.

As I wrung the icy cold water from my clothes it seemed as if he took advantage of every assistance that Nature could give him. No matter how warily my lady tried to get below him, he always dropped down stream as she moved, using the current to help his fight and setting himself across it.

Suddenly he began to pound his way upstream.

"This is your finish, O Big One!" I muttered. But was it?

With almost incredible strength he bored his way sullenly against a seething rapid, My Lady butting him all that she dared. Up and up, and still up without a falter. Where the water slid smoothly from the next pool it was rather shoal. He crossed it in a cloud of foam or spray and sank heavily in a nearly still, very deep hole.

"My arms! My arms."

I laughed. "They will be worse than that before Angus gaffs him."

It was a sort of truce for a few moments, neither side apparently ready to commence hostilities. A stone flung over him started matters, and out of water he came for the second time.

"A vera, vera guid fush. 'Twull gang awa yon thirty pun,'" Angus said slowly.

Round and round the Big One went, hanging deep and shaking his head doggedly. I crossed to beside My Lady, and there was a pitiful little look of pain on her face.

"My arms!" she whispered, but I shook my head. She did not ask again.

Monotonously the salmon kept up his itinerary of circling the pool, and she could not gain a foot of line. Sometimes he would stop, sulking, but a few sharp raps on the rod butt jarred him into moving on.

Then she gained a few inches, a few inches more—whiz! He had it all back.

But after forty minutes' fighting My Lady began to gain steadily.

"You gaff him, please," she almost wept.

I waded knee deep. In the strong sunlight I could see his great length rolling from side to side, and as he came nearer the convulsive movement of his gills flashed bits of reflection.

Nearer still. By Jove, what a fish!

Now I could see the "Durham Ranger," and, to my horror, the hook had worn through the tough jaw and was holding him by what seemed the merest thread of skin.

"Steady, steady!" I begged of my lady as I reached under water, took a deep breath and struck the gaff home through the solid shoulders.

No one spoke as the magnificent fish lay on the rocks, his fins feebly quivering at their very tips. The crimson stain from the gaff wound ran slowly across the silver, dark ruby in contrast.

"You are the winner for the season, O Big One!" I said respectfully, and he it proved when the trip was over. He weighed thirty-six pounds five ounces and was as handsome in proportion a fish as any Restigouche salmon that I ever saw.

So ended that which we always speak of as the "big fight."

Our success on the Alexis was most gratifying, the pools being full of fish that were keen on rising.

The next day we poled and struggled away up river, camping when night dropped down.

But it must be admitted that we boarded our little "shippie" for further north one evening under deep, far off skies and a sinking sun that glimmered from between fleece lined dark clouds, with a feeling of gratitude for the solid, simple comforts, as the black flies and mosquitoes on the Alexis are devilishly attentive and persistent.

The rivers that we fished later include the Forteau, Pinware, Red Bay, Mary's River (in St. Lewis Bay), North East River, White Bear Arm, Hawk Bay, Partridge Bay, Black Bear and the streams in Gros Water Bay, the voyage taking us well north of 58 degrees.

THREE officers of the United States stood, the target for more than a hundred rifles fired at them at close range by Apache Indians. Two of the officers fell, their bodies riddled with bullets. One escaped and fought the battle to its tragic close, and at the end of it the Congressional Medal of Honor for "distinguished bravery" was awarded to him. The hero of that fight was Major General William H. Carter, until recently in charge of the American forces on the Mexican frontier, at present acting chief of staff in Washington.

So little does he look like an Indian fighter that it is told how a young attaché of the State Department went to General Carter's office soon after he was appointed to Washington, and after watching the clerkly looking man working at the desk for some time he went to him and asked:—

"Can you tell me what time General Carter is expected in?"

He explained afterward that he thought he had been talking to a civilian friend of the General.

In 1881 General Carter was first lieutenant of the Sixth United States cavalry, commanded by Colonel E. A. Carr and stationed at Fort Apache, Ariz. For a long time the White Mountain Apaches had been on friendly terms with the whites, but in August, 1881, there was evident sign of dissatisfaction among them, and day by day they grew more sullen and morose, though the American officers could find no cause for grievance. ●

An investigation was begun, as the attitude of the Indians grew steadily worse, and soon it appeared that there had arrived among the Apaches a new Indian "hope" in the person of a medicine man named Nockay det Klinne. Whence he had come nobody knew, but it had not taken him long to gain a complete ascendancy over the minds of the Indians.

Prior to the appearance of discontent among the Apaches the medicine man had succeeded in obtaining for himself much of the Indians' wealth, in return for which he had promised to make his prophecies come true. He had been lavish with promises as to what was going to happen in the way of good fortune to the tribe, and as up to date nothing unusual had happened, he determined to inflame his followers still more.

Among other of his promises had been one to the effect that he would bring to life all the ancestors of those who faithfully believed in him, but as an excuse for not at once bringing about this remarkable resurrection he said nothing could be done until the whites had either been murdered or driven out.

When this was learned by the American troops it was at once plain that immediate interference was necessary. The medicine man and several of the chiefs were called to an interview with Colonel Carr, who explained to them the folly and futility of rising against the whites. He told them nothing but disaster could come of it and privately warned the chiefs not to believe the predictions of the medicine man.

Nockay det Klinne pretended to agree with all that Colonel Carr had said, but when a few days later he was summoned to report at San Carlos to the Indian agent of the government he not only ignored the order but retired to his camp on Cibiou Creek, about forty miles from Fort Apache.

As soon as this move was reported Colonel Carr was ordered to arrest the medicine man.

Knowing that the Indians were already inflamed, Colonel Carr telegraphed for additional troops. He believed that by a show of overwhelming force he could overawe the Indians and prevent an uprising.

The additional troops were denied, and as no move was made immediately the medicine man tried to convince his followers that the white soldiers were afraid. His influence grew and spread to nearly all the Indian camps in the White Mountain reservation. To make matters worse the prophet of evil advised the Indians to brew and drink "tizwin," a strong intoxicant made from corn. With the liquor and the incantations of the medicine man together they were ready for any crimes.

On receiving the order from headquarters to arrest Nockay det Klinne Colonel Carr sent a runner to the camp of the medicine man, telling him that no harm was intended, but that he must obey orders and report to the agent. To this message an evasive reply was sent, and so on Monday, August 29, the little command under the leadership of Colonel Carr left the fort and took the trail to Cibiou Creek.

The next morning, as the soldiers were a few miles from the camp of the medicine man, there rode out of the brush in the creek bottom an Apache chief named Sanchez. He came forward as a friend, shook hands with the American officers and slowly rode along the lines, apparently counting the men as he went. Orders had been given that the Americans should not appear as if looking for a fight, as it was still hoped an uprising might be averted; so, although the actions of the chief were suspicious, he was allowed to count up the command unhampered, and when he had finished he galloped back to the creek below.

Arrived at the camp a little later, the American officers were surprised to find that the medicine man surrendered willingly and appeared to have no thought of resistance. It was explained to the rest of the Indians that Nockay det Klinne and his family were only being taken to the post and would be well treated, but it was also explained that if there was any attempt at a rescue he would be killed at once.

That this threat had so little influence on subsequent events is due to the fact that the medicine man himself had assured them that he could never really die and that if he were killed by the whites he would come back to life again.

Through high willows and underbrush the command moved with its prisoners, and a camp was selected to spend the night. It had been noticed that mounted Indians were coming up the creek from the gulches which the column had carefully avoided and that they were collecting about the medicine man's guard. Colonel Carr, fearing trouble, directed Captain E. C. Hentig quietly to warn these Indians away from the camp, and he directed Lieutenant Carter, who was regimental quartermaster, to separate the scouts and get them in camp out of harm's way.

Lieutenant Carter, fully realizing that the situation required delicate handling, called the scouts and directed that they be put in camp. The scouts left the other Indians, but it was noticed that they were reluctant about going. Captain Hentig, standing near Lieutenant Carter, called to the other Indians to go away. As he raised his arm to motion to them one half-witted young Indian fired and gave the war cry.

In an instant the redskins were frenzied, and levelling their rifles at Captain Hentig, his orderly and Lieutenant Carter, who stood together, began firing into the group. The first volley brought down Captain Hentig and his orderly, and bullets whistled by Lieutenant Carter from every direction. With his two comrades shot down, Lieutenant Carter stood momentarily facing more than one hundred Indians, besides the scouts in camp. He knew that the first move would be made toward capturing his fallen comrades.

With his fighting blood aroused he emptied his revolver at his enemies in the hope that he would last long enough to rescue the wounded and rob the Apaches of their prey. Standing his ground, he managed to carry the wounded men to the rear, while the dismounted men of troop D, seeing one of their comrades facing general attack, seized their rifles and, with Sergeant Alonzo Bowman in the lead, rushed to the rescue.

The astonishing spectacle of one young officer facing more than a hundred Indians momentarily overawed the redskins and caused them to pause in their attack. This pause, it was afterward said, probably saved the entire camp from annihilation. It gave the necessary breathing spell for the Americans to rush to the attack. The Apaches fell back and made for cover.

Colonel Carr meanwhile walked calmly to where the scouts had been standing and commanded the guards to "kill the Medicine Man."

Sergeant McDonald, in charge of the guard, shot the Medicine Man through both thighs, but McDonald was immediately shot by the Indian scouts. The Medicine Man even after being shot called loudly to the Indians to fight on and made efforts to reach the scouts. Lieutenant Carter's orderly trumpeter, seeing that the Medicine Man was still alive, drew his revolver and, thrusting the muzzle into the mouth of this yelling Apache, fired all the cartridges.

The scouts and other Indians were finally driven from the camp, but they drew off into the underbrush to renew the battle.

With every man under his command on the firing line Colonel Carr began an engagement that was to tax to the utmost the mettle of his men. As darkness came the dead, including Captain Hentig and his orderly, were buried in a single grave dug inside Colonel Carr's tent. The burial was done by the few men that could be temporarily spared from the firing line. The Indians lurking about were still full o fight, and, remembering the queer prophecies of Nockay det Klinne, Lieutenant Carter was sent out on the hazardous duty of finding his body so that his followers could not carry it away.

Groping toward the spot where his orderly had fired the last shot into the head of the medicine man, the young officer reached there just as rifles amid the woods sent missiles of death about him, as if to remind him that the medicine man's person was sacred.

Lieutenant Carter, unmindful of the danger, knelt down to get a good look at what was left of the medicine man's features. To his consternation and surprise the medicine man opened his eyes and began making signs to him. In spite of the fact that he had been literally riddled with bullets he was still alive.

It was immediately apparent that if the followers of the medicine man should learn that he was alive in spite of his many wounds it would stir them on to renewed frenzy and action. If by any chance the Indian should fall into the hands of his friends and recover it would give him a commanding influence over his superstitious followers, which might end the long drawn out war.

By the time Lieutenant Carter had reported his uncanny discovery to Colonel Carr there had been a cessation of shots, and it was judged most prudent not to start another volley, as might have been done by a shot heard in the camp. It became necessary to kill the medicine man by some other means than shooting. One of the guides named Burns was instructed to accompany Lieutenant Carter and put the medicine man to death with a knife. The superstition that the Indian bore a charmed life and could not die had to a certain degree taken hold of the men in the camp, and Burns, fearing that a knife might not slay him, took an axe and crushed in the skull of the fanatic.

The Apaches later learned of what had been done, and from that time forward every person murdered by them was killed in the same manner as their chief had died. The Indians on the following day were driven off, and finally they scattered and came to terms. But in the meantime there were some other incidents in the campaign which reminded all present that they were professional fighters and were seeing all the horrors and atrocities of war. ●

To Lieutenant Carter, Sergeant Alonzo Bowman and Richard Heartery were awarded the medal of honor.

UNEDA BIBLE CLASS HAD TRIP

A very enjoyable excursion to the Bay of Quinte, was conducted by the Uneda Adult Bible class of Bethel Sunday school on Monday, July 8th. A special train was run from Peterboro, picking up excursionists all along the line to Madoc Junction.

Belleville dock was reached at 10.30 where the steamer "Brockville" was in readiness to course down the beautiful bay.

The next stop was made at Napanee. The sail up the Napanee River was perhaps the most pleasant part of the trip. After a short stop here, the return trip was made to Belleville, when the train was in waiting at the dock.

The committee in charge of the excursion regret very much that circumstances prevented the proper advertisement, but they still have faith in the venture and will run a similar trip next year, if conditions permit.

The Uneda boys intend holding a social in the vicinity of Jermyn in the near future.

On Thursday an electrical storm broke over the village and the current played tricks with some of the dwellings, three being struck. The chimneys were demolished and one house set on fire, but the flames were quickly extinguished. There was a heavy rainfall and the gardens, which had suffered from long drought, absorbed the moisture with avidity.

Dr. N. H. Sutton has removed to Peterborough where he will continue his professional duties. His removal is a distinct loss to our village and the adjacent rural district, not only from the standpoint of his skill as a physician but from a social and progressive civic view. Mrs. Sutton will be greatly missed in church and Woman's Institute work. A host of friends wish them well.

I submit my solution of the right angled triangle question, in the solving of which your "mathematical expert" omitted one step and arrived at answer $1.80 too great. The question is legitimate for first form High School work, but not for Junior Entrance. I have never seen a similar question on the examination.

The two shorter sides are 16.48 chains and 9.75. These form the sides of a rectangle, whose area is 16.48x x7.75 square chains.

The triangle is 1-2 area of rectangle or 16.48x9.75 div 2—sq. chains. (10 sq. chains 1 acre.)

No. of acres equals 16.48x9.75 div 2 x10.

TRUE IRISH BULLS.

They Have a Pungent Flavor Peculiar to the Green Isle.

BLUNDERS LINKED WITH WIT.

All Nations Mix Metaphors and Perpetrate Self Contradictory Figures of Speech, but the Emerald Brand Holds the Prize For Point and Vigor.

In "Bulls, Ancient and Modern," J. C. Percy, the author, contrasts the English and Irish variety to the advantage of the latter. Although the most diverting bulls are usually fathered upon Irishmen, they have not by any means a monopoly. All nations mix metaphors and fall into self contradictory blunders. Englishmen make bulls probably just as often as Irishmen, but there is a difference. The English ones are seldom amusing. The Irish ones almost always are.

Mr. Gladstone never hinted at Irish blood in his veins, yet he once warned an M. P. that it was no use for him "to shake his head in the teeth of his own words." Mr. Balfour has spoken of "an empty theater of unsympathetic auditors." Lord Randolph Churchill referred to an item of national credit as "a mere flea bite in the ocean of our expenditure." If further proof be called for it was a Yorkshireman who told a meeting of shareholders in some place of entertainment at Leeds that "they had been catering for a class which does not exist and which now goes to Bradford." It was an English chairman of a railway company who said "it would pay better to carry third class passengers for nothing rather than let the tramways get them."

Why is it, then, that bulls are supposed to be native to Ireland? It can hardly be for the reason that they are supposed to take their name from a certain Obadiah Bull, an Irish barrister, who practiced in London during the eighteenth century. Mr. Percy accepts this derivation, though there is another which relates the name with the traditional remark of the timid woman who was "afraid to cross a field full of cows in case one of them might be a bull." That has the flavor of the true Irish bull. It is pungent, sharp to the point. The meaning flashes out quick and clear. Other bulls result from a lack of oil in the headworks. Irish bulls are really due to mental quickness, which takes a short cut rather than the high road and relies upon the hearers to show equal agility. That is why they leave an impression, while the bulls of other nations pass unnoticed or fade directly from the mind.

Here, for example, is a delightful ellipse. One woman, describing another, said: "She would talk the head off you. I am hoarse listening to her." Most of us have felt that, but it needed real wit to phrase it so aptly. Quite as funny, though less witty, was the advice given to cyclists in an Irish paper, "The best way to pass a cow on the road when cycling is to keep behind it." One is reminded of the man who said there was only one way to make a donkey follow you—that was to go behind and push. The same writer on cycling once selected "a shady nook and basked there in the sunshine." It was he, too, who described some one as having received "a grand reception when he went away."

In Irish political speeches bulls abound. The speakers are carried away by their subjects and their eloquence. Images leap to their lips and are uttered before their incongruity has been noticed. "Why," asked Sir Thomas Myles in Dublin during the Boer war—"why should Irishmen stand with their arms folded and their hands in their pockets when England calls for aid?" Lord Russell of Killowen was denouncing a coercion bill in 1880 and its interference with free speech. "If this measure is passed," he declared, "no man in Ireland will be able to speak on politics unless he is born deaf and dumb." Mr. O'Shea, M. P., drew a piteous picture of the desolation of a farm in Ireland. "Is it not a fact," he asked, "that the only living animals on this farm are the seagulls which fly over it?"

In every one of these cases the bull, far from being a source of confusion, adds immensely to the effect of the argument. There are bulls, however, even in Ireland, which are born of sheer muddleheadedness. Such was the remark of the Dublin university freshman who was dared to "lepp" a broad and muddy ditch in College park. "Sure," he said, "if I jumped across that I would fall in the middle before I got halfway." That was verbal carelessness. It was something more than this—it was inability to think clearly—which made an old lady say one Sunday when the porch was inconveniently crowded after church, "If everybody else would do as I do and stay quietly in their seats till every one had gone out there would be no crush at the door."

In between these comes a class of bull which is neither illuminating nor confusing, but which arises from a constitutional bluntness of intellect. To this class belongs the reply of a servant to her mistress' question, "Who was that at the front door?" "A gentleman looking for the wrong house, ma'am," the servant said. "I did not know the man was alive until I saw his death in the paper," is another instance of the same kind.

A fool always wants to shorten space and time. A wise man wants to lengthen both.—Ruskin.

The Grand Rapids and Indiana Railway was fined $14,000 for rebating.

NOVEL MUSICAL EFFECTS.

The players of reed instruments are at a severe disadvantage compared with other members of the orchestra. Their performance requires a considerable effort of the breathing organs, which often becomes, especially in the case of older players, a hardship. As a matter of fact, no player of a wind instrument can possibly practice as much as players of other instruments, the Scientific American says in describing an invention designed to overcome the reed instrument player's disadvantages. It is quite impossible also to give an indefinitely sustained note. This has been rather severely felt in the composition of chamber music especially, in which reed instruments cannot be very successfully employed. A new apparatus, the work of a German inventor, Court Musician Bernard Samuels, removes all these difficulties. It consists of a tube ending in a mouthpiece and connected with a foot bellows, which serves to carry air from the bellows to the player's mouth.

The player can take breath at will while performing with the same ease as if he were not playing at all. Whenever he wishes to take breath he simply draws an additional supply of air from the bellows. Thus it is possible to produce an indefinitely sustained note or a succession of notes without difficulty. The bellows is provided with a check valve to prevent air from the lungs from being blown into the bellows. In normal position the bellows is placed near the player's chair and worked by the foot. The air is driven from the bellows through the tube into the cavity of the mouth and is dispatched from there into the instrument in the same way as air from the lungs. It might be thought that the effect of blowing air into the mouth would be to inflate the lungs, but as a matter of fact this is not the case, owing to the closure of the glottis in the act of blowing.

It hardly needs be pointed out that a number of hitherto impossible musical effects can be produced in this manner. Many a passage in Wagner's and other operas which hitherto could be played only by extreme effort is now rendered without trouble. It is said that the apparatus produces its effect without any undesirable secondary results.

There have been serious anti-Jewish disorders in Susnska, Russian Poland, where a Jew was accused of having murdered a servant who had died suddenly.

DIPLOMATIC FIGHT ON; GREAT BRITAIN OPPOSING DISCRIMINATION AT PANAMA

Proposal of U. S. Legislators to Give American Vessels a Preferred Rate in the Canal Is Declare to Be a Violation of the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty — Anti-British Forces In Control In the Congress.

Washington, July 12.—The lines were drawn last night for a great diplomatic struggle between the United States and Great Britain over the question of whether this country may discriminate in favor of American vessels in the administration of the Panama Canal. The wordy war may terminate in the submission of the question to The Hague tribunal.

A series of diplomatic and legislative conferences yesterday developed the fact that the forces in the American Government which favor allowing American ships free passage through the canal are in control. These forces take the position that there is nothing in the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, under which the canal was built, to prevent this concession. The diplomatic struggle, precipitated by the note received yesterday from Mitchell Innes, charge of the British embassy, it is expected will be fought along the following lines:

Great Britain will take the position that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty provision, which forbids discrimination in favor of the interests of any nation in the conduct of the canal would operate against the provisions of the Panama bill now under consideration in the Senate. This position will be supported by a lengthy argument now on its way from London by mail, which will be presented to the State Department and transmitted to Congress immediately upon its arrival.

The United States will hold that so long as the ships of all foreign nations are accorded the same treatment in the use of the canal, the United States may pass American ships free or rebate the tolls charged them. This position was taken by the House when it reversed the report of the House interstate and foreign commerce committee, which would have prevented free passage to American ships and passed the recent bill.

The ultimate passage of the measure now before the Senate seems assured. The men behind the bill in the Senate said yesterday that the British note would not prevent consideration of the measure whenever it could be reached in the ordinary course of business. But the position of Great Britain will strengthen the opposition to the free provision.

After a conference with President Taft, Representative Sulzer of New York, chairman of the House committee on foreign affairs, made a statement supporting the bill. He said:

"Of course, I am surprised that the British Government now objects to the United States Government regulating the tolls of its own ships through the Panama Canal. However, nothing serious will come of the objections. We will treat it with the dignity it deserves. The treaty is plain and clear to all. The British Government should not and cannot complain if no toll discrimination is made against British ships in favor of the ships of other nations."

It was generally understood that this position is supported by President Taft and Secretary of War Stimson, in direct charge of the Panama administration.

On the other hand, Representative Adamson of Georgia, chairman of the House interstate and foreign commerce committee, and Representative Stevens of Minnesota, ranking Republican member of the committee, supported the British position.

While the British note caused some comment on the unusual incident of a foreign nation interfering with legislation in a formative stage, it was pointed out that this was the only course by which Great Britain could oppose the measure. Just as soon as the bill becomes a law, under supreme court decisions, it supersedes all treaties bearing on the same subject matter and would thus leave Great Britain no ground for objection after it had been written on the statute books.

Should the bill become law over the protest of Great Britain it is scarcely expected that the matter will end there, as British and particularly Canadian interests would force further diplomatic action by London, and when these means were exhausted The Hague tribunal would be the court of last resort.

The request that the enactment of the Panama Canal administration bill be held in abeyance until Mr. Innes, the British charge, can present a note in behalf of his Government, confronts Congress and the State Department with an extraordinary situation.

While the reasons for the request are not stated in the charge's note, there is no doubt that the British Government is concerned in the clause to grant free passage through the canal to American vessels in coastwise trade, and that relating to the passage of railroad-owned ships. The Canadian railways are deeply concerned in both, and it is thought that some of the representations will be made in their behalf.

The canal bill is now in the Senate committee. It is said that members of both Houses were not agreeable to much delay now.

One of the provisions in the bill as it now stands would make it impossible for Canadian railroad ships to pass through the canal if they engaged in coastwise trade.

No Cordelia, going up in an airship isn't dangerous. It's the coming down that is apt to give the undertaker a job. [illegible]

Whipped Son In Court Room.

St. Thomas, July 12.—When a 17-year-old lad was brought before County Magistrate Hunt of St. Thomas, and pleaded guilty to a charge of committing an assault on a 13-year-old girl, the magistrate gave the boy's father the option of administering a whipping in court or having the lad sent to the penitentiary for a flogging. The father accepted the first proposal, and with a rawhide he had purchased, piled heavy blows on the boy's bared back in the courtroom. At the fifteenth blow the lad became insensible, and on the advice of the doctor the other ten lashes were not delivered. The offence for which the boy was corrected took place a year ago, and the lad, who skipped to the United States, recently came back on his father's advice.

FOUL PLAY IS SUSPECTED

Cumberland, Ont., July 12.—Suspicions of foul play have been aroused by finding in the Ottawa River of the body of a man, one eye being closed and the other protruding.

The discovery was made three miles east of Cumberland by A. Prevost, a fishermen. The body is that of a man about 40 years of age, 5 feet 10 inches in height, weight about 150 pounds, and light moustache.

Crown Attorney Maxville will investigate.

Terrible Atrocities by Tibetans.

Shanghai, July 12.—Horrible atrocities marked the recent capture of the City of Litang in the province of Sze-Chuen of the Tibetans. Many women and children were burned alive or otherwise slaughtered. The garrison defended the city for an hour and then fled, leaving 70 dead lying in the streets.

LAD SHOT HIS LITTLE BROTHER

St. Catharines, July 12.—George Brady, six-year old son of George Brady, Wellandport, met death Wednesday under especially sad circumstances.

Along with his 13-year-old brother Russell, he was playing with firearms when a gun in the hands of Russel exploded. A cartridge entered the head of the younger brother, causing instantaneous death to the little lad.

The sad affair was reported to Dr Jamieson, coroner, who ordered an enquiry. It opened yesterday afternoon and adjourned till Monday.

Open Bank Enquiry Again.

Toronto, July 12.—For the purpose of delving more deeply into the charges that Peter Ryan received the mysterious check for $3,000 that the royal commission is trying to locate Sir William Meredith will open the hearing again at Osgoode Hall on July 16. Several men named by Mr Ryan will be subpoenaed by Frank Hodgins, K.C., and they will be questioned with regard to the manner in which the bank charter was secured. It is expected that the commission will hold sittings in Ottawa on the 17th and 18th of this month.

RAIN CHECKS BAD FIRES

Opportune Shower Helpful in Nova Scotia.

Halifax, July 12.—Forest fires have been burning in the areas owned by Lewis Miller and others on the south shore of Nova Scotia, thirty miles from Halifax. Gangs of men have been at work day and night trying to beat back the fire. Yesterday morning they concluded they could do no more, and application was made for assistance to the military. This request was complied with and last evening 300 men, under Col. Fafes, were ordered to proceed to the scene.

A special train was made ready and the men would have started at seven o'clock last night. A heavy downpour of rain came between three and five o'clock, however, and the situation was changed, so that in the meantime the order for the troops was cancelled.

Shortly before three o'clock yesterday afternoon a blaze started on the outside of the Intercolonial freight shed at Point Tupper, and before a stream of water could be directed on it the building was all in flames. The fire spread to the station, then to the coal shed, and on to the two transfer piers, destroying, as it went, a score of loaded and unloaded freight cars. The loss to the Intercolonial will be more than $100,000. The fire destroyed the Embree and Dundley Hotels and six or seven residences.

Toronto, July 12.—A continuous downfall of rain in New Ontario has probably been the means of averting many serious forest fires. Reports have been received by the Government of fires which have made small clearings during the past two weeks, but their sweep has been stopped by the rain. Forest fires have started in all parts of the undeveloped territory, but in no cases have they been of a serious nature because of the rain.

MISS STRACHAN IS IN LEAD FOR TEACHERS' PRESIDENT

MRS. ELLA FLAGG YOUNG

Miss Grace C. Strachan

A struggle for the control of the National Educational Association is now going on in Chicago. There are thousands of teachers expected to align themselves in support of Miss Grace C. Strachan, of New York, styled by her supporters the "progressive" candidate for president of the association. Miss Strachan is the candidate of 14,000 New York teachers, and is said to have the support of Mrs. Ella F. Young, Superintendent of Public Schools of Chicago.

BRITISH AND CANADIAN MINISTERS ON THE NAVY

Informal Session Occurs In London and Is Adjourned For a Week—Press Comments on Premier Borden's Speech at Colonial Institute Show Widespread Approval of His Stand on Naval Policy.

London, July 12.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—With Premier Asquith presiding, flanked on the right and left by Canadian Ministers, the committee on Imperial defence, which is ultimately to decide Canada's participation in the naval policy of the Empire, opened yesterday. Sir John Fisher, Sir Edward Grey, Sir John French, Col. Seely, Earl Crewe, Secretary of India; Sir Richard Haldane, Lloyd-George, Lewis Harcourt and several minor officials, were present.

The meeting was largely an informal one, and little progress was made. The next meeting takes place next week, and thereafter by-weekly meetings will be held.

British Press on Borden.

London, July 12.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Commenting on Hon. R. L. Borden's address at the Royal Colonial Institute, The Times declares that the speech assures Mr. Borden place in English esteem as a leading, trusted, and inspiring figure in the great arena of affairs. The paper unqualifiedly approve his declaration that Canada will work towards the supremacy of Britain in the seas by the maintenance of a single fleet. The Times prints the speech in full.

The Standard uses such phrases as, "Tumultuous welcome," "Splendid speech, which delighted its hearers," "The last pitch of enthusiasm inspiring his audience," "His strong, rugged, and forceful manner captured his hearers, embodied in which were strong, sunburned faces upturned to the speaker with eagerness." The paper editorially accepts as the basic condition that Canada must have a proper share in directing the armaments, and anticipates the solution of the question within a few months.

Added interest is given Mr. Borden's utterance at the dinner heartily endorsing the proposal that Canada join the Mother country in celebrating the century of peace between Great Britain and the United States by reason of his having called on Whitelaw Reid, American ambassador, on Wednesday morning.

"I have received assurances," he said, "which I have every reason to believe, that the American people are also desirous of worthily celebrating with you the century of peace."

Premier Borden lunched with Joseph Chamberlain yesterday.

HAVE AGENT IN WINNIPEG

Toronto, July 12.—James Parnell of St Catharines has been appointed market commissioner for Western Canada by the Ontario Government. His headquarters will be in Winnipeg, where Mr. Parnell will keep in touch with the market conditions on the prairies and keep Ontario fruit farmers informed, so that they may sell their fruit at the proper time and to the greatest advantage.

The appointment was made on the recommendation of Percy W. Hodgetts, head of the fruit branch of the Department of Agriculture. Mr. Parnell is a practical fruit farmer, one of the most efficient in this business in the province. He is engaged by the Government during the shipping period, which lasts about four months and a half during the year.

This is a distinctly new move by the Government and will undoubtedly prove of great value to all fruit-growers who ship their wares to the western provinces, east of the Rockies. Mr. Parnell, although stationed at Winnipeg, will not lose sight of the other markets on the prairies. He will communicate with Hodgetts by a weekly letter and circulars giving facts of conditions, prices, etc., will be sent to all growers in the province. Mr. Parnell leaves for the west today.

English, Burnt River, barn struck and burned to ground; John Sisson of Bethany, valuable horse killed; John O'Brien, Downeyville, house struck and two daughters severely burned; H. A. Rogers of Mariposa, two horses killed by lightning.

Relief For Sweltering Gotham.

New York, July 12.—"A tendency to cooler," which the weather officials promised materialized last night with a drop of about 20 degrees from the maximum of the week's hot spell. At 7 o'clock last night the thermometer registered 75 and cool breezes which followed a thunder shower gave the millions of city dwellers hope of a comfortable night's rest.

Before the relief came, however, the week's list of deaths ascribed to the heat was increased by eight, and the prostrations by more than a score. The weather officials predict continuance of the cooler tendency to-day.

ROOSEVELTITES IN ASSEMBLY

Committee Confers Regarding the New Organization.

New York, July 12.—Representatives of the National Progressive party in New York state held a meeting here yesterday to formulate plans for a party organization along lines that they hope will prove effective. Two committees were appointed by W. H. Hotchkiss, former superintendent of insurance and now the provisional head of the progressive party in New York, to draft plans for organization both here and in counties and cities up-state.

There were two score or more representatives of the new party from up-state and from the boroughs of this city who responded to Mr. Hotchkiss' call.

Among those present were: Oscar Straus, former secretary of commerce and labor; Gen. Daniel E. Sickels, ex-Lieutenant-Governor T. L. Woodruff, Prof. Kirchwey of the Columbia Law School, Senator Horatio King, former State Senator Davenport, and Theodore Douglass Robinson of Herkimer.

Mr. Woodruff told the conference that the King's County members of the new party included many members of the regular Republican organization, together with several former state senators and assemblymen. He declared that the movement did not need impetus, but direction.

Not Stealing From Taft.

Oyster Bay, N.Y., July 12—"No honest man who was put on as a Republican elector at the primaries last spring can fail to record his vote against Mr. Taft."

This was Col. Roosevelt's reply yesterday to the charge that the new party is violating its precept, "Thou shalt not steal," by the announced intention of having Republican electors in certain states vote against him.

"There is always something refreshing," said he, "when a pickpocket seeks to distract attention from himself by raising the cry 'Stop thief' with reference to the man whose pocket he has picked. I have been immensely amused by the upholders of the fraud of the Republican convention speaking about stolen Presidential electors."

UNDESIRABLES ARE DEPORTED

Over Four Hundred Sent Back to the United States.

Toronto, July 21.—During the past eight months the provincial police have arrested and deported 422 undesirables to the United States. This is a record number of deportations, as during the entire twelve months of the preceding year there were only 500 people not wanted on this side who crossed the border and perforce crossed back. Last month there were 62 deportations, and in May 77.

Most of these undesirables are hoboes, who ride across the frontier on the "bumpers" and are usually picked up in the railway yards and immediately handed over by the provincial police to the immigration authorities. A great number of them are foreigners who have lived on the American side for a few years. The chief points of entry are at the international boundary, Niagara Falls, Fort Erie, Sarnia and Sault Ste. Marie. The Soo has proved the principal dumping-off point for these wayfarers, there having been a record broken there for the arrival of undesirables during the past year.

Provincial police are always watching the railway yards on the frontier for hoboes, many of whom arrive every day by the box car route. On very few occasions do they stay long in the country. In order to deport them, it is only necessary to hand them over to the immigration authorities.

RADIALS COLLIDE TEN ARE HURT

Rochester, N.Y., July 12.—Two cars on the Buffalo, Lockport and Rochester Railway collided head-on at Youngs, one mile west of Brockport, shortly before two o'clock yesterday afternoon. Ten persons were more or less seriously injured and all the passengers were shaken up. Physicians were hurried to the scene from Brockport. No fatalities are reported.

Wanted on Serious Charge.

London, Ont., July 12.—Alfred Hall, a drayman of this city, failed to put in an appearance in police court yesterday to answer a charge of indecent assault upon a young girl. Bail had been furnished to the amount of $3,000 by his wife and from another substantial source. It is thought that he has not left the city and he is now being hunted for.

LIBERALS ARE UPHELD IN SASKATCHEWAN ELECTIONS

Lorimer's Impassioned Defence.

Washington, July 12.—The Senate took a recess at 3.30 p.m. until ten o'clock this morning, when Senator Lorimer concludes his speech and a vote probably will be taken. The end of yesterday's session was brought about by the Senator's weakened physical condition.

In the course of his defence, Senator Lorimer said he was the victim of a newspaper plot, or as he termed it, "the trust press."

"Hearst, Lawrence, Lawson, McCormick and Kohlsaat—these are the men responsible for the sentiment in the country to-day," cried Mr. Lorimer.

LATEST ON ELECTIONS

Special to the Review.

Regina, Sask., July 12—Late returns from outlying constituencies to-day, show an increased majority for the Scott Government. At noon is stood Liberals 35, Conservatives 10, doubtful 7, postponed 2. The doubtful are Kindersley, Moosejaw county, Morse Pipestone, Pinter Creek, Quill Plains and Shelbrook. These may not be heard from for several days, as storms are interfering with telephones, but little interest is attached to the results, so overwhelming has been the government victory.

TORONTO LADY DIES FROM BURNS

Special to the Review.

Toronto, June 12—Mrs. John Honan Jarvis street, died at the hospital this morning as the result of burns, sustained through the explosion of a can of kerosine with which she endeavored to start the kitchen fire last night. Her husband who was badly burned, when he came to her rescue, is in a serious condition.

Regina, July 12.—The Scott Government has been sustained in this province, and, according to the latest returns available, the Conservative Government has only secured five seats—a Liberal gain of 4.

The Liberals claims 32 seats, while they conceded only five to their opponents. This claim allowed for two in doubt and nine not heard from. Haultain, the Conservative leader, on last reports, has two of a majority in South Qu'Appelle. He has had the fight of his life, and the Liberals still claim his defeat by 51. A recount will probably be demanded. Conservative strongholds like Souris, Last Mountain, Pipestone and Moose Mountain, where the previous majority was large, have been captured by the Liberals.

Kuntz's Lager

It's More Refreshing

"Did you ever notice how much more refreshing Kuntz's Original Lager is than ordinary lagers?" remarked a man to a friend, as they were enjoying a bottle the other day. "Yes," replied his friend, who, by the way, was a physician, "and the reason is because Kuntz's Original Lager is brewed from naturally pure spring water, instead of ordinary or city waters which require to be artificially or chemically purified."

Let your next bottle be Kuntz's Original Lager. See how much more enjoyable and refreshing is this famous spring-water lager. 66

THE TURPENTINE WOODS

There are upwards of a dozen Chiefs of Police from the State of Florida attending the International Convention now in session in Toronto, but so far not one of them has read a paper or taken any part in the discussion of those already submitted. As these men represent what is probably the most infamous system of penology in the civilized world to-day any remarks from them would have a peculiar interest, not only for their brother officers but for the Christian world as well. Only the other day the public was shocked by the disclosure made in the rubber country in South America. In the turpentine woods of Florida conditions are little or any better.

For any offence against the law except the misdemeanor disposed of in the police courts, or the crimes punished by death, prisoners in Florida are sent to work in the turpentine woods, being hired to contractors at the rate of $28 a month, including board, clothing and medical attendance. This method forms one of the chief sources of the state's revenue.

The contractor then proceeds to wring from the convict the last there is in him in the shape of labor. If he dies before his term is up from overwork or any other cause, the contract made in his case with the state becomes void. If, however, the convict escapes the contractor is compelled to pay the state the $28 a month for his services until the expiration of the term for which he was sentenced. Extra care is taken, accordingly to prevent loss in this direction.

An armed guard is placed over every ten convicts, every one of the latter besides being shackled, being compelled to work from sunrise until sunset in a tropical climate, regardless of the state of the weather or his physical fitness, a certain amount of labor is exacted from every man. If he fails in this, if he "sasses" his guard, he is turned over to the professional whipper, a human monster armed with a strap like a harness tug, leaded at one end, which he uses upon the unfortunate prisoner until his own or the victim's power of endurance are exhausted. This punishment is inflicted upon the slightest pretext and with no official inquiry following the recommendation of the guard.

If the convict escapes, as before stated, the contractor is still responsible to the state for his wages, but if he is killed in an attempt to break away, the contrast is of no further effect. Consequently every guard who kills a fleeing prisoner is allowed a bonus of $10. Guards anxious to add to their earnings sometimes connive at an escape, then with the deadly rifle kill the fleeing prisoner and so enrich themselves at the expense of human life.

Whites and negroes are herded together, the latter being worse off, ten times over, than in the days of slavery, where the property interest the owner had in his slave secured the latter at least a degree of physical care.

The visiting Chiefs of Police as the guests of the Ontario Government, are inspecting the Prison Farm at Guelph to-day. It would certainly be interesting to know what the Florida contingent of the visitors think of the humane methods that are employed there. While they are not directly responsible for the system of punishment in their own state they at least stand for it by holding office under it.

THE COURT AND REPORTERS

Newspaper reporters in Toronto complain that the members of the Board of Control sit close together and talk in low tones and that it is difficult to report their proceedings. As the Board is a public body the protest will probably have an effect and more consideration be given to the reporters. But could anything be done to assist the reporters in the courts? The judge sits on a high bench and when the lawyers stand in front and address the court in low tones the newspaper men, sitting back some distance behind the lawyers' table are entirely "out of it." Canadian courts are open courts, but that is not enough when important proceedings cannot be heard. Of course, there is no intention to prevetn the reporters from hearing, but very frequently they cannot hear, and a case may be called, discussed and even decided without any besides those engaged in it and the officials clearly hearing what has occurred. This leads to mistakes that are sometimes annoying, but inevitable.

THE MINISTERS IN ENGLAND

The attention that has been given in the English papers to the visit of the Canadian Ministers, has more than one cause. The importance of the over-seas dominion, and of Canada is the most important of Them. s being more thoroughly appreciated as knowledge of them has become more general. And it is recognised that these dominions are a source of strength to the Empire, and may be called upon to assist in maintaining the position of the Empire. One cannot see the efforts made to be prepared for emergencies, and at the same time the frequent diplomatic visits of English statesmen to the continent on missions of peace, without recognizing that these efforts would not be made if there were not a reason for them. A war cloud continually hovers over Europe. It may not be large enough or black enough to be visible in all its terror to the ordinary observer, but the perturbed condition of mind of those who do know and are responsible, shows that the situation is full of danger. Under these circumstances, the actions the dominions will take towards preparing to give aid when needed, is of great interest to the Imperial statesmen and well-informed journalists. The policy of the Canadian Government in this matter, has not been fully outlined. Mr. Borden has stated that he and his colleagues will confer with the Imperial authorities and will decide upon information received at the foundation of such knowledge and the after exchanging views with the Admiralty. Such a conference will have important results and while the visit of Mr. Borden and his fellow ministers would at any time attract attention, their visit at the present time has added interest on account of the matters of weight that will be dealt with. It is known that the Canadian Government is desirous of carrying out the wishes of the Canadian people by co-operating with the Mother Land, in matters of defence, and that they desire to do so in a manner that will be effective. Their successful championship of the Imperial as opposed to the Continental idea, in the elections last year has also made them interesting figures in England, and it is not surprising that more attention and more newspaper space is given to their visit, than has before been given to the visits of members of the Canadian Government.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Mr. Roosevelt seems inclined to no longer be an "adjunct" of the Republican party.

When Mr. Rowell invited Sir James Whitney to adopt his policy, did he expect that its acceptance would carry with it a place for him in the Cabinet?

The Chicago Record-Herald says: "It is easy to accept another man's opinions when you want him to grant you a favor." But, you see, Sir James was not looking for any favor from Mr. Rowell.

Two years is a long time for a criminal trial to last, but the result of the Camorrists trial in Italy is satisfactory. The verdict of guilty and the heavy sentences shows that the jury and judge were men of courage.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Lower—Liv Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, July 11.—Hints that rust had appeared in the northwest to-day unsettled prices of wheat, but the reports were too few and vague for a genuine scare. The Liverpool market closed to-day unchanged to ⅛d higher than yesterday on wheat, and ⅛d higher on corn. Buda-Pest wheat closed ⅜c lower; Paris unchanged to ½c higher; Berlin, ⅜c lower.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, July 11.—There was a fairly good enquiry from European sources for Manitoba spring wheat, but owing to the advance of 1c to 1½c per bushel, Nos. 4, 5 and 6 wheat in Winnipeg, the foreign prices were all out of line. The foreign demand for oats is steady and the volume of business done so far this week amounts to 200,000 bushels for July-August shipment. The local market is steady with a fair demand for car lots. The export trade in flour is quiet, but a fair domestic business is doing. A firmer feeling prevails in the market for bran under a good demand. The butter market is easy, owing to the falling off in the demand. Cheese is fairly active and steady. Demand for eggs is fair. Provisions active.

CHAPTER XVI.

Baron Zollern had been a mighty man at home in Germany. Stories of his strength and his tremendous deeds were table-talk from Mainz to Dantzic, and it was even said that his great countryman, Eugene Sandow, would have found it no easy task to cope with the baron in physical achievement. The baron, however, was now in the position of a man who tries to hold a wildcat with each hand, and even his strength might have proved insufficient to restrain the kicking, slugging captives had not half a dozen husky fellows—Germans, every one of them—sprung up as if by magic all around the trio. Surrounded and outnumbered, the boys had sense enough to quit fighting, and stood gasping, disheveled, glaring at the baron and his retinue. Zollern, still smiling, in spite of painful bruises on shins and countenance, eyed the prisoners for a moment and then spoke in a tone of the utmost friendship and good-humor.

"Vy so unruly, young chentlemen? Vat haf I efer done dot you should be so abusif?"

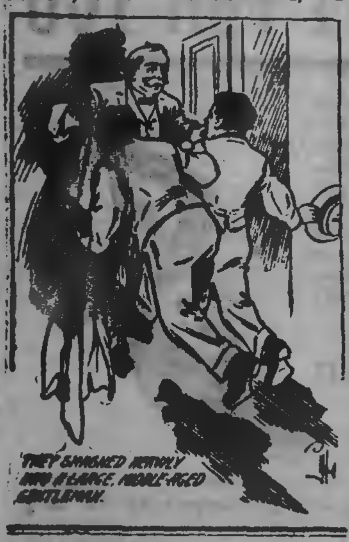
"You have done enough," snapped Brockett, "to get yourself put away for years to come—you have proved yourself a German spy, and even this country doesn't deal very gently with that kind of yellow dogs. Give me back my messages, and let me go, or you'll know what a jail looks like from the inside."

Baron Zollern laughed amusedly.

"How could I," he gurgled, "gif you back your documents ven I haf dem not got meinself as yet? I exbect dot I vill haf dem in a very few minids, und den ve vill see apout gifing dem back stretty. At bresent, I haf dem not, so vy such excitations?"

"You are a liar," snarled Solano. "The papers were stolen not five minutes ago, and you have them in your pocket now."

"No, no, aber nit," chuckled the baron. "Gif me time. De bapers vill be here, in mein own liddle hand, in a few minids, but vy andicibate? Two off you men search de clodings of dese young men, und bring me vatefer documents dere may be concealed derein."



"THEY SMASHED HEAVILY INTO A LARGE, MIDDLE-AGED GENTLEMAN.

"You don't need to search," said Brockett. "Some of your thieves took the papers from my coat a few minutes ago. Fished for them over the transom, and got them. It was a nice trick—one I suppose I ought to give you credit for."

"Fished for dem? Ofer de transom?" queried the baron. "No indeet. Dot iss not de vay I intendet to aguire dose documents. Not at all. It vos my intenchuns to make you de very fair offer for de bapers. If you vos so insensate as to refuse, den I could take dem forcibly—but fish for dem ofer de transom? Vot craciness iss diss, my friendt?"

Zollern's men emerged from the room, bearing whatever clothing Brockett and Solano had left behind. They reported that nothing of any interest had been found, and a quick search of the prisoners turned up no papers of any special value. Baron Zollern's face wore a bewildered look, and began to cloud portentously as he turned upon his captives.

"You haf hidden de bapers," he purred, ominously. "Berhaps ve can find vays und means to induce you to discofer dem?"

"I have told you, you German sneak-thief," snarled Brockett, "how the papers were stolen. Ask your men which one of them went fishing through the transom, and you will have the one who got the messages."

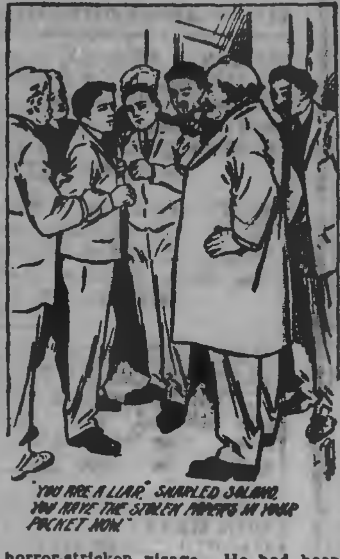
Baron Zollern walked over to the door of the room where the boys had slept. He studied the panels, the floor, the carpet leading from the doorway. He dragged a chair to the door, stood upon it, and examined the transom. Then he returned to the wondering group again, his face a strange commingling of purple, white and crimson.

"It iss as you haf said," he rumbled, half-chokingly. "Somebody, climbing on a chair, fished ofer dot transom. Let me see your coat. Ah-h—ya, ya, dere iss de blace vere a hook caught in de fabric. You haf told de truth. You vere robbed by a skilful fisherman, mit a line und hook, oberated drough de transom. It vos clefer vork."

"Some one of your people," exclaimed Solano. "Why don't you get the papers from him, if you are so wild about them?"

The baron turned his mottled, anguished face upon the speaker. "Young chentlemen," he cried, raising his right hand on high, "as dere iss a Gott, as I lofe und honor de Cherman kaiser, no man off mein hass done dis ting. De drick hass been bulled off by somevon else, somevon to whom dose babers vas as valuable as to me or you. Ve haf both been fooled, und I am de bigger fool off two fools."

There was no mistaking the ring of honesty in the German's voice. There was no mistaking the look upon his horror-stricken visage. He had been baffled at his own game, and, in the very trap he had prepared, had been beaten to the prize by some unknown scoundrel. Brockett, heartsick and desperate, could almost sympathize, in the midst of his own troubles, with the disappointed Teuton. For several minutes Baron Zollern, clenching and unclenching his hands, the mottled colors playing back and forth across his face, leaned heavily against the wall. Then he shook himself together, and forced a grim smile to his lips.



"YOU ARE A LIAR," SNARLED SOLANO. "YOU HAVE THE STOLEN PAPERS IN YOUR POCKET NOW."

"I blanned it veil, young chentlemen," said he. "You vonder how it vos dot I could do such tings in dis hotel? Dot vos easy—but vearvully exbensife. Last nighd, before you had been in de blace an hour, I bought de hotel. Made de acquaintance off de brobrietor. Told him I musd make an investment, musd make it, Himmel, so sudden! Asked him de brice off de hotel. Ach, but he vos, mit himself, mosd liberal! Den und dere I laid down de money, de grisp American bills; vitin half an hour I vos in full bossession off de house, vit some faithful employes at my gommand. Id vos de quickest dransaction in hotel brobertiea on record, ya? Und id vos all for de good burbose—und id vos all vasted."

"Can't say we are sorry for your troubles," spoke up Solano. "The question is—what are you going to do with us?"

Baron Zollern shrugged his wide shoulders. "I belief," said he, "dot ve musd gome to a gombromise. You haf losd your documents. I haf not segured dem. Ve are both in, vot you call id—a defil of a fix."

"In all probability," cut in Brockett, "your dear friend, Yazimoto, has the papers now."

"If so," sighed Baron Zollern, "dot does me no goot—apsoludely no goot. Mein young friendts, nations change deir alliances even as men change dem. Herr Yazimoto und meinself haf no longer induresds in gommon. To him, your documents are off exceeding value—und to me as veil—aber, neider off us now wishes to share dem mit de oder."

ALEUTS OF ALASKA.

Their Miserable Lives and the Famous Baskets They Weave.

The Aleuts occupy the island peninsula of Alaska and number about 1,000. Three hundred are well cared for at the seal islands; the balance have nothing left but fish, a few foxes and the basket industry. These people occupy the most western portion of our country, being in 172 degrees east longitude and from thence eastward to Unimak pass, a distance of about 800 miles, making less than one person to the mile. The time was when they were employed to kill seals; also their tribe supplied the men that manned the sea otter boats and killed that most valuable of furs. These furs are practically a thing of the past, and the government has prohibited both the whites and the natives from killing any of them. This is not adding greatly to their troubles, for these fur animals of the sea are now so scarce as to be of little benefit to the Aleuts any more. The basket industry is now their chief support.

Their baskets, though the finest in any market, bring them less than one-fourth the retail price, and provisions sell to them at about three times the cost. A woman will work two weeks to make a basket and then get $2 for it, pay 75 cents for a pound of tea, 20 cents for a pound of sugar and 7 cents a pound for flour, and what for clothing? The father can get a few fish to dry and gather a few drift sticks as thrown up by the sea, as no timber is found on the islands. In winter he catches a very few blue foxes, perhaps four or five, at $6 each. Curio seekers pay fabulous prices for an Aleut basket, which is in truth one of the best that can be had, the most artistic, the finest weave and the most beautiful of design. One of the prettiest baskets I ever secured came from the house of a widow at the figure of $2.50, a full two weeks' work.—Christian Herald.

A fierce riot broke out on the Surrey Docks, London, when the dock strikers attempted to interfere with an equal number of strike-breakers.

LINCOLN'S MOTHER.

A friend requests me to give for publication, if I can do so, a sketch of the family of Nancy Hanks, the mother of Abraham Lincoln. She tells me she has read every history of Abraham Lincoln and considers it very strange that nothing has ever been written by the historians of the president's mother, except that her name was Nancy Hanks.

The historians never made any effort to trace the pedigree of the family. Raymond, in his "Life and State Papers of Abraham Lincoln," declares nothing is known concerning her ancestry or early life. He merely mentions that she was a Virginian by birth. The name Hanks is rare in America, yet we have a straighter line on the pedigree of the Hankses than we have of the Lincolns. Beyond the grandfather of Abe Lincoln, we know absolutely nothing of the family pedigree.

The earliest account we have of the Hankses is their first appearance in Gloucester county, Va., in 1673. In deed book No. 6, land grants, page 472, 1673, is recorded the grant of 204 acres to Thomas Hanks. And on page 476, same year, 1673, is recorded a patent to Thomas Hanks for 500 acres. In the early colonial history of Virginia a person who paid for the passage of a person who came to settle in Virginia was entitled to a land grant of several hundred acres. This was why he was given a grant of land. The patent of 500 acres which is recorded was land paid for in cash or tobacco, which was the circulating medium in Virginia. In course of time the family increased and emigrated westward. We next hear of them in Orange county, 140 miles west of Gloucester. Among the marriages recorded in Orange courthouse on March 26, 1803, is Rodney Hanks, son of Reuben and Elizabeth Hanks, to Alice Chandler. But they didn't stop at Orange courthouse. We find a family of them in Rockingham county, Va., in 1790, and another in Shenandoah county. In 1780 Abraham Lincoln, grandfather of President Lincoln, removed to Kentucky from Rockingham county, Va., and we are certain that the Hanks family was with the Lincolns during that journey. The next account we have of the Hankses is in 1806. In that year, in Kentucky, Thomas Lincoln, father of the president, married Nancy Hanks.

The next account of the Hankses was at the battle of Tippecanoe, in Indiana, Nov. 7, 1811. We find the names of Peter and James Hanks. Peter was killed. He was a member of Captain Berry's company of militia from Kentucky. James belonged to a company of mounted riflemen and was from Kentucky. They may have been brothers, and if so I am certain they were the brothers of Nancy Hanks. In six years after the battle of Tippecanoe Thomas Lincoln removed from Kentucky to Indiana.—Des Moines Register.

2800 ORANGEMEN IN ANNUAL PARADE

Splendid Turnout of L. O. L. for Celebration of 222nd Anniversary---One Hour in Passing---Many Thousands of Visitors in the City

The fife and drum, the Orange sash and gay decorations give every evidence to-day that the 222nd anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne is being auspiciously celebrated in this, the Electric City.

The attractive appearance of the business section of the city is being commented on freely by the visiting Orangemen, who are delighted with the cordial welcome extended to them.

OLD MEMBERS AND NEW ONES

There are L.O.L. members in the city to-day who have not missed the annual walk, since they were old enough to know the true significance of the principles of the Order. There are others in their first walk as recent years have witnessed the inception of many new lodges, while members have been added to others old in years, and doing an active part for the cause of Protestantism.

SOME CAME LAST EVENING.

Early last evening, the visitors began to arrive in the city by regular trains, and to-day the order was specials, some of which were double-headers. Most of the lodges were largely represented, and on the march from the station, to the music of the fife and drum, made an excellent appearance.

On every available space, prominent before the crowds, are refreshment booths, where a big business has been conducted during the day. The matter of accommodation and and meals was well looked after, and the innerman's wants could receive attention at any time. By noon, the city was thronged with visitors and it was difficult at times to find one's way along the pavement.

By noon all of the lodges had arrived in Peterborough, and the crowds will be the largest in attendance at an Orange celebration for many years.

In the early afternoon the different lodges assembled at Victoria Park and promptly at two o'clock, the procession, marshalled by Bros. McWilliams and Kindred, wended its way along the route mapped out. There were 2,800 in the parade, including the bands, and the walk was of one hour's duration. On arrival at Victoria Park again the speeches were commenced.

The parade was made up of Kilties' Band.

ORANGEMEN AT BELFAST

Special to the Review.

Belfast, Ireland, July 12. — Fifty thousand Orangemen drenched by torrential rain, celebrated the anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne here to-day. The only exciting incident was when two hundred young Nationalists attempted to tear down an Orange flag and precipitating stone throwing. The conflict was quickly quelled by the police.

BROCK IN THE FINAL

Special to the Review.

Stockholm, July 12— G. M. Brock Toronto, qualified for the semi-final four hundred metre flat race in the tenth heat of the try-outs this morning. Albert L. Gutterson, University of Vermont, broke the Olympic record for the running long jump in his first attempt, clearing twenty-four feet eleven inches or five inches over the previous record.

Strange London Book Censorship.

Among the books which the London county council education committee recommended for removal from the requisition list for evening schools, on the ground that some of them are out of date, some are no longer required and in others the demand had been very small, are the following:

"Autocrat of the Breakfast Table."
"Essays of Elia."
"Hereward the Wake."
"Lays of Ancient Rome."
"Mill on the Floss."
"Westward Ho!"—London News.

Switzerland's Tourist Traffic.

The Swiss government is being urged to create a federal office to supplement the society now engaged in the promotion of the tourist traffic which is maintained by the various cantonal governments and to expend $200,000 a year in attracting tourists. With the $800,000 which the railways, hotels and local development spend each year for the same purpose, this would mean an expenditure of $1,000,000 a year for the encouragement of a trade which annually brings many millions into the country.

DROWNING ACCIDENT

Young Son of Mr. Fred Feeley Lost His Life Near Crawfords Grove

The young son of Mr. Fred Feeley, an employe of the Peterborough Light and Power Co., and residing on Romaine street, was drowned in the river near Crawford's Grove this afternoon. This is the fourth bereavement for Mr. Feeley during the past two years, one daughter having been killed at the Park street crossing of the G.T.R. Two other children died some time later.

WAR CLOUDS AND GOLD.

A Peep Behind the Scenes in the European Diplomatic Drama.

When England, France and Germany were milling around, trying to make up their minds whether the Moroccan affair was good enough as an excuse to bring about the long anticipated war, there was trouble in the Bank of Paris. Gold was seeping out of the bank at every pore. Every night there was a bad looking balance, which was worse than the war scare to the managers. In six weeks the bank's holdings of gold fell off more than $20,000,000. It was $57,000,000 less than in the same period of a year ago.

The reason for it was that the shopkeeper, the peasant farmer, the civil servant, the thousand and one kinds of small investor took thought for the morrow. They knew that if German troops crossed the French borders their stocks and bonds, their deposits and loans would have a poor show. So they sold stocks and bonds, they withdrew their deposits and called loans. Then, cashing paper money into gold, they put the precious possession where, in their opinion, it was in least danger—under the doorsills and in the cellar.

It is said that when the Bank of France informed the ministry about the draining treasury the tone of the communications to Berlin became suddenly mild and conciliatory. The war clouds passed over, and not a stroke of lightning struck.

It is the "law of diminishing returns," according to economists, which makes war. The law of a diminishing gold supply probably prevented one a little while ago.—Toledo Blade.

There were five deaths from heat at Pittsburg yesterday, and two men were killed by lightning.

Probably if everybody had to pay $2 to vote, like going to the theatre everybody would go to the polls.

BILL MINER'S STORY OF HIS RECENT ESCAPE

Toomsboro, Ga., July 12.—A harrowing tale of exposure to moccasins and rattlesnakes was told by "Old Bill" Miner, who was taken back to Milledgeville and the state farm last week.

Miner was captured at three o' in the northwestern suburbs of Toomsboro, by Marshal J. E. Meadows, Jr. Wiggins was captured by Mr. McDonald, of Milledgeville, a few hours later, within 100 or 200 yards of the place. Miner was captured asleep in the thicket. McDonald carried Wiggins and Miner by automobile back to the prison farms.

OLD BILL'S STORY.

Here is Miner's story:

"I escaped the last Thursday night in June, accompanied by Wm Wiggins and Widencamp. We made our way to the banks of the Oconee river and went down stream in search of a boat upon which we were to embark. My intentions was to reach the coast and escape to a foreign country.

"We had only one pole, and the river was very swift, the water overflowing the banks and making it very difficult to steer. Saturday night at 1 o'clock one of the many snags capsized our boat, throwing us adrift in a strong current, with floating debris, none large enough to hold our weight. Widencamp, not being able to swim, sank to a watery grave. Wiggins and myself eventually reached the bank, after the worst struggle with water I have ever experienced.

"If suffering is atonement for a person's sins, we certainly ought to be forgiven for all we ever committed.

RATTLESNAKE SWAMP.

"Imagine our horror, when we reached the banks, to find a swamp thick with cane, briars and covered with water. We struggled through the best we could, more often swimming than walking, coming sometimes back to the same place we started from. What land we found uncovered was occupied by moccasins, and often we could hear the buzzing of the deadly rattlesnake.

"The pangs of hunger were fierce, and the only food we could find was blackberries, upon which we lived from Saturday night at 12 o'clock until Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, when we reached the hills, found a negro house, and purchased food, pledging him to keep our secret.

"I suppose he gave us away, and I hope he will some time get lost in that same swamp, and experience the agony we suffered.

AM AN OLD MAN.

"I am an old man, 70 years of age, harmless, and cannot stand the strenuous life. Consequently I am to-day on the inside looking out, and I had rather be here than in the Oconee river swamp.

"I will not say where we secured help to escape. They will look after me so close I do not see any chance for further escape. No one can describe the pans of hunger. As I sit here eating, it seems they cannot be satisfied. This glass of milk deserves a toast. Here's to the first beverage I ever drank, and I hope that it will be the last.

"Some people think I am a rich man. That is not true. I have handled lots of money, but gave it away to poor people.

"This is the vestige of life. I will go back and take it as I found it. I wish you all well. Good-bye."

SEA SERPENT SAID TO BE ACTIVE IN LAKE COUCHICHING AND SIMCOE

Orillia, July 12.—The sea serpent is here again. At various times it has been an open question whether or not these waters are the home of some heideous, dragonish monster. Eyewitnesses have affirmed that they have seen the terrible thing in both Lake Couchiching and Lake Simcoe. This was some years ago.

But there it is again. It was seen in Lake Couchiching about a mile out from Orillia wharf on Thursday afternoon by Elijah Yellowhead, eldest son of the late celebrated head Chief Yellowhead of the Objiway Nation, who is a level headed and substantial Indian not easily frightened. He was paddling across the lake to Orillia from Rama when the head of a large monster suddenly shot out of the water within a few feet of the canoe. The head looked a golden yellow in color and was about 20 inches in width. Mr. Yellowhead and a close view of the monster. He didn't stop to investigate, however, but dipped his paddle in the water and hiked away from it with all his strength.

When he arrived in Orillia he related his experience to ex-Mayor Goffatt and seemed to be considerably agitated by the sight of the monster, so much so that the return home across the lake again did not seem particularly pleasing to him.

That some monster of the deep inhabits these waters there is little doubt. It has been seen on different occasions for a number of years and bob up serenely at different times before the astonished gaze of a much frightened spectator. The last appearance of the sea-serpent was at Barrie about ten years ago, when it was seen by several people, who said it had a head resembling a horse and was about 10 feet long.

INSANE MAN THREW TWO MEN FROM THE RIG

Port Hope, July 12.—Magistrate White can now sympathise with unfortunates who are placed behind the iron bars, for this morning he spent fifteen minutes in the local jail. He had to go there to interview a young man from Lawdley, who is charged with being insane and dangerous to be at large. The unfortunate man complained of being ill on Monday, and during the night his one desire was to dance and sing. On Tuesday and Wednesday he became violent and drove his mother and brother out of the house. Dr. Turner of Baileiboro, and Dr. Beatty, of Garden Hill, were called and they recommended that he be taken away. He was driven in last night, and acted very quietly, until the C.N.R. bridge was reached, when he threw both men out of the rig. Through considerable persuasion, he was taken to the Town Hall and locked up.

He wandered about his cell, nearly all night, and his main desire was to wash his feet, and Constable Chesher states that he must have washed his feet at least thirty time during the night.

BUSY BEES TOOK SECOND GAME WITH PETES AFTER TWELVE INNINGS STRUGGLE

Tracey Was Biffed for Four Runs in the First — Byrnes' Homer in the Seventh Tied the Score—Champions Hit Their Way to Victory in the Twelfth and Blanked the Petes.

Twelve innings of various grades of baseball, interspersed with decisions by his umps, that made the crowd one time glad and another time mad, was the program at Riverside Park yesterday afternoon.

It was a great bill-o'-fare, in which the fans saw the Berliners take an early lead only to be overtaken in the seventh by the Petes. Then came all kinds of excitement till the twelfth when the champions won out by getting to the delivery of Johnny Derr, who had replaced Tracey in the first after four runs had been gathered by the Dutch company.

Deacon Pearson had the time of his life and was the centre of a hostile demonstration following the exit of the big crowd. His umps, however, smiled serenely, and didn't budge.

The only decision which looked real bad from the press box was when Rowan was out at first in the tenth. Deneau got his grounder, but certainly did not touch the bag before he threw to second in an attempt to double Nasher.

This was a sore touch for the fans, especially after the Petes had made such a gallant up hill fight and had succeeded in evening up with the Bees. Ken Tracey's twisters were a cinch for the visitors, who pounded him for four runs in the very first round. Nemo Nasher assisted some by heaving a high one to Rowan, allowing the first man to perch on first. Altogether Nasher's work at short was of a very poor quality.

Derr pitched an elegant brand of ball till the twelfth, when he apparently weakened sufficiently to allow of Deneau's tribe taking the second game.

Connor had eight outs in centre field, or a total of fifteen for the two fixtures.

xBeard batted for Derr in the twelfth.

Home run—Byrnes. Three base hit—Trout. Two base hit—Burns, Miller, Deneau. Sacrifice hit—Nasher, Swartz, Byrnes, Bullock, Reidy 2, Boyle. First base on balls—off Tracey in 2-3 innings 1; off Derr 1; off Bramble 5. Struck out—by Derr 2; by Bramble 8. Stolen base—Deneau, Miller. Left on bases—Peterborough 16, Berlin 9. Passed ball—Boyle. Hit by pitcher—by Derr 1. Umpire—Pearson.

THE SCORING.

Burns safe at first when Nasher threw high to Rowan, was sacrificed by Reidy. Bullock hit and both men counted on Deneau's long double. Deneau stole but Hesberger's hard drive was copped by Connor. Dinsmore walked and Miller's single through short scored Deneau. When Boyle's grounder took a bad hop from Byrnes, Dinsmore counted. With Derr pitching Bramble forced Miller at second.—Four hits, four runs.

* * *

Interference by Derr following Burns' grounder gave the batter a hit and the first bag. He was sacrificed by Reidy. Bullock's grounder went through Nasher. Deneau singled but was out going to second and while Bullock was caught at third, Burns' trip over the plate counted. Two hits, one run.

The Petes got one back in their half. Tully passed and sacrificed by Swartz and hit home by Byrnes' waft to left. Trout walked but Derr and Nasher filed out.

* * *

Miller worked in a double in the third but the Bees failed to score.

A timely hit by Swartz allowed White to tally, and the score was 5—2 for the champions.

* * *

Burns scored in the fourth, following his double, the run coming in while Bullock was being napped between second and third. There was no more scoring till the last of the sixth when Trout trippled to right and was hit in by Derr. A base on balls to Connor forced in Nasher.

* * *

Swartz's hit to left and Byrnes' home run in the seventh tied the score and the White Cap rooters went wild.

* * *

An error at short gave Nasher the bag in the tenth and when Deneau in his haste to complete a double following Rowan's grounder, failed to touch the bag by a foot, and then hit Nasher as he was getting into second it looked like a great chance for the Petes. Rowan, however, was called out at first, whereupon Mr. Deacon Pearson got his. White and Connors grounded out.

* * *

It all happened in the twelfth when Derr started proceedings by hitting Reidy. Bullock worked in a sacrifice and Deneau's single over second, scored Reidy. Hesberger grounded and Dinsmore was safe on a doubtful decision at first. Another hit over second by Miller scored Deneau.

Beard, hitting for Derr, fanned, Nasher grounded, Rowan singled but White ended the game with a fly to short.

BREEZES FROM THE DIAMOND

St. Thomas Times—Scout Kennedy of the Cleveland Americans was present at Wednesday's game at the Park, looking over several of the St. Thomas players. Wright, Kopp, Wilde and Powers were the ones up for inspection, and it would not surprise any of the fans to see some of these players go into the big league before the summer is over. Kennedy looked over Holwick at Brantford on Tuesday, and is said to be very favorably impressed with Harry.

Kopp and Wright showed up to best advantage on Wednesday. The former had four chances in the field and he judged them all beautifully, while Wright had a couple of difficult chances to handle and did more with them than any other third baseman in the league. Wilde made a great running catch back of first in the eighth and covered the bag well. Powers, however, had an off day.

If Kennedy picks anything from the Canadian League, it is safe betting he won't overlook the bunch of speed artists above mentioned.

ERNIE BRUMWELL TO REFEREE OSHAWA AND BOWMANVILLE FINAL

Bowmanville and Oshawa play a sudden death game at Hampton tomorrow, to decide which team will meet the C. G. E. eleven for the championship of the Midland Football League.

These clubs were to have settled the question last Saturday, but the game was taken up by a general mix up of players and spectators.

Ernie Brumwell is to referee tomorrow and the fight for honors may see home and home games or a final on neutral grounds.

The Bowmanville News says: Saturday's Oshawa-Bowmanville game was abruptly terminated 10 minutes before full time by Referee "Doc" Morris, of Oshawa, calling the game off on account of interference from spectators. At this stage Bowmanville led by 3 to 1 and were tied on the round so that it will be necessary to finish the game before finals are played off with C.G.E. of Peterborough. Morris was master of the situation up to this time and he kept both teams playing clean football, but the extreme heat, insinuating remarks of some Oshawa players at the referee or the shouting of spectators caused "Doc" to lose his nerve and without any warning called the game off. After considerable arguing on both sides Bowmanville promised police protection if the game was resumed but Oshawa players refused to continue and the crowd went away dissatisfied. Oshawa scored the only goal in the first half, but the local lads came back strong in the second period and scored three goals on 2 penalty kicks by Harmsworth and a nice shot by Benson. Oshawa weakened in the final period and the Irishmen had much the better of play. What caused the spectators to rush on the field was when Lonmire was making a rush on goal he was deliberately kicked in the stomach by the Oshawa goalie. In our opinion the referee might have been justified in suspending play for a few minutes but interference was not serious enough to call the game off. It was the best game we have seen Bowmanville seniors play this season, probably due to the assistance of five junior players—Redman, Harmsworth, Lonmire, Benson and Bate.

ALL HEADS WERE BOWED

Sermon by Rev. Mr. Lewis at Regina Auditorium

Those present will never forget the scene in Regina Theatre last night, when, at the conclusion of Rev. Mr. Lewis' sermon, the large congregation stood with heads reverently bowed while the sweet solemn notes of Bethoven's funeral hymn, in memory of Regina's dead, stole through the building. The effect was most impressive and even as the people filed quietly out to the street, the spell of the music was evident, and they spoke to each other in subdued voices.

Rev. Mr. Lewis took for his text "Things that are seen are temporal, but things that are unseen are eternal." He made an earnest and eloquent plea for the unity of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches in Regina in this hour of need. The day of church union is not more than five years distant at the most, said the speaker, and perhaps the terrible calamity is what was needed to swing the balance. Instead of duplicating churches, we should use the combined financial resources of both, for in unity is strength.

Mr. Lewis drew attention to the of institutions for the welfare of the young people of Regina, and pointed out the fact that the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A., while doing a wonderful work, had already been outgrown by the city, and that by uniting the forces of the churches a great central institution might be built to cope with this most important work.

WENT TO LINDSAY TO GET DRUNK; FINES REGISTERED

Lindsay Post.—At this morning's police court session before Police Magistrate Moore, K.C., two young men, William Connors of Lindsay, and Joseph Reynolds, of Peterborough, were charged with being drunk and disorderly on Kent St. last night. Connors is nineteen years of age, and he claimed he got his whiskey in Peterborough. On being questioned he stated he was drinking ginger beer in several local hotels, and that the bartender never ordered him out. Reynolds was charged with being drunk and fighting on Kent St. Both pleaded guilty to the charges. Connors was fined $3.00 and costs, amounting to $6.95 or in default of payment 21 days in jail. Reynolds' fine with costs amounted to $5.95, or in default of payment 21 days in jail.

MOTOR BOATS MUST SHOW LIGHT

The attention of motor boat owners is called to the following circular:—

Owners, masters or persons in charge of small vessels such as pleasure yachts, steam, gasoline, naptha, electric, and other motor launches and row boats under way or at anchor in all waters frequented by other vessels are hereby notified that they must comply with the rules imposed by Chap. 79, Revised Statute of Canada entitled "An Act respecting the navigation of Canadian waters" for preventing collisions, especially as regards the lights to be shown.

Attention is also directed to the penalty which the master, owner or person in charge, if in fault, shall incur, viz.: "A sum not exceeding two hundred dollars and not less then twenty dollars, which penalty shall be enforced if convistion is secured.

Cases of violation of the rules brought to the notice of the department will be prosecuted according to law.

DANGERS FROM THE MOTOR CAR

The Autoist Enjoys No Special Rights on the Highway

The Montreal Star, which is waging a campaign against auto speeders in that city, takes right to the point when it says that the lesson that the automobile must be taught is that it enjoys no special rights on the highways. It has every right that any other vehicle possesses; but it has no more. It can travel as fast as is safe for the other citizens of the highway. That rule has been fixed in Montreal at nine miles an hour. And the mere fact that it possesses engines which can drive it at five or six times that rate, does not give it any right to use them.

The temptation which confronts the motorist is easily understood. He is like a fast walker held back by a crowd of children just able to toddle. If he were given a chance he could get along much faster. But he could only do so by risking the killing of a few of the children.

So he must exercise constant self-restraint. It is no use to say that he can consult his own judgment as to when he might with safety exceed the speed limit. His own judgment has been tried and found wanting. It must always be fallible; an especially so in a city street into which a child may pop at any moment.

No one imagines that motorists take risks which they seriously think may imperil the lives of others. They are always reasonably careful—in their own opinion. But will they charge up a hill, and they will put on speed down an empty street; and the first thing they know an accident has happened.

The only safety is for the police to insist that they obey the law all the time. If the police can put a stop to travelling within the city boundaries beyond the legal limit, they will very probably put a stop to a very large proportion of the danger thrust upon us by the automobile.

BAD BOYS IN HAVELOCK TRESPASSED AND STOLE GOODS

A unique court was held at Havelock yesterday, when eighteen youngsters were charged with trespassing on the C.P.R. property and also with breaking into freight cars and stealing.

The boys had been rounded up by detective Pinchin, who had instructions from his company to use his own discretion in the case.

Believing his scheme as being a better policy than bringing the boys before the police authorities, Mr. Pinchin with the aid of the chief dispatcher and a stenographer, held "court" in an upstairs room of the station.

The boys were placed in another room and then one at a time was brought before the "tribunal" to give his version of the thefts. Mr. Pinchin was interrogator and the evidence was taken by the stenographer, duplicate copies being made.

Through the evidence of the eighteen boys, much valuable information was obtained.

Each lad signed his statement and afterwards signed pledge to the effect that he would not in future trespass or pilfer the cars of the company.

Matches, biscuits and such articles had been taken from the cars. Some of these were found hidden away in the trunk of an old tree.

At the conclusion of "court" the boys and Mr. Pinchen adjourned to the shade of an old maple, when a short heart to heart talk somewhat relieved the feelings of the youths, and they vowed never again to repeat their acts against the company.

LAUNCH CAPSIZED DURING BAD WIND STORM AT STONEY LAKE

During a severe storm at Stoney Lake on Wednesday afternoon, Mr. W. M. Graham, proprietor of "Viamede," narrowly escaped death from drowning, as the result of his launch capsizing. Mr. Graham was returning from McCracken's Landing in his launch, and the violence of the wind overturned his craft three times. He was precipitated into the choppy waters, but managed to grasp a life preserver. In this manner he kept himself afloat until his dangerous predicament was seen by a cottager named Mr. Cole, who managed to effect his rescue, at great danger to himself.

The launch was secured by a passing steamer. The storm was one of extreme violence, but fortunately no other accidents are reported.

Mr. Graham's condition is reported to be rather serious in consequence of the accident.

AN ORANGEMAN FOR 72 YEARS

Mr. Frank Weir Joined Order When 16 Years of Age.

Seventy-two years an Orangeman is the record of Mr. Frank Weir, of East City, who is in the city to-day. Old age cannot extinguish the enthusiasm of Mr. Weir, and although in his eighty-eighth year, he talks with the readiness of youth. This is the second year in which Mr. Weir does not feel quite up to the task of walking in parade. But as an active Orangeman in every other way his activity was surprising.

Mr. Weir is comfortably fixed as far as worldly goods are involved. He does not wear glasses and his hearing is still fairly good.

An error crept into the item in the Review, referring to general conditions in Ennismore. The item should have read, "Now there are not more than four adults exclusive of men over 60 years of age, who do not belong to the Total Abstinence Society of the parish.

In the article the word hotels, appeared instead of adults.

"KID GRIFFO" FORMER LIGHTWEIGHT CHAMPION ARRESTED FOR BEGGING

New York, July 12— Albert Griffith, known in the pugilistic world as "Kid Griffo" and for several years the lightweight champion of Australia was arrested here early to-day charged with soliciting alms.

The former champion, shabbily dressed and hungry, was lined up at the station house before Sergeant Sheridan, who knew him well in his palmy days and recognized him despite the 200 pounds of flesh which concealed his once athletic frame.

"Fifteen years ago" said Sheridan, reminiscently, "Griffo use to bet a thousand dollars that no one could knock a cigar from his mouth while he stood on a handkerchief. He didn't step off the bit of cloth and he didn't strike a blow. He merely dodged, and always won his bet.

"His first fight in this country was for a purse of $4,000 at the Broadway Athletic Club. He won and the cashier brought him a big roll of greenbacks—three one thousand dollar bills, eight one hundred dollar bills and two hundred dollars in one dollar bills. He couldn't read or write and had never seen any of those bills of large denomination. He was glad to get the one-dollar bills, but didnt want the others. The crowd tried to persuade him to take them, but couldn't, so "Griffo" walked off with the two-hundred one dollar bills and left the rest $3,800."

BREEZES FROM THE DIAMOND

Manager Deneau has purchased Del Orcutt, the third baseman, drafted from Brantford by the Detroit Tigers last year; Nichols, a hard-hitting outfielder, and Gilpin, a twirler of no mean merit. With these three players Deneau is confident that he will be able to round out a winning combination, and put the Busy Bees to the top of the heap in short order, and those who know him best agree that, with any kind of luck he will just about do it. The three players will not join the Bees until Monday.

Rube Waddell, the big ex-Philadelphia pitcher, now with the Minneapolis club in the American Association, is ill and will be out of the game for a time. Rube was not twirling good ball and the doctors found that he was suffering from liver trouble. He will rest for a while before he "comes back."

HYDROAEROPLANES.

Evolution of the Craft That Are Boats as Well as Birds.

Ingenuity has been busy in devising machines which will ride the water as well as negotiate the air.

Hydroplanes have been under experiment for years, and something of the hydroplane idea enters into the construction of the pontoons or boats which when attached to the aeroplane transform it into what is now commonly called the hydroaeroplane. This machine, although that purpose has been enlarged upon in some experiments, is simply an aeroplane designed to rise from the water instead of the land.

The idea of the hydroaeroplane is traced to three of the French pioneers of aviation—Ernest Archdeacon, Gabriel Voisin and Louis Bleriot. When working together these clever Frenchmen fitted Chanute-Wright gliders, with which they were experimenting, with pontoons, after wrecking several machines by falls on land, on the theory that falls in the water would be less dangerous.

They had indifferent success in various experiments, but the idea persisted with them and was taken up by others until today a great variety of its applications have practical use.

The earlier experiments failed, it is said by experts, more because of a lack of appreciation of the power needed in these machines, which, with the gradual increase of motive force, have become successful.—Leslie's.

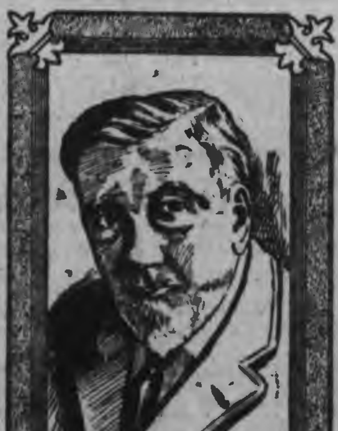
A HISTORICAL HOBBY

JOHN ROSS ROBERTSON AND HIS COLLECTION OF PICTURES.

Toronto Journalist Started to Write a History of Freemasonry In Canada and Becoming Interested In Pictures of the Early Days He Built Up a Magnificent Gallery—It Will All Go to Public.

Lodged in the Historical Room of the Carnegie Library in Toronto are six hundred odd pictures commemorative of men and scenes forming part of the early history of Upper Canada—the nucleus of a larger collection to come. These pictures are held in trust by the Public Library Board for the free use and edification for all time of the citizens of Toronto, says Harry E. Willmott in Toronto Globe. The casual comment of the visitor, be that what it may—interesting, recreative or educative—indicates the mood of the passer-by, but even to make that possible there has been thirty years of painstaking work on the part of the donor, Mr. John Ross Robertson. He says it was a labor of love. One would think, after hearing him recount his experiences, that it was a love of novelty. In most respects it might be called a hobby.

Like all hobbies, it had its start somewhere. Back in the eighties Mr. Robertson, who held high office in the Masonic Order, essayed to write a history of the Order in Canada. A history, to be worth while, must be accurate, and he set about to make this history accurate; he wanted the facts, but, more than that, he wanted the facts supported by corroborative evidence. He dug deep into old musty records, pored over registers and files, peered into genealogies and generally raised the dust. Far and near he was known to print-sellers, museum curators and archivists, to ancestral halls he journeyed, wherever a link could be forged he went to complete his story. Reviewing this work as represented in the result, now proffered to the people of the city, Mayor Geary spoke of the genius of such a gift: "It means a threefold requirement: the art of the connoisseur, the public spirit of a philanthropist, the purse of a financier." And these were reinforced with a persistence and resource that would admit of no failure in spite of obstacles that would discourage all but the most determined.



MR. J. ROSS ROBERTSON.

As the history of Freemasonry progressed the larger idea of the Canadian collection took form. It had taken over thirty years in the face of indifference, discouragement, and at times despair. From a small beginning it has grown until the entire collection will number over one thousand prints of all kinds, paintings, engravings, sketches and mezzo-tints. There is a romance in the story and a charm in the result.

One of the pictures at the Carnegie Library gallery is a reproduction of a mural memorial to Captain John Simcoe in St. Andrew's Church, Cotterstock, Scotland. "This tablet," explained Mr. Robertson modestly, "originally hung in the chancel of the church. When the building was repaired many years ago, for some reason this memorial was placed high on the wall in the tower almost out of sight. I spied it out and finally got the sexton to bring me a ladder, and with the aid of a pocket electric lantern I deciphered the characters and made a rough sketch."

Captain Cook, explorer and freebooter, is connected with Canadian history through H. M. S. Pembroke, which sailed the seas in 1757. The Pembroke was present at the recapture of Louisbourg in the Seven Years' War and afterwards was detailed to service on the St. Lawrence to harass the French. Captain John Simcoe, father of Governor Simcoe, was in command, with the then Mr. James Cook as master. "We searched the Royal United Service Institute, the British Museum, all the museums in New England where we would be likely to find a picture of the Pembroke, but had to give up in despair." The print-sellers had never seen a picture of the Pembroke.

"I stood in the cafe of Young's Hotel in Boston one day buying a cigar," continued Mr. Robertson, "and my eye lit upon half a dozen naval engravings. I stepped over and saw they were pictures of British men-of-war, with the names given on the sides. To my surprise I saw the word Pembroke, and found a small drawing of the vessel. We had it photographed on a large scale and worked into the sketch that is now shown."

A colored painting of Lieut. James Givins of the Queen's Rangers, and later Superintendent of Indian Affairs, is shown for the first time in this collection. Through England and Ireland Lieut. Givins' descendants were traced, and finally an oil painting was discovered in Chicago, from which a copy was taken.

Will Float Either Side Up.

A new kind of dumping scow is being tried at New York. The new scow is made so that it will float either side up. It is loaded up and towed to sea. At the proper time the man who is in the scow turns a valve and water is let into a chamber. Gradually this causes the scow to list or careen to one side and finally to "turn turtle," thus dumping its entire load. The operator is placed like a squirrel in a cage, and as the boat turns over he easily keeps his upright position. What was the bottom of the scow before now becomes the deck, and it is ready to receive another load.—Exchange.

Munich's Doll Theater.

In a Berlin newspaper there is a description of a benefit performance which took place at Munich in honor of the birthday of Josef Schmid, popularly known as "Papa" Schmid. The beneficiary has been the manager of a theater since 1848, on the stage of which only dolls appear. "Through all the changes which have taken place on the stage and in its management," writes the correspondent, "Schmid has remained true to the puppet play, and children who laughed and wept over his Kasperl plays have seen their grandchildren do likewise."

New Kind of Sirup.

To make sirup that epicures cannot tell from genuine maple sirup boil a dozen dark corncobs in a gallon of water for two hours, strain the liquid, measure, take twice as much granulated sugar, juice of one-half a lemon or a tablespoonful strong vinegar (to keep sirup from turning back to sugar); boil five minutes.

In making the above or plain sugar sirup it is not necessary to add vinegar or lemon juice if the ingredients are put together when cold and stirred occasionally (not boiled).—National Magazine.

Not all of the battleship Maine went to rest in the waters of the gulf of Mexico. To more than 2,000 applicants in all parts of the country were allotted various pieces of the battleship and of the equipment and armament that were saved from the wreck. The applicants included cities, patriotic organizations, colleges, museums and relatives of the dead sailors, but in every case it was definitely stipulated that none of the articles should be sold or exhibited for profit.—Youth's Companion.

LIBERALS ARE SURPRISED AT RESULT OF ELECTIONS

Evident Desire of the Prairie People to Ignore Taft's Sinister "Adjunct" Proposal Will Prove a Grave Menace to Confederation, Says La Patrie—Conservatives Claim to Have Won Eight or Ten Seats at Most.

Regina, July 13.—With Conservatives hoping at best to secure only eight or ten seats, Liberals only conceding four to their opponents, and with some uncertainty still as to whether Opposition Leader Haultain is elected in South Qu'Appelle, a victory sweeping and decisive for Premier Scott in Saskatchewan is beyond question.

The situation as the Liberals size it up is as follows: Liberals, 40; Conservatives, 4; doubtful, 6; deferred, 2; not heard from, 2.

Conservatives claim Lumsden, Maple Creek Moosejaw City, Moosejaw County, Pipestone, Prince Albert, Rosetown and North and South Qu'Appelle.

Mr. Haultain did not appear downhearted yesterday. He said:

"The outstanding feature, of course," said Mr. Haultain, with a smile, "is that we are beaten. As far as I can see the reciprocity idea was much stronger than a good many people supposed, stronger, I think, than ever Liberals themselves believed. I knew, of course, that reciprocity was very strong in Saskatchewan last autumn and I always wondered why the Government did not go to the country much sooner. I said openly to my friends last spring that if the Government were to go to the country then we would be wiped out of existence."

The Liberal sweep is so great as shown in practically complete returns yesterday, that it staggers not only Conservatives by Scott's supporters themselves. While predictions that Haultain would secure a majority had been scouted all through the campaign by Scott's supporters, few were of opinion that the Liberal majority would exceed 15 or 20 at the most, and the big landslide took all, including the Premier, unawares. Naturally, jubilation in the party ranks is great and celebrations, small and large, are on the program all over the province.

The Liberal organs are unanimous in declaring that the result shows that reciprocity is not dead nor even sleeping, but a live active issue that will be to the fore from now on and there is talk of a big deputation of grain-growers going to Ottawa in the fall or winter to press the demand for freer markets.

Particular satisfaction appears to be taken in the set-back given Hon. Robert Rogers, although it is generally admitted that the comparatively short time he was in Alberta gave him little chance for developing his famous methods of organization.

The thousands of settlers from the United States voted solidly for the Liberal candidates on the reciprocity issue, while the polyglot population stuck to Scott with their usual fidelity.

Conservatives complain bitterly that the incomplete state of the voters' lists proved very costly in several of the close constituencies.

Prefers U. S. Friendship.

Montreal, July 13.—La Patrie, speaking of yesterday's result in Saskatchewan, says:

"The result would not be surprising did it not confirm the view that the west is making the most friendly advances to those at the southern side of the boundary line in place of extending the hand of friendship to the older provinces of the Dominion, who have so generously and so effectively contributed to its prosperity.

"Mr. Taft's letter, which caused such profound indignation among us here in Montreal, showing as it did the desire of Americans to make Canada a mere adjunct of the United States, scarcely seems to have troubled the minds of our fellow-countrymen in the west. This apparent desire of the electors of Saskatchewan to isolate themselves from the rest of the Dominion and to defend a policy prejudicial to the provinces of the east must inspire Canadians with grave fears for the future."

The election in Saskatchewan has put Montreal Liberals in great glee. "It is the turn in our run of bad luck," said one of Sir Wilfrid's lieutenants.

The new Minister of the Interior, Hon. Robert Rogers, has lost prestige by the result, they declare. He went into the fight with all the resources of the Federal Government and lost. Sir Wilfrid's friends now say that Manitoba will be [illegible] from the Roblin Government as [illegible] as an election comes on.

Black Eye for Rogers, Says Laurier.

Ottawa, July 13.—"A splendid victory for my friend Walter Scott, and a bad black eye for Hon. Robert Rogers," was the comment of Sir Wilfrid Laurier yesterday, when asked for an expression of opinion on the result in Saskatchewan.

Navy Supplies the Crew.

Quebec, July 13.—One hundred men, picked up from the Canadian cruiser Niobe, under the command of Lieut. White, R.N., arrived yesterday from Halifax to form a temporary crew for the Earl Grey, which will leave Quebec on the 25th instant with the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, Princess Patricia and party, for a pleasure trip to the lower St. Lawrence and Gulf.

Vice In Montreal.

Montreal, July 13.—In the course of a description of the tenderloin of Montreal, The Witness yesterday said: "Vice and the vicious flaunt themselves nightly in some streets of Montreal; in some places openly and undisguised. In others but thinly concealed under the eyes of the police."

Still Use the Old Calendar.

One portion of the British Isles is not likely to take much interest in the bill for reforming the calendar which is to be introduced into Parliament. The act enforcing the Gregorian calendar was passed 161 years ago, but it is still ignored in Shetland. Almost all through the group of islands the old style of reckoning time is still followed. What we call Jan. 13 is New Year's day among the Shetlanders and celebrated by them with all manner of observances, including the solemn drinking of the national toast, "Health to man and death to the gray fish."

AMERICA IS BENIGHTED

New York, July 13.—A London cable says Commenting upon the "decision" that hell is a myth, arrived at by the International Bible Students Association in session at Washington this week, coupled with requests that every minister in the United States publish his views, Canon Hensley Henson of Westminster Abbey, one of the foremost divines of the Anglican Church, said: "I think the American religious public is generations behind us, although I do not say that individual American divines are not the equal of ours on any question. Such discussions as that is inconceivable in a seriously representative body here. People would say you were 'flogging a dead horse.' My predecessor, Dean (afterward Canon) Farrar, on publishing his book 'Eternal Hope,' raised the controversy but even then serious opposition was insignificant."

Rev. R. J. Campbell, representing the Nonconformist feeling, took the same view, saying: "This seems to me a very belated pronouncement I do not know any clergyman here who believes in eternal punishment nor do I think any educated clergyman has done so for many years."

BAD FOR THE STATES

Special to the Review.

Washington, D. C., July 13.—Senator Bailey, of Texas, at a banquet last night declared if conditions in the United States changed as much in the next thirty years as in a similar period in the past, they would face a condition parallell to that of the French revolution. He charged Congress with being responsible for this condition, because of cowardice, and declared the Democratic party were exaggerating the importance of existing evils.

ROMAN CATHOLICS ARE INDIGNANT

St. Johns, Que., July 13.—Many Roman Catholics here are indignant over the action taken by Archbishop Bruchesi against the College of Ste. Marie de Mannoir and a meeting of protest will be held.

The brothers have been forbidden to reopen the college in September and Roman Catholics have been warned by Archbishop Bruchesi that it will be considered a grievous sin to send their children to the college if the brothers should re-open it despite the orders of the head of the diocese.

For Rights of Whole World.

London, July 13.—Commenting on the protest of the British Government at Washington in connection with the regulations of the Panama Canal, The Pall Mall Gazette, yesterday, contends that Great Britain is in the responsible position of having to uphold not only her own rights but those of the whole world which depend on the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

At the same time The Pall Mall Gazette recognizing the entire reasonableness of the American contention that having supplied the capital and the skill to build the canal, Americans have the right to every consideration not conflicting with the treaty obligations of the United States.

PREDICTS NEW BOYNE; THIS TIME IT WILL BE OTTAWA RIVER, SAYS HOCKEN

Toronto Orange Editor Says Ontario Must Not Relax In Its Fight to Maintain Privileges—J. H. Burnham Warns Protestants That Their Numbers Are Waning — Perfect Weather In Nearly Every Centre.

Toronto, July 13.—Perfect weather throughout the province marked the celebration of the anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne, and thousands of Orangemen walked in the various centres.

Editor Hocken of The Sentinel, in his address after the march, urged the enforcement of English speaking in the schools.

"If the people of Ontario," declared Mr. Hocken, "fail in this duty, if the Government through fear of losing office is content to surrender concessions to priestly clamor, you will lose your priceless privilege; there will be a battle the same as 222 years ago, and we will have to fight a Canadian battle of the Boyne on the banks of the Ottawa River."

In closing Controller Hocken urged the assembly to consider Protestantism before party and stand by their religion. If the Protestants sat still for another 100 years, papal supremacy would reign over Ontario too.

J. H. Burnham, M.P., of Peterboro, predicted that if matters progressed at the present rate there would be another Battle of the Boyne in the near future. The Pope had issued his war cry and it was time for the Protestants to buckle on their armor. Mr. Burnham stated that the Protestant churches had gone back 30 per cent. from their former strength.

Home rule in Ireland was also denounced.

Rioting In Belfast.

London, July 13.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Ulster's festival celebration of the anniversary of the famous battle of the Boyne, in which several Canadians, including Lieut.-Col Scott and Frederick Dane of Toronto were taking part, was accompanied by a serious disturbance, culminating in a baton charge by police.

The most serious combat occurred in north Belfast, the rioters composed, for the most part, of young people. A crowd of two hundred Catholics made a rush for an arch spanning the thoroughfare, but were repulsed by a party of men on watch. The mob began a vigorous stone-throwing, windows in the houses being smashed. When the police appeared stones were flying in all directions. The constabulary charged the crowd with drawn batons, and in the melee which followed, two constables were seriously injured.

CYCLONE KILLS OVER FORTY

Special To The Review.

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 13—Forty or more persons were injured and thousands of dollars of damage done by a cyclone which swept through this city this morning. Most of the injured were farmers attending market. The wind caught the roof of the ball park grandstand, and grinding it to pieces, hurled it over the market square, killing several horses and injuring many people, so badly they had to be taken to the hospital.

GOOD ORDER

Creditable to relate there was not a solitary case of drunkeness to cause an arrest in the city yesterday, notwithstanding the immense number of visitors. Chief Thompson, and the police force, maintained excellent discipline which was by no means difficult owing to the remarkable orderliness of the crowds.

PEACEMAKER KILLS MAN

Toronto, July 13.—Twelve hours after he was struck in a quarrel in John Biglow's restaurant at 499 1-2 Parliament street on Thursday night, Walter Colleran, 30 years old, died in St. Michael's Hospital yesterday. John Biglow, who dealt the fatal blow, is in jail charged with manslaughter. Colleran had a wife and one chid.

The quarrel followed a drunken brawl in Biglow's rooming house, which is located above the restaurant. At midnight Thursday Colleran got into a fight with a room-mate and Biglow interfered. He struck Colleran behind the ear, rendering him unconscious and causing a concussion of the brain. A few hours later, while Colleran lay in the hospital, Biglow was arrested on a charge of assault. He appeared on this charge in the police court yesterday, but when Colleran died this was changed to manslaughter.

It was Biglow's attempt to be peacemaker that caused the fatality. Colleran, who was drunk, was quarreling with a room-mate, and the commotion awakened the proprietor of the restaurant. Biglow went to Colleran's room and told him to be quiet. Colleran objected to Biglow's interference, and, according to the story of an eye-witness, struck at Biglow. Whereupon they clinched and both men fell to the floor, Colleran underneath. While in this position it is said that Biglow abused him. Mrs. Biglow, wife of the proprietor, and a roomer named Walsh, separated the combatants. Then Biglow left the room.

In a few moments he returned, having dressed himself in the meantime. Colleran was washing the blood from his face. An argument again arose and as a result the two men resumed their fighting. After tussling for a short time, Colleran was struck behind the ear. He collapsed to the floor, unconscious.

MINISTERS AS SOCIAL LIONS

Secretary of State's Letter Is Taken to Mean That Whole Matter Will Be Left For Congress to Decide—Chairman Adamson of Interstate and Foreign Committee Says Rebates Should Have Been Left Out.

Washington, July 13.—The Senate was officially notified of the British protest against the Panama Canal adminstration last night, when Secretary of State Knox in a letter to Senator Brandegee, Chairman of the Senate Interoceanic Canale Committee, outlined the objections raised by Great Britain. The letter paraphrasing the protest by Charge d'Affaires Innes was generally accepted as voicing the decision of the State Department to leave the entire matter in the hands of Congress, where the legislation in dispute is now pending. Secretary Knox's letter says:

"The communication indicates it to be the opinion of the British Government that to exempt all American shipping from the payment of tolls would involve an infraction of the treaty, and indicates further the opinion that there would be no difference in principle between charging tolls only thereafter to refund them, and remitting such tolls altogether. The opinion is expressed that the method of charging but refunding tolls, while perhaps complying with the letter of the treaty, would still contravene its spirit. The communication admits that there is nothing in the Hay Pauncefote treaty to prevent the United States from subsidizing its shipping, but claims that there is a great distinction between a general subsidy, either to shipping at large or to shipping engaged in any given trade, and a subsidy calculated particularly with reference to the amount of use of the canal by the subsidized lines or vessels. Such a subsidy, if granted, would not, in the opinion of his Britannic Majesty's Government, be in accordance with the obligations of the treaty.

Chairman Adamson of the House committee on interstate and foreign commerce last night asserted that the matter of free tolls to American ships and of discrimination against railroad-owned ships passing through the canal should have been eliminated from the pending bill.

CAUSE OF EXPLOSION

Special to the Review.

Atlantic City, N.J., July 13—The explosion of the gas envelope of Melvin Vanaman's balloon, on July 2, in which the crew of five lost their lives was not caused by the action of the sun, but by faulty construction which allowed the expanding gas to exhaust directly over the exhaust of the propeller engines, which ignited it.

FATAL PANIC ON STREET CAR

Memphis, Tenn., July 13.—When a fuse exploded on a crowded street car yesterday the frightened passengers made a rush for exit gates, and in the scramble a negro woman was killed, four white women were seriously injured, and five other persons were badly bruised

In the rush for exits the negress was hurled on the pavement and her neck was broken. The other women, catapulted on to the street, were trampled upon by other passengers in their rush.

The explosion of itself was trivial.

Swelling the Unsuccessful Ranks.

A great many men have been left behind because of their listlessness, their easy going ways. They were too slow. Opportunities would not wait for them. They would have taken advantage of them, would have succeeded, if the chance had not hurried by so fast. If the opportunity had tarried awhile, had given them a chance to look them over and consult their friends, or if they had only come back, these gentle people would now be on the heights instead of looking wistfully up from the foot of the mountain. But, alas, opportunities never return, and he who is not ready to seize them as they flit onward will have only regrets for his portion.

He accused his wife of familiarity with his brother and attacked her when he found her in company with the brother after returning home after two days' absence. The brother has disappeared.

DO YOU USE PILLS?

If in Doubt About the Right Pills to Use Read the Following Letter Carefully:

"I am one of those persons whose system requires aid," writes Mr. Young Gledhill, from Picton, "but it is so easily affected by reason of the great sensitiveness of the bowels that ordinary drastic pills inflict great injury to the delicate coating, and excite such persistent activity as to be with difficulty checked.

"I wish in the highest terms to express the great value of Dr. Hamilton's Pills in cases like mine, and I am sure also for elderly people and the very weak there is no pill like them.

TRAINING CAMPS AND LIQUOR

It is said that the resignations of several officers of the militia will be received because they did not enforce the rule requiring the exclusion of liquor from the training camps. The Minister of Militia did not undertake to have perfectly sober conditions at the camps without intending to see that the undertaking succeeded, and if only a few officers failed to comply with the order, Col. Hughes must have had the co-operation of the officers in general. One of the objections to young men going to the camps has been the temptation to drink, and if these annual gatherings are to be useful to the young men they should not, while training them in discipline and control in one direction, expose them to temptation in the other. The exclusion of liquor is one of the many acts of the vigorous Minister of Militia that have been generally approved.

MR. ROWELL AT BELLEVILLE

Opposition Leader Rowell, at Belleville the other day, diverted his discourse from a discussion of his favorite theme, to address himself particularly to the farmers in the assemblage, that had gathered to hear him. When on such public occasions Mr. Rowell speaks on agricultural topics, he betrays the fact that he is neither much of a farmer himself or that he understands the conditions that prevail. His cry is that the farmers of Ontario are in a deplorable position and that the Whitney Government has done and contemplates nothing to better their interests.

During his short public career, Mr. Rowell had betrayed a lack of knowledge on certain subjects that have tripped him up into the making of glaring misstatements, and the case in question is an instance in point. When he says that the present Provincial Government is doing nothing for the farmers of Ontario, he is stating what is far from the truth, and the most charitable assumption is that he is at fault through lack of information.

The farmer of Ontario to-day is not an object for commiseration, despite all partisan preaching to the contrary. At the hands of the Government, he is getting all the best of it and if he fails to avail himself of the opportunities, which lie at his door, he has himself alone to blame for it. The results of the most intelligent and practical modes of carrying on his business, as exemplified in the Agricultural colleges are available for him and his sons can be educated in the calling of their fathers at a nominal cost. Demonstrations in farm work and institutes for the instruction of farmers, are held everywhere. What other business is so nurtured by the Government?

The question of drainage below the surface has become one of the leading problems in agriculture and the Government recognising its importance has taken it up. If an Ontario farmer wishes to underdrain his property all he has to do is to notify the Government to that effect and an expert engineer will be sent to make a map of the farm and instruct the owner in all matters relating to method and expense, and the only expense which the farmer is called upon to bear, is the board of the engineer while this work is being done. Then for the completion of the work, the farmer is furnished, at a cost just sufficient for maintenance, with the most modern draining machinery, thus obviating the difficulty he would otherwise meet with the scarcity of labor. And such drainage will increase the value of most farms by, at least, fifty per cent.

This is only one instance of many that could be cited. The farmer receives governmental assistance in securing pure seed, in improving his dairy herd while a bonus is offered any stock raiser who will help to develop a certain breed of horses, with a thoroughbred strain, the object of the bonus, being to raise a class of horses for which a ready market can be found not only at home but in England.

So hedged about as he is with official protection, the farmer of Ontario makes an indifferent object for the pessimistic prevailings of Mr. Rowell. The scholarly leader of the Opposition, so long as he confines himself to the discussion of purely academic questions, is safe, but let him undertake a venture along practical lines, and he is apt to find himself in the mire. The Toronto paper, of which he is a director, and the legal advisor, has a representative travelling through Ontario, writing up agricultural conditions and he is inclined to the opinion that these are excellent. He recently wrote at considerable length to the influx of American farmers to the western part of the province. Mr. Rowell has failed to read his own journal or doing so has refused to accept the statements as reliable.

"Make the farm and the farm home more attractive," says Mr. Rowell, and more of our young people will remain on the land." Very true, but that is a matter which lies largely with the farmers themselves. Surely Mr. Rowell, in the heat of his altruism, would not go the length of advocating that the Government should turn the farmers shade trees, lay out his flower garden or arrange the settings of his house.

BRANDY AND PEACHES

The Toronto World publishes the following:—"Mrs. Stevens, acting president of the Ontario Woman's C.T. Union and corresponding secretary of the Dominion W.C.T.U., was interviewed last night by The World respecting the advice given by Hon J. R. Stratton's paper and other abolish-the-bar organs, to add half a cup of the best brandy for every pound of fruit in preserving peaches

"Mrs. Stevens said that both the Dominion W.C.T.U., of which Mr. Rowell's sister is president, and the Ontario W.C.T.U., have always condemned the use of alcoholic liquor in preserves as a serious evil and entirely unnecessary. This attitude, Mrs Stevens said, was well understood and recognized by Mr. Rowell.

"The W.C.T.U. had always taken the attitude that alcoholic candies, as well as alcoholic preserves, or sauces were an insidious danger in any family where they were countenanced."

PRAISE FOR THE HYDRO-ELECTRIC

No better evidence could be adduced against the contention that public owned and operated utilities are not nearly so efficient as those controlled and run by private enterprise, than the contrast afforded between the Electric Development System and the Hydro-Electric.

Undoubtedly the last week, with its severe electrical storms and tempests has been a trying one for all electrical enterprises, but several times the lines of the Electrical Development Company, between Niagara and Toronto, have failed for longer or shorter intervals. Possibly this is not surprising under the conditions, but the failure of one is in marked contrast to the other. The lines of the Hydro-Electric have gone through the storms and service has not been interrupted for a minute.

The whole matter, we are told, is concerned in ample and sufficient insulation that the lines of the first company, built three or four years ago, are not up to the modern practice of last year.

These defects can and will be remedied, and duplicate lines erected to provide for such contingency as result from severe electric disturbances. It is a feather in the cap of the Hydro-Electric, and will go far to assure municipalities of the standard equipment and technical assistance offered in power and light matters.

STOCKINGS BELIEFS.

Superstitions Have Clung to Them From Time Immemorial.

Stockings figure in some curious superstitions touching old customs, especially those connected with marriage. Everyone knows that there are actions both lucky and unlucky. Among the former it is commonly held that to put on any article of clothing wrong side out is decidedly a sign of good luck; but it must be done accidentally, and when the mistake is found out no change must be made, else the luck will immediately vanish. This idea is very firmly held about stockings, probably because it is more easy to make such a mistake in putting on a stocking than in donning other garments. It would be hard indeed for a woman to put on her dress or a man his coat or vest inside out without noticing what he was doing.

Sometimes folks are to be found who have improved upon the common notion, or who have even reversed it.

Another superstition touching the use of hose is connected with dreaming. This is a Scotch notion. If a person be about to sleep in a bed that he or she has never slept in before, the certainty of dreaming can be assured by placing the stocking taken off the right foot under the head. Not only will the sleeper be sure to dream, but the dream will certainly come to pass.

Of the superstitions attached to marriage ceremonies, most people have heard of "throwing the stocking." This rite would hardly be regarded now as consistent with modern notions of decorum, but it was highly popular in former days. The ceremony was performed at the conclusion of the wedding day's festivities, by young men and women seated at the bed-foot—the former having the bride's and the latter the groom's stockings—whose object in throwing the hose backward over their heads was to hit, if possible, the head, and especially the nose, of one or other of the newly-married couple. A successful shot meant marriage at an early date for the thrower.

A pleasant association connected with stockings is familiar to all households at Christmas time. Children will still hang up their stocking on Christmas Eve in the simple faith that Santa Claus will fill them during that night of wonder; or, if the little people are too sophisticated to believe in the stories of St. Nick's peregrinations, they still retain a firm faith in the goodness of his domestic representatives and duly hang up their stockings as their predecessors have done for generations. And not children alone hung up their hose of old. Grown-ups, as well as the small folk, used to observe this custom most conscientiously. But in the old days the hanging up of the stocking took place, not on Christmas Eve, but more appropriately on the eve of St. Nicholas's Day, which falls on the 6th of December.

Another old custom which the superstitious sometimes remember when they get married is to wear one old stocking and one new one, following the thought, perhaps, that every bride should wear "something old, something new." To this day many brides adhere to this old habit, or superstition, but they do not confine the apparel to stockings.

King George on Horseback.

It seems curious to the visitor in London to learn that the stretch of roadway in Hyde Park, London, that is most closely associated with fashion bears the name Rotten row, supposed to be a corruption of "Route de Rai ("the King's way"). Here it is that King George takes his horseback exercise while in town, as do many of the members of the nobility and the smart set. Luxurious carriages roll along the roadway adjoining the bridle path, and along the footway stroll or lounge the tourists and country cousins, while the members of the "lower class" crowd against the palings and frankly stare at the passing show of the great world of "society."

Rotten row during the London "season," which is now at its height, is also the scene on fine Sunday mornings of the "church parade," in which many social notabilities may be seen on foot.

Locating Avignon.

Sir Frederick Pollock used to tell this story of the dilettante society: The qualification for membership was that the candidate had been met in Italy by the proposing member, but once it happened that a candidate was elected who had been met at Avignon. The error was discovered, and the society proceeded to vote "that, in the opinion of the society, Avignon is in Italy." This, however, seemed a ticklish precedent to establish, so they gravely laid their heads together and solemnly resolved in a further motion "that, in the opinion of this society, Avignon is the only town in France which is in Italy."

Counted the Echoes.

In his book of reminiscences, Mr. Seymour Hicks remarks that Mr. Justice Darling—who presided over the sensational West slander suit in London—is his favorite judge, and he admits that he is a frequent visitor to the Law Courts.

The first sentence he heard Mr. Justice Darling pass was one of six months, but, owing to a curious echo, Mr. Hicks says the wall kept repeating: "Six—months—six—months."

The prisoner at the bar was removed exclaiming, in tones of frantic expostulation: "Eighteen months, my lord, for that! Good 'eavens!"

No Record That He Did.

Mr. J. M. Barrie was once talking with an actor who declared that anything and everything could be expressed simply by changing the expression of the face. "I can let the audience know anything without saying a word," he said.

"Then will you kindly go back to the stage," said Mr. Barrie, quietly, "and express in your face that you have a younger brother who was born in Shropshire, but is now staying in a boarding-house on the South Coast!"

$100 REWARD $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to earn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

"All of which," said Ramon Solano, "has no bearing on that question—what are you going to do with us?"

"Young chentlemen," said he, "I belief dot I can gif you your liberty mitout de leasd gombunchuns. Under de circumstances, you vill hardly care to tell apout de alleched robbery of your bapers, nor, in any case, to charge id to me. Moreofer, if I turn you loose, you vill, mitout a doubt, do your utmosd to regover your documents. Dot vill gif me, boasibly, anoder chance to dake dem avay from you. I vill release you. Ve vill both start de hunt for de stolen bapers—und may de besd hunter vin! In breof off de good vill I bear you, de moneys dot you paid for your room shall be gifen back to you. Vill you also do me de honor to dake breakfasd mit me in mein new hotel?"

CHAPTER XVII.

"I thought," said Solano, as the unhappy adventurers walked mournfully through the Chicago streets, "that you had your messages, your money, and everything else of any special value in a leather belt that you wore next to your skin?"

"I certainly did," sighed Brockett, despondently, "but the belt had chafed my skin. I took it off last night while I gave myself a rubdown, and when I went to bed I tucked it into the inside pocket of my coat. Just forced it on the thief, as you might say. He's got the goods; his government will have them as quickly as he can turn them over—and I suppose I might as well try to locate a position of some kind here in Chicago. I haven't the nerve to go back to Washington after this. The chief might not even say a word about it, but I'd be set down as a rank failure in his mind forever."

"Why give up so soon?" the Cuban said encouragingly. "Let's make one last effort to get back the letters. Luck has broken wonderfully well for us so far along the road—it might stick by us now."

"I'll do anything that you suggest," Brockett acquiesced, "but the chances are about a million to one against us. What course would offer any possibilities?"

"We might report the theft to police headquarters, simply stating that you had lost a leather money-belt, naming the amount of currency, and saying nothing as to the papers or letters."

"Description of thief," dolefully remarked Brockett, "a man who had a brown hand. That was about all I saw of him. It might have been either Yasimoto or Aguilar, or a countryman of either one. Can we have every Jap and Filipino in Chicago rounded up?"

Debating and discussing various ideas, none of them seeming to offer much hope, the boys walked aimlessly along, killing time till the morning was almost gone. Three times they passed Japanese gentlemen, dressy, smiling, bland of face and innocent in personality. Each of these sons of Nippon must have wondered, afterward, why the young white devils peered so sharply, almost savagely, into their countenances, but the quick inspections brought no comfort—none of them had the least likeness to Mr. Yasimoto. Pacing onward in this desultory, fruitless fashion, the baffled messengers turned into Chicago's Chinatown, and hurried out of it again. All Chinatowns are twinlike in their buildings, sounds and odors, and the memory of recent experiences in Doyers street did not give the boys any special desire to linger in the Chicago colony.

Towards noon they found themselves in a district as intensely black in population as Hayti or Mashonaland—a region that might have been interesting to them under ordinary circumstances, but which was now anything but attractive to the heartsick adventurers. They walked wearily along, cleared, as they thought, the boundaries of the black belt, and entered an unpretentious restaurant where they could at least talk over their unpleasant situation. They had begun a half-hearted lunch before they noticed that the other patrons of the place were all brunettes, of various shades between lampblack and light saddle-color, but the discovery did not worry them. In their state of mind they would hardly have raised objections if they had been seated at the same table with a band of gorillas.

At the next table sat a bulky black woman, whose billowy figure was draped in most of the colors of the rainbow, and who fended off the inquiries of the dusky waiter by explaining that she was "waitin' fo' a gentleman." The "gentleman" came in a moment later, and proved to be a colored man of gigantic stature—such magnitude of person that the large negress herself was dwarfed before him. This mammoth Zulu settled himself comfortably, grinned delightedly at the woman, and summoned the waiter with a lordly wave of his broad black hand.

"That fellow is a twin to the one who handed us the message in Detroit," whispered Brockett. "If he were only uniformed in the same sort of giddy costume, you couldn't tell them apart."

"I wouldn't have believed," Solano returned, "that there could be two black men as big as those, but here's the evidence before us. What's the use of raising white hopes if the black ones grow as large as this monster?"

The great black man spoke chuckingly to his "lady friend," and his words were wafted to the astounded ears of the boys five feet away.

"Ah say, hon," began the big fellow, "Ah's suah got a 'sprise fo' yo. When Ah come in from Detroit yestehday"—the listeners almost toppled over their chairs in their astonishment—"Ah went right up to de ole hotel whar Ah wohked las' winteh. Got a job as pohteh quick. Dey allus liked Big Sam 'round dehe, hee hee! But de job didn't las' long. Las' night a big Dutchman, dat suah looked like ready money, done buy de hotel, an' gib us all one houh's notice to git out. Said he had people of his own dat he'd put in to do de wohk. He done paid me fo' de whole week, so Ah had no kick comin'."

"Ah, hon, dat ain't nuffin," laughed the big fellow. "Jes' yo' wait till Ah done tell yo' ebryting! Ah didn't feel like goin' 'out huntin' no place to sleep, so Ah simply slips out, slips in agin—de Dutch pusson was too busy to notice anybody comin' or goin'—an' picks out an empty room dat Ah knowed of on de fouhth flooh. Ah gets up good an' eahly, an' stahts down de hall, real quiet-like, when what should come bumpin' into me, hon, but a man. A lil bit of a man, hon—lil brown man, jes' like a Chinaman, an' in an awful hurry. Hones', baby, dat lil man musta had a 'gagement to be handed money, hee hee! He done come bam! right plum into me, an' Ah nachully grabs him. Couldn't let no lil' man bump into me dataway, an' not even ax him whar he think he gwine to go."

"An' what den, Sam?" queried the woman, grinning as widely as the giant himself over the narration.

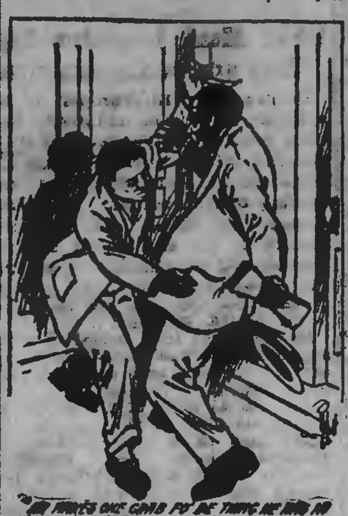
"An' den, hon," he resumed, "Ah jes' happened to notice somepin he had in his hand. Says Ah to him, 'Lil brown man, whaffo yo' run roun' hotels dis houh ob de mawnin', carryin' a thing like dat?' An' jes' den Ah heahs all sohts of noises roun' de tuhn of de hall, an' Ah sees, right quick, dat dis lil man mus' be someways disponsible fo' all dese excitements. Ah makes one grab fo' de thing he has in his hand, an' de lil debbil try to stick me wiv a jabknife. Think of it, hon'—tried to stick me, jus' same Ah was a pig!"



"AN' THERE'S ONE GRAB FO' DE THING HE HAD IN HIS HAND, AN' DE LIL DEBBIL TRY TO STICK ME WIV A JABKNIFE."

"Go on, go on, baby," urged the woman. "Did he stick yo'?"

"Stick me, hon? Hee hee! Does you see any places whar de daylight comes froo me? Ah jus' gib him a slap on de wrist, an' his jabknife fall sudden. Den Ah takes from dat lil man de objeck he is carryin'; Ah gibs dat lil man one tremendious good kick dat lift him most up to de ceiling—an' den, as de noises was growin' strongeh every minute, Ah done come away from dehe. De lil man, he runs one way, Ah goes de otheh, an' heah Ah is, wiv de bacon!"

"But, baby, yo' ain't eben tole meh what yo' got. A pocketbook?"

"No, hon. It's somefin diffrunt. Ah decided dat Ah'd gib yo' a big suhprise, an' maybe mahseff one too, so Ah neveh even looked inside of it. We'll open it an' go froo de thing togetheh."

And so speaking the mammoth negro tossed upon the table the missing belt so lately stolen from young Harry Brockett.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

MRS. GEORGE KAUPP

States That Parisian Sage is Best Hair Tonic

"I had a bad case of dandruff. My scalp was full of dandruff and it came out thick and scaly. My hair came out badly; often I nearly cried on account of losing my pretty head of hair.

I heard of PARISIAN SAGE and only had to use two bottles, before the hair stopped coming out, the scalp became clean, and all the dandruff disappeared. The hair became silky and one big reason that I liked PARISIAN SAGE was that it kept the hair smooth, silky, and clean with no traces of stickiness.

I believe this tonic to be the best on the market as there has been no return of dandruff, or hair falling out whatever. I am glad to publicly endorse the use of PARISIAN SAGE. I have often endorsed its use and am glad to do it." 33 E. Bond Street, Corry, Pa.

PARISIAN SAGE, the delightful hair dressing and beautifier sold by Wm. Madill and druggists everywhere. Guaranteed for falling hair, dandruff and scalp itch. Large bottle 50 cents.

The Widening Skirt.

Even the scarfs that are now draped round the figure do not impede the motion in any way. For the present these are quite meaningless and to be avoided, though an exception might possibly be made in favor of one of the new draperies, the tuck up or fishwife folds, which are not altogether unattractive. These are accompanied usually by a plaited underskirt, but plaits are not yet showing in Paris, though American dressmakers seemingly have determined that plaits will be a feature of spring novelty costumes.

A Useful Furniture Hint.

This is an excellent and inexpensive remedy for removing white marks caused by standing anything hot or wet upon polished furniture. Wash the marks with soap and water, then apply emery powder and rub well in with a piece of wet flannel and leave it to dry. Next wash off the powder with soap and water, dry thoroughly and polish with a good furniture polish.

Her Dearest Hopes Realized — Health, Happiness and Baby.

Plattsburg, Miss. — "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved very beneficial to me, for now I am well and have a sweet, healthy baby, and our home is happy.

"I was an invalid from nervous prostration, indigestion and female troubles.

"I think I suffered every pain a woman could before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I think it saved this baby's life, as I lost my first one.

"My health has been very good ever since, and I praise your medicine to all my friends."—Mrs. VERNA WILKES, R. F. D. No. 1, Plattsburg, Miss.

The darkest days of husband and wife are when they come to look forward to a childless and lonely old age.

Many a wife has found herself incapable of motherhood owing to some derangement of the feminine system, often curable by the proper remedies.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy GREAT MEN'S SWEETHEARTS.

Some men of genius have undoubtedly believed with Thackeray that it is better to love foolishly than not at all; that they have practiced this philosophy is proved by their memoirs and biographies.

Leigh Hunt loved a good girl whose spelling was unconventional, and whose chirography could not be called her chief accomplishment. Keats was wildly, madly in love with a commonplace girl named Fanny Browne. He married her, but she was incapable of appreciating him.

Haslitt, the brilliant essayist, loved the pert, coarse daughter of his landlady. He wrote her a letter which she never answered, and he said that "the rolling years of eternity would not fill up the blank that her failure to answer that letter caused."

A practical Scottish girl, Charlotte Carpenter, won Walter Scott's love. She not only hated literature, but objected to writing to him. He wrote her, saying, "You must write me once a week." She replied, "You are quite out of your senses, and you need not put in so many 'musts' in your letters. It is beginning too early."

Alfred de Musset's love for the irresponsive George Sand gave his thoughts such an extraordinary elevation that he wrote many brilliant poems in consequence. Chaucer sang the praises of many queens, but his one great love was Phillippa Picard de Rouet, the Lady-in-Waiting to Queen Anne of Bohemia. He waited nine years to marry her, but made it a matter of complaint in several poems.

Moore lived up to his theory that love's young dream is the sweetest thing in life. He never let one love get old before he supplanted it with a new. Carey had his Sally of "Sally in Our Alley" fame. Surrey loved Geraldine from the time she was a child in short dresses. Corneille, the astute lawyer, fell in love and became the brilliant dramatic poet. Thus it seems that love, whether successful or otherwise, for a time inspires its votaries.

The German military air cruiser Zeppelin, III., has been fitted with bomb-throwing tubes and a machine gun.

Dr. Wilson's Female Pills

If you have tried and failed, dont lose hope—write me, I have devevoted many years of study and have at last been crowned with success. My remedy is a reliable regulator—it never fails. These pill and herbs are exceedingly powerful in regulating the generative portion of the female system. Refuse imitations, it is better to pay the price and have a genuine article than to keep wasting money buying worthless articles and getting no satisfaction. Cause and Cure of Headache

The cause of headache as you know, is the stoppage of the circulation resulting in pressure on the delicate nerves of the head. In time nature will start the blood going again, but meanwhile we suffer and are unfit for duty.

Assisted by two ZUTOO Tablets, which by the way are as harmless as the soda they contain, nature will remove the pressure and stop the headache in twenty minutes. Why continue to suffer? Why be unfit?

It is really remarkable how many people now use ZUTOO to cure their headaches. Do you? If not, why not?

TOOK SECRET TO THE GRAVE

Paris, July 13—The well-known lawyer, Georges Laguerre who was buried in the Montmartre cemetery recently carried to his grave one of the most mysterious and sensational secrets which the Paris police have in vain tried to solve.

Just twenty-nine years ago a wealthy gentleman names M. Ducros de Sixt, lived with his sister in the Rue du Regard; there they were murdered by a man who was evidently disguised as a tramp, for when he had been arrested and brought before an examining magistrate, it was seen from his manner, his language and his neatly kept hands that he was a man of gentle breeding. He declined to tell anything about himself or why he had committed the double murder except to his counsel, Georges Laguerre, who ever since respected the confidence.

The police, however, ascertained that the prisoner had been a great traveler, spoke several languages, knew intimately the literatures of several countries and was endowed with exceptional physical strength. It was M. Quesnay de Beaurepaire, then public prosecutor, who directed the case against the unknown, and he exclaimed on closing his address to the jury; "Prisoner you want me to conceal your identity; but I know your name, the name of the man whom the jury are about to sentence to death. You are ———", he paused, and then quickly recovered himself, adding briefly, "the muderer of the Rue du Regard."

The unknown was condemned to death and guillotined, and for months the papers had stories of his possible identity. One was that he was a brother of Gen. Boulanger, who later, in 1888, attempted to become dictator of France. Periodical attempts have also been made, even in this year, to induce Maitre Laguerre to reveal the great secret, but he would reply with a tantalizing smile: "If I were to mention the name, it would astonish you considerably" and so he kept the secret to the last.

SPEECHES BY VISITING ORANGEMEN AT THE PARK

At the conclusion of the immense procession yesterday afternoon, the vast throngs surged to Central Park, where they massed in solid ranks on all sides of the park band stand. The platform was graced by such celebrities as Col. the Honorable Sam Hughes, Dr. Sproule, Speaker of the House of Commons, Grand Marshall J. B. McWilliams, of Peterborough, Rev. Robert Pogue, Rev. W. C. Riddiford, Rev. Patrick Morgan, Ex-Ald Joseph Batten and other more or less prominent and active Orangemen. There was no lack of enthusiasm and everyone awaited with keen interest for the speeches to commence.

Rev. W. C. Riddiford in the capacity of chairman for which he was admirably suited, opened the proceedings in a stirring, humorus and most appropriate manner. He was delighted and helped by the evidences all around of the loyal Orange spirit. After a few other stimulating remarks he called upon Col. the Hon Sam Hughes, to address the crowd.

COL. SAM HUGHES.

"I am delighted" commenced the genial Minister of Militia, "to be present on this glorious 12th to say a few words to you." A question he had seen asked in the press recently inquired why Orangemen should so zealously celebrate the 12th of July. "We celebrate it," said the Minister, "because it spells religious liberty and the spirit of toleration to all men. It was for these privileges that our forefathers died and which are our heritage to-day to enjoy. Another good cause for rejoicing was because of the good thing that was being put before the public, the dissemination of the religious liberties and tolerant spirit referred to." Referring to one of the principles of Orangeism, Col. Hughes remarked, that he had yet to see a place where a drunken man fits in. The use of liquor was rapidly being driven out and a higher type of manhood being developed.

Speaking of the French language, he stated that parents who, unable to speak English themselves, were seeing that their children were taught it as rapidly as possible, recognizing its great advantage.

Col. Sam was forced to shorten his speech in order to make train connection.

"So long as civilization lasts," he concluded, "the principles of Orangeism will always be an inspiration to the country." He retired from the platform amid enthusiastic cheers and applause.

REV. ROBERT POGUE

He stated that he questioned the authority of the statement he had seen, that Protestantism was dying. Statistics disproved the statement and revealed a mighty growth in Protestantism throughout the world. It is gaining extensively, and the day was approaching when the principles for which Orangemen stood would be embraced by all the people.

Rev. Mr. Pogue introduced plenty of humor in the course of his address and was also heartily applauded.

Dr. Sproule, Past Grand Master and Speaker of the House of Commons, was warmly received on stepping forward. He regretted that the noise of fife and drum was in opposition to the task of making his voice audible to his listeners.

HON. DR. SPROULE

Why are we hear to-day? asked Hon. Dr. Sproule.

To do honor to the memory of the man who gave us the freedom which we now enjoy, William, Prince of Orange, 1688.

Why are we called Orangemen, and our principles Orangeism?

Because we adopted that name in honor of William, Prince of Orange, who conferred such a signal boon on humanity, and as well to immortalize it, so that the man and his deeds might never be forgotten.

What are our principles and what do we stand for?

Personal freedom, and supremacy of the State.

Freedom of conscience.
Freedom of the mind.
Freedom of religious worship.
Freedom of speech.
Freedom of the press.
Freedom of the State, and the State's authority to be supreme.

These were the principles for which William, Prince of Orange, stood, fought for, and established, and maintained during his reign, and these are the principles for which Orangemen stand the world over.

Why do we refuse to allow any one but Protestants to join our society? Because, as the name Protestant implies, he is one of the descendents, or belongs to that noble band of reformers who, under Luther in 1529, protested against the assumption of authority of the Church of Rome, to fetter the human mind and control the human conscience.

This was the origin of the name Protestant, and it has ever since been understood that all who claim to be Protestants are protesters against that assumed authority of Rome.

We have no quarrel with Roman Catholics as citizens and no antipathy against them. Nor do we desire to interfere with them in the practice of their religion.

The wide distinction between Protestants and them is:

We hold that the State and the State's authority shall be supreme. They contend that the church shall be supreme.

We hold that there must be untrammeled freedom of mind and conscience. They hold that the church must control the mind and conscience.

In the history of the world, whenever and wherever the church has been the supreme power in the land, human liberty has always been denied, and has always suffered, and the State has been made subservient to the church, to the detriment of the people.

As examples of the correctness of this allegation I point to the United Kingdom before William Prince of Orange in 1688, gave liberty to the people and made the Parliament of the country supreme.

I point to France from the time of Napoleon Bonaparte to the present century, during which the church ruled over the country.

Spain during all the history of the past, until the last few years. Portugal, until the last two years. Italy the home of the Vatican and His Emminence the Pope, Rome, which for centuries ruled the world, through the blighting influence of the church, dwindled into insignificance until she became comparatively a negligible quality among first class nations and lost her status.

Italy, the home of the Pope and the Vatican, said to be the centre of power and authority, which was sought to control the world, the citizens were so tyranized over and kept down, and their rights trampled upon, until their human nature rebelled, and they found in Garibaldi, a leader who led them in making low on the church and the Pope, until they threw off the yoke of tondage, and slavery, and became free men.

Since that time His Emminence is practically a prisoner in the Vatican and dare not leave it, nor meddle with the rights of the State, nor the free rights of the people.

The free people of Italy, since exulling in their emancipation from that slavery, under which they galled so long, and in gratitude to their benefactor and liberator, Garibaldi, erected a statue to his memory, on a hill, overlooking the Vatican, and mounted a canon along side of it, pointing it towards the Vatican as a warning and a threat of what would happen, should His Holiness ever again attempt to enslave the people.

We are striving to maintain the free rights given us, and to keep the State's authority supreme. Is there anything wrong in it, in this our voluntary and thankless work. Why should we find so many people so bitter against us, and so ready to condemn us. What happens in those countries where the Protestant and Orange bigot and fanatic, as he is called, is either unknown or none existant? The people suffer under the tyranny and oppression, until they are galled into rebellion, and then the church suffers the consequences.

That has happened in France, Spain Italy, Portugal, etc.

Are we getting from the Protestant churches, and Protestant ministers, that support and that countenance which we are entitled to expect, having regard to our aims? I'm afraid not.

We invite those who believe with us that our aims are good, and our labors worthy of emulation, to join our force and add to our strength and usefulness. There is nothing taught in our society, but what makes for better manhood and better citizenship. There is no obligation taken by any member of it, which makes the man less generous toward his Roman Catholic fellowman, or less liberal or less neighborly, in all the proper relations of life.

Freedom of Conscience,
Freedom of the mind.
Freedom of religious worship.
Freedom of speech.
Freedom of the press.
Freedom of the state to do its constitutional work, and supremacy of the state in authority.

MAYOR BRADBURN

Mayor Bradburn, in a neat address expressed his pleasure at seeing such a large and happy throng of visitors Not belonging to the Orange Society afforded him additional pleasure in extending a hearty welcome to all present.

Mayor Bradburn also said that the crowd was one of the most orderly behaved that had ever visited the city. He hoped that the demonstration would see fit to visit Peterboro in 1913, and if not next year, why in 1914, assuring the crowds that the city would do its part in giving them a good time.

Rev. Patrick Morgan was next introduced to the audience.

REV. PAT. MORGAN

"The first time I saw Orangemen, was in Ireland," said Mr. Morgan, "and I was extremely prejudiced." Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes and Dr. Sproule, have told you of two things which Orangemen will not permit in their organisation.

"Since I have set my back against Roman Catholicism," said Mr. Morgan, "I have had much fighting to do." I belong to no society and no one has helped me financially. In the production of my magazine, I incur a monthly expense of $250.00 which I must meet, as I believe that there should be an organ published to tell the truth about either Protestants or Roman Catholics. Since breaking breaking away from the church of Rome I have determined to stand alone. I have been in correspondence with ex-priests, 210 in all, in the known world.

"Recently, the Roman Catholics have been saying, 'let us get the Protestant mass combatting us in the North West, and while they are thus engaged we will creep into Ontario.' Let us crush that spirit," said the speaker.

"I left the Church of Rome because I was not permitted to speak out as I wanted to.

"Let us not be slaves of a tyrannical power that has already spattered this globe of ours with blood" said the speaker as he resumed his seat amid rounds of applause.

Rev. Ben Oliel of Lakefield was the last speaker. In the course of his remarks, he lamented the fact that some of the Orange lodges had left their Bibles at home. He urged all Orangemen to come out and take their stand along with the open Book

Some men who know very little are not altogether sure of that.

SLAUGHTER HOUSES TO GO

Chief Meat Inspector Says They are an Abomination

Ottawa, July 13—Apropos of the agitation in Toronto, and several Canadian towns and cities in favor of the abolition of the private slaughter house and the establishment of municipally-owned abattoirs, Dr. Robert Barnes chief of the meat inspection division of the department of agriculture, told the Canadian press that the private slaughter house was an abomination, which in the interest of public health, must go.

He said that in a pamphlet of the department it was said: The sooner the private slaughter house is abolished altogether the better for all concerned, as most of the objectionable meats plied on the market emanate from these undesirable and unsanitary places. The municipal abattoir is a modern necessity. It is utterly impossible for any federal department to undertake the supervision in all its ramifications, of the local meat trade, in every town and village throughout the Dominion.

Statistics covering the last year of record in the Department's work show the astounding number of carcasses condemned under federal inspection; more than two million carcasses were passed, while 8,800 carcasses were condemned. Two hundred and ninety-five thousand, nine hundred and twenty-five portions of swine were condemned as suffering from "tuberculosis." Two hundred and seventy-one thousand, seven hundred and thirty pounds of meat were condemned as being "sour." Twenty-nine thousand and ten portions of cattle were condemned as suffering from "parasites." Twenty-eight thousand one hundred and eighty-six portions of sheep were condemned as suffering from "parasites." Eighteen thousand, two hundred and nineteen portions of cattle condemned as suffering from "abscess." Twelve thousand one hundred and eight portions of cattle were condemned as suffering from "tuberculosis."

These were in abattoirs doing an interprovincial trade where the Federal Government inspectors have jurisdiction. What must have been the condition of some of the meat turned out from slaughter houses were no inspection existed? asked Dr. Barnes.

Defrosting Meat.

A demonstration held at Plymouth of a new method of defrosting meat is described in a report from the New South Wales agent-general in London. By this process frozen meat is thawed in a chamber so constructed that the atmospheric pressure can be regulated and excess moisture extracted without bursting the tissues of the meat.

It is claimed that frozen beef and mutton can then be placed on the market in such a condition as to compare favorably in appearance with prime English meat. This demonstration was attended by representatives of the meat trade of Australia, Great Britain, the United States and South America.

The beef and mutton had been held in a temperature of about 1 degree for about three weeks after removal from the ship. It was then placed in the patent chambers (beef for forty-eight hours and mutton for twenty-four hours), in a temperature of 62 degrees. Upon removal from the chambers the beef was compared with prime English beef and with a frozen quarter from Queensland treated under the old system. It compared favorably with the English meat and was far superior to the Queensland. It had a fine bloom, was free from mold, and there was an entire absence of "leakage."

MR. AND MRS. MADILL RETURN FROM WESTERN TRIP

Mr. and Mrs. Hipperson Had Trying Time When the Cyclone Visited Regina.

The story of the miraculous escape of Mr and Mrs. William Hipperson, in the Regina cyclone, which has been brought to the city by Mr. and Mrs. William Madill, equals anything ever told in fiction.

Mr. and Mrs. Madill returned home on Thursday, after attending the General Assembly gathering in Edmonton. They arrived in Regina on the Wednesday following the day of the disaster, and while there secured several pictures, which reveal some of the terrible damage wrought by the destructive storm.

It appears that Mr. and Mrs. Hipperson were at home together, when they suddenly became aware of the swiftly approaching storm. They commenced to go up stairs, but even as they reached the second floor, the roof began to leave the house, and they were forced down stairs. The blizzard was then at its very height What occurred next was so sudden that, neither scarcely knew what took place. They were aware of being thrown to the floor clasped in each others arms, expecting death at any moment. In some marvellous manner they were thrown against the wall of the room, and while in this prostrate condition, a high radiator was wrenched from its fastenings in the floor and thrown over them, thus forming a protecting shield. Underneath this they lay until the fury of the cyclone had exhausted itself, emerging frightened but entirely unharmed. They discovered the house over their heads to be gone completely, and blown quite a distance away. Everything occurred so rapidly, that no perfect knowledge of what had occurred could be grasped. The cyclone came with terrific force, but it lasted scarcely longer than ten seconds.

Mr. and Mrs. Hipperson lost everything they had in the house, especially Mr. Hipperson, who came through the terrible trial with only the few clothes in which he was clad at the time. The house in which they were living was rented, neither of Mr. Hipperson's two fine houses being touched by the storm. Needless to note, Mr. and Mrs. Hipperson's uppermost feeling after the affair was one of extreme thankfulness for the marvellous and really amazing manner of their deliverance.

Mr. Madill said this morning, that Mr. and Mrs. Hipperson, verily believed that their last hour had come.

While out West, Mr. and Mrs Madill, visited Banff, Seattle, Calgary and all the other Western centres and are back home feeling greatly benefited and pleased with their trip.

BAD RAILWAY ACCIDENT AVERTED BY SPRINGVILLE MAN WHO SPIED SPREAD RAIL

While hundreds of Orangemen and their friends were being rushed over the C.P.R. to Peterborough, yesterday morning in an eight-coach train, little did they think that they were to be saved from a bad wreck.

But they were to be saved and it is due to Mr. Albert Reynolds, of Springville, that the accident did not occur.

He decided to walk to Peterborough for the Orange celebration, and took the C.P.R. track at Kendry station. When he had covered about half the distance to Peterborough, he discovered to his horror that one of the rails had spread about eight inches.

Sizing up the situation quickly, Mr. Reynolds ran with all speed back towards Kendry where a gang of section men were at work and they in return made all haste to the scene of the trouble and made repairs, before the big excursion train came along with its hundreds of passengers. Such are the acts of Providence.

BADLY INJURED IN JUMP FROM EXCURSION TRAIN

A serious accident occurred on the C.P.R. last night at Bethany Junction, when Mr. Arthur Martin, son of John Martin, of Calmer Postoffice, was badly injured in jumping from the swiftly moving Bobcaygeon special. He sustained a broken nose, a deep scalp wound, requiring nine stitches, and minor injuries to the hips and shoulders.

It appears that Mr. Martin obtained a return ticket yesterday morning from Cavan to Peterborough and on his return he remained on the train past Cavan intending to get off at Bethany Junction which is much nearer to his farm. The train, however, did not stop so he jumped and landed into the ditch with the above result.

He was found by Conductor Dickie, of an eastbound freight train. The conductor on asking instructions from Peterborough was ordered to rush him to Nicholls Hospital here He was met at the station by Station Agent Dodds and Special Officer Pinchin and Comstock's ambulance. Messrs. Dodds and Pinchin remained with him at the hospital till the extent of his injuries was ascertained and until they were dressed. He is to-day doing as well as can be expected.

AFTERMATH OF THE BIG CELEBRATION

The merchants of the city had a largely increased business as a result of the thousands of visitors for the Orange celebration. The ladies of George street, Park street, All Saints' and Knox churches, who supplied dinner and supper, were rewarded with large receipts, although they had to work mighty hard during the day. George street ladies made over $450. All Saints' ladies have a surplus of over $300, while the Park street ladies realized over $200. The report from the ladies of Knox church is that over 1,000 attended dinner, while the attendance for supper was also large.

Extra trailer conductors had to be secured for the street railway service. There were three extra trailers on George street, and all the rolling stock was on duty.

The celebration will likely be held in Lindsay next year, but Peterborough will have the Provincial Grand Lodge, it is understood, in March.

CADET CAMP

Mr. C. B. Jamieson requests all boys intending to attend the cadet camp to meet him at the armories Monday night at 7 o'clock. It is necessary to secure the names so that tickets may be arranged for.

BODY WAS RECOVERED

Harold Feeley, who was drowned in the Otonabee river yesterday afternoon, was between eleven and twelve years of age. The accident occurred at the foot of Park street, when he got beyond his depth, and being unable to swim, was carried by the current.

The recovery of the body was made by Mr. Joseph Levasseur, sr., assisted by the boy's uncle, following the news of the accident. The body was brought to the surface a long pole with a garden rake attached being used.

The remains were taken to Lane and Eano's undertaking establishment. The funeral will take place Sunday afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock, from the family residence, 271 Romaine street, to Sacred Heart church and St. Peter's cemetery.

SACRED HEART SOCIAL

The annual social and garden party of the Sacred Heart church, will take place on the church grounds on Wednesday, July 17th. Supper served from 5 p.m. 57th band in attendance. Splendid time assured. Tickets, including supper, 25c, Children 15c. 6d

SPRINGVILLE VISITED BY LONE HANDER

On Thursday a highwayman made his way into John Wilson's residence at Springville, through the cellar, and after helping himself to all he could eat, proceeded to see what he could carry away with him, selecting some choice fruits and preserves.

The thief next went down to Mr. Reynolds' general store and commenced to try a Raffles stunt on the lock, when he was frightened away by Mr. Reynolds, who became aware of what was taking place. The would-be thief proceeded to make haste from danger as rapidly as his pedal extremities would allow.

It is authoritatively denied in London that Prince Arthur of Connaught is engaged to a Russian Princess.

By EDITH M. DOANE.

Jack Bentley was permitting himself the luxury of a day off. He felt that he was entitled to it.

For a month past the situation had been too tense, the excitement too keen, for any thought beyond the whir of the ticker.

The firm of Curtice & Co., stockbrokers, was the medium through which a wealthy syndicate had manipulated the stock market to its own advantage. Bentley, the junior partner of Curtice & Co., had labored steadily at his post on the floor of the exchange, cool and imperturbable in the midst of the rising storm, and only the day before the deal had been pulled off successfully.

And now upon this bright morning in early summer Jack Bentley was feeling decidedly well satisfied with life in general. His part of the transaction had been well handled, his share in the way of commissions was distinctly gratifying, and in addition he had cleaned up a neat little sum by going into the deal on his own hook.

It was getting well into July, and as Bentley's automobile whirled up Fifth avenue his mind turned longingly from the city, sweltering in midsummer heat, to the vision of a clubhouse in the heart of the Berkshire hills.

It was a picture often in his thoughts—the long, low, rambling clubhouse, with its old fashioned garden at one side; a little winding brook sparkling and splashing between clumps of fern and low banks, willow fringed; a girl, sweet and gracious, her white frock cool against a great moss covered bowlder, the sunlight falling through the leaves in flickering shadows on her soft, fair hair.

In the height of the fight he had received her letter. "You'd better come," she wrote. "It's as lovely as ever here," and at the end again, "Do come." He had smiled as he telegraphed his answer. There was no doubt of his attitude where Constance Elliott was concerned.

A great longing for country sights and sounds swept over him, for the woods and hills and her. A little while and he would have them. A few days' attention to straightening out the aftermath of the great fight and then—Constance had no parents to object, and even her old curmudgeon of a guardian—strange how he had always mistrusted that man—could not fail to be impressed by the tidy sum he had pulled out of the late deal.

Where Fifth avenue broadens into the plaza he mechanically lessened speed, his mind still with the girl in the Berkshires as the huge car turned smoothly into Central park.

And the first person his eyes lighted on was Constance Elliott.

The next instant he was before her, cap in hand, and she rose in astonishment to meet him. For a second they faced each other, he scarcely crediting the evidences of his senses, she coloring prettily and holding out one slim hand in cordial greeting.

"I phoned to your office this morning, but you were not there."

"Is anything wrong?" he asked uneasily.

"Nothing, except that I return to the country this afternoon at 3 o'clock, and I thought"—

"I am wondering," he interrupted, laughing uncertainly to cover his hurt, "why I might not have known you were in town?"

"But I wasn't, not until late last night, and Mr. Sheldon did not wish any one to know. He wired me yesterday to come at once. You know, he has managed everything for me just as much since I have been of age as he did before." She hesitated, flushing with excitement. "Jack," she cried, "it is a great secret, but I am going to be very rich."

He regarded her gravely.

"Through some stock deal," she went on, with feminine vagueness. "Perhaps you've heard of it. Mr. Sheldon has made ever so much money lately—yesterday—and I am to make a lot in the same way. He has all my securities. I gave them to him this morning."

"Do you mean you have given that man all your money?" Bentley blurted out.

Had Sheldon appropriated the girl's money to his own use? That same instant Bentley was sure of it. His brain, used to quick deductions, leaped from the rumor on the street that Sheldon had been badly hit to the sudden wire to Constance—the secrecy—the misrepresentation. These, coupled with the man's well known shrewdness, could mean only one thing. Sheldon had lost heavily and intended to recoup with Constance's money.

His first impulse was to tell her of the deception that was being practiced upon her. But she would not believe him. Besides, he was not absolutely certain of it and might alarm her needlessly.

How he accomplished what followed he never clearly knew. He heard a voice he hardly recognised as his own claiming a pressing engagement and begging her to lunch with him later.

He saw the surprise in her eyes succeeded by frank acceptance of his explanation, he heard each inflection of her dear voice as she promised to meet him, and then a moment later he was speeding toward lower Broadway. Once only did his pace lessen and then only so long as it took him to rush up the steps of his apartment and slip something small and shining into the pocket of his long, loose coat.

The situation from Sheldon's point of view was bad enough without the interference of Jack Bentley, who had entered his private office with scant ceremony.

"Mr. Sheldon," said that young man abruptly, "I learned an hour ago that you have, through misrepresentation, appropriated certain securities belonging to Miss Elliott."

For once Sheldon's self possession deserted him. "What lie is this?" he cried, half rising from his chair.

"I refuse to give them to you."

"You must."

"I am acting as her agent. By what right do you"—

Bentley leaned across the table. "Mr. Sheldon," he said grimly, "I have come for the papers and intend to get them."

Sheldon, his face livid, reached for the bell, only to find himself confronted by a gleaming pistol barrel surmounted by a white face with blazing, determined eyes.

"Stay where you are till I'm through with you," cried Bentley, at white heat. "Now give them to me."

"I will not."

"You shall!"

"I'll be ruined," gasped Sheldon.

"You'll be ruined if you don't. I'll have you arrested inside of an hour."

The beads of perspiration stood out on Sheldon's forehead. With trembling hands he opened a tin box and flung its contents malignantly across the table.

"Take them, —— you!" he cried, with a bitter oath.

And so it was not until Miss Elliott sat opposite Bentley at a table at lunch that she learned how nearly she had been delivered from her "abundance of riches." She sat speechless, watching Bentley with beautiful, horrified eyes as he laid bare the deception that had been practiced upon her, touching lightly upon his own part in the affair.

"Oh," she said in an unsteady voice, "what can I say to you? I want to thank you. I cannot—I do not know how"—

He leaned forward, his eyes holding hers across the flowers on the center of the table.

"I know," he said under his breath, "but I dare not ask—it is so much"—

She colored a delicious pink, but her eyes met his bravely.

"There is nothing—that could be—too much," she said.

Cries of the Elephant.

Elephants have a variety of sounds by which they communicate their wants and feelings. The occasions on which any means of expression is employed cannot be strictly classified, as fear, pleasure, want and other emotions are sometimes indicated by the trunk, sometimes by the throat. An elephant rushing upon an assailant trumpets shrilly with fury. Fear is similarly expressed in a shrill, brassy trumpet or by a roar from the lungs; pleasure by a continued low squeaking through the trunk or an almost inaudible purring sound from the throat. Want—as a calf calling its mother—is chiefly expressed by the throat. A peculiar sound is made use of by elephants to express dislike or apprehension and at the same time to intimidate, as when the cause of some alarm has not been clearly ascertained. It is produced by rapping the end of the trunk smartly on the ground, a current of air hitherto retained being sharply emitted through the trunk as from a valve at the moment of impact. The sound made resembles that of a large sheet of tin being doubled.

Wonderful Gardening.

When it comes to landscape gardening the intensiveness of the Japanese is shown in a wonderful manner. In front of a little shop on lower Broadway, which is constantly surrounded by an admiring throng, is a garden which can literally be held in one hand. It boasts a tree, some rocks, a gravel path and a miniature hut. The most wonderful specimen, however, is a model contained in an earthen dish scarcely larger than a dinner plate. It is a complete landscape, disclosing frowning cliffs, at whose base runs a tiny river. There are also bowlders overgrown with moss, an ivory temple and, overhanging the rocks, a bona fide fir tree about eight inches in height. There is an air of solidity and naturalness about the model that is most convincing, and a spectator is impressed with the sensation of viewing a slice of nature through the little end of an opera glass.—New York Tribune.

There are more than forty different species of sunflower scattered from New England to the gulf of Mexico and from ocean to ocean. Generally the plant is not esteemed, but it has many valuable uses. Many of our Indians make bread of the seeds. It is cultivated in the south of Europe sometimes as a field crop, the seeds being used as food for cattle and poultry and also for making oil of a quality little inferior to olive oil. It is burned in lamps and used in the manufacture of soap. Meal and bread are said to be got from the seeds in Portugal, and these, roasted, are often substituted for coffee. The seeds are also used, like almonds, for making soothing emulsions and in some parts of the old world are boiled and fed to infants. The leaves are good fodder for cattle. The stems serve for fuel and contain much potash.—Exchange.

Haddock Marks.

Why do haddocks carry those peculiar black "finger marks" near the head? Some tell us that they are a memento of the pressure of St. Peter's fingers when he went fishing for the tribute money. On the Yorkshire coast of England they say the devil once determined to build a bridge at Filey. His Satanic majesty did not start the bridge for the convenience of the people, but for the destruction of ships and sailors and the annoyance of fishermen in general. In the progress of his work Old Nick dropped his hammer into the sea. Snatching at it hastily, he caught a haddock, and all haddocks carry the imprint of his black fingers to this day.

WHAT GIRLS SHOULD WEAR WHEN RIDING

IF the romance of riding, as some girls fondly imagine, consisted in taking brisk canters along the picturesque bridle paths of the Park these beautiful spring days, there would be little need for riding master or instructor, for riding looks so easy, they say. But never was there a greater fallacy, as the scores of painstaking pupils who daily pound the tanbark ring of the riding academy or scamper over the circuitous park paths in the lead of a groom will feelingly tell you.

As one pretty young girl confessed, with a sign of grim humor, "Oh, yes; I, too, used to feel that way. It seemed such a natural thing to do. But after my first lesson I learned to my amazement and mortification that there is not only a science of riding but that it isn't to be picked up in one lesson by any manner of means. I was first told to 'get my balance.' Fancy, when I thought all that was necessary was to sit tight and hang on! But that was nothing to my surprise when my instructor told me I must 'balance my horse.'

"Now, I hadn't the remotest idea what that meant, but had visions of the circus equestriennes urging their animals to stand bolt upright with their forelegs clawing the air, and I could see myself at an angle of forty-five degrees trying vainly to keep my seat, and, believe me, then and there all my desire to become a circus rider vanished. However, my fears were allayed before any damage was done, and when it was explained to me it all seemed a very plausible thing."

Of course, one of the first questions mothers ask the riding instructor is whether their daughters shall ride cross or side saddle, and it is well known that there is a great diversity of opinion on this subject. Just now it is the fad in New York and elsewhere for girls of all ages to ride cross saddle, and while the riding instructor believes it is wholly a matter of choice among young girls she does not feel that girls over twelve should adopt it.

It is essential that a girl should be correctly garbed for riding, yet there are few who do not err in this respect. This is not their fault, but the fault of their riding master and their tailor. As far as dress is concerned, there are two correct styles—a short divided skirt, very narrow, and a Norfolk or plain jacket, or a coat and breeches. The breeches are practically the same as those worn by boys and men. If a skirt is worn it should come only to the calf of the leg, just over the tip of the boot, and it should be narrow, yet with a certain fulness over the hip so there is no drawing, and the coat, instead of hanging over the back of the horse, should hang down over the legs.

In the matter of footgear, field boots which lace over the ankle are very comfortable both for riding and walking. They lace into the instep and hold the ankle firm, which is an advantage, as most American boots are far too big in the leg. I would advise wearing socks instead of stockings, as they give free play to the limbs.

There is only one thing to wear for a waist, and that is not a tight belted shirt waist, which some girls think proper, but one made precisely like a man's negligée shirt. And it should not be belted down tight. For park riding a straight collar and a man's tie are the smart things. Stocks are never to be worn except for hunting.

The present most fashionable coat is of medium length. It is cut straight and closed with three or five buttons, according to fancy. Have the skirt short enough so that when standing the whole foot should show. It is best to wear a safety skirt and then there is no danger of catching it and getting spilled.

Hats are another mooted question, or seem to be, but the derby hat in winter is always the correct thing and for summer a narrow brim sailor in black or white. One sees the soft cloth hats a good deal, but while they are all right for the country they are not suitable for the park.

One always mounts from the left side, and at first it is best to do so with the teacher's assistance, then from the ground. Not infrequently one sees a rider holding the reins with one hand, the other hanging lifeless by the side. This is a most pernicious habit for many reasons. It is not an attractive pose, and will in a very short time make the rider one sided. Then holding the reins in both hands keeps the shoulders square and the waist hollowed. I use both snaffle and curb bit. Each bit has a function of its own and this, of course, must be learned. Here in this country we hold the snaffle between the first and second fingers and the other on the outside with the curb either side the ring finger. One very important point I impress on my pupils is to "have light hands."

It is very important that the leathers be the right length. This varies according to whether the horse be long or short gaited. If the former, then the stirrup must be shorter; if the latter, the stirrup is nearly straight. As to posting, that comes naturally to the girl as soon as she is able to let her horse trot freely, and is not the difficult thing that some teachers would have us believe. Then, of course, there are the various methods in vogue of changing the gait of the horse, which cannot all be explained at length, but which follow in due sequence as the instruction progresses.

THE STARS AND THEIR INFLUENCE.

April 28.—Fond of luxury and the good things of life, to the detriment of digestion and the general health. Subject to bronchial and catarrhal ailments. Stubborn and obstinate when it comes to taking advice for one's own good. Indolent, and more fitted for an artistic career than commercial pursuits.

April 29.—Generous, liberal and forgiving. Will quickly forget any slight, and will not worry much over the opinion of others. Strive to do their best and let it go at that, and if things do go wrong there is no use moping. Mind their own business and expect others to mind theirs. Admire artistic talent in others and are good judges of everything of a refined nature, but not blessed with any creative artistic ability themselves.

April 30.—Economical and very careful in all money matters. Wasteful neither of their money, time nor energy. Good housekeepers and cooks. Cleanliness is everything, and worry much when things are untidy. Look well and dress well and are admired for their neatness. Slow and deliberate in speech and seldom say anything they need regret.

May 1.—Very sympathetic. Cannot listen to any tale of misfortune without going down in their pockets. Will relieve distress at their own sacrifice. Not likely to accumulate much money and believe in making use of money when they have it. Rebel against any form of cruelty and will give shelter to any stray animal to their own discomfiture.

May 2.—Proud, dignified and particular regarding social conventions and customs. Will succeed best in governmental positions and will often choose a political career. Logical in argument, good debaters, quick at repartee and epigrammatic in speech. Like to entertain and to be entertained. Have good digestions and appetites, excellent vitality and do not tire easily. Love travel and will see much of the world.

May 3. Idealistic and given to dreaming. Poetical and religious. The latter part of 1911 was not good for health, owing to the transit of Saturn, but next year will be excellent both for health and material welfare, owing to the beneficent transit of the powerful Jupiter. Omnivorous readers. Have remarkable intuition and divine more things by instinct than others can through mental gifts.

May 4. Inventive ability and excellent chance of success along mechanical lines. Expert in all work requiring skill with the hands. Make good manufacturers and likely to become the head of some big enterprise. Thoughtful, deliberative, calm and self-possessed. Unmindful of the criticisms of others. Are good fighters, but always fight fair and never take undue advantage of an adversary. Frank and truthful.

KEEP OFF THE GRASS

THE BUSY SEASON.

It's a Wise Dressmaker Who Uses Mannequins.

"DID you ever go to a real mart of fashion," queried Doris, "a place where the mode evolves and springs into being? Well, it's an experience 'twere a shame to miss, one of the modern sensations that make you feel the glory and the wonder of the age we live in—and perhaps the delirium too.

"I used to think dressmaking was a 'mere-smear' (to quote Kipling) manu*facturing*, but now that it has developed into an art the thing that troubles me is where to put it in the category of the arts. I first thought it was an industrial art, but now I am torn between the pictorial and the dramatic arts. But wherever it may belong it's a sense tickling art, anyway.

"Go to a creator of fashion to-day and you are ushered into a French gray salon with Louis something chairs all about and cut glass chandeliers hanging blazing from the ceiling, mirrors in cupid frames adorn the walls and reflect a highly polished floor and a brilliantly lighted stage at the far end, carpeted in French blue and with an Isadora Duncan background.

"Suddenly the curtains part, and behold! a dazzling vision is outlined against the soft blue. She pauses a moment, head high and an expression of condescension o'erspreads her perfect features. Then slowly she lilts forward, swaying like the lily of the field, her hands held out in graceful curves on either side and her motion so steadily gliding that you wonder if she's on wheels or has a rail to glide on. Then they continue to come, the Gaby Deslys mannequin, the Aubrey Beardsley mannequin, the Hedda Gabler and the Sumurun—all with a painted smile frozen on their lips, a painted hauteur carved in their eyebrows, a painted beauty enamelled on their features.

"Near me sat a very roly poly little couple, apparently out to get the fiancée's trousseau. I had seen them when I first came in, the little roly poly brunette man very attentive to the little roly poly blonde lady, and there was much tittering and coyness with the saleslady over their errand.

"But the moment that the Aubrey Beardsley model poised her six feet at the top of the steps and looked her slanting glance down in the salon the fiancée was forgotten and the little round man was perched on the very edge of his dainty little chair, his hands resting on his very big stick, his mouth open and his gaze rivetted on the slowly proceeding beauties. As each one came along the fiancée would whisper loudly, 'What about that one?'

"With a long, delicious sigh the little man turned to her at last and indicated the one he proposed she should have. 'Zuleika,' sang out in dulcet tones the saleslady, 'come here, dear' (every one is 'dear' in this kind of a shop from the manager to the gowns). Zuleika turned; she was the Oriental mannequin, very tall and with a beauty of the midnight-lighted-by-radiant-stars variety. She wore an emerald green gown, slashed up the side, showing an emerald green ankle and a midnight blue foot. The rest of the gown was a delirium of Irish green with flashes of deep blue. On her head was an Oriental turban with a huge sapphire glittering over one eye, from which—the sapphire, not the eye—arose a waving green plume.

"'Ah, Madame, it is a dream; the most wonderful model this year.' Up and down the mannequin paced, now and then pausing to show her green ankle or flutter her sapphire earrings.

"The little blonde, looking very comfortable and housewifely, surveyed the vision with a complacent smile. Her fiancé could only say in excited undertones, 'Yes, take that one—that's the one,' and I am sure that before his bewildered eyes there arose a long vista of married years with an Oriental princess.

"Price meant nothing after that; she must have it at any cost, and I would give a good deal to have seen that nice, plump little woman stumbling about in that emerald green creation and buried under that waving plume.

"Another tall, scraggly lady with a pine tree figure decided that she wanted a color different from any worn by the beauties, though goodness knows why she should! However, she was captious. Immediately one of the many blue frocked sprites was sent for 'Tu Tu.'

"'Tu Tu,' it was explained, is 'about Madame's figure,' and we will show the colors on her.'

"'Madame's figure, indeed!' A beautiful blonde, tall, surely, but with free and graceful curves, stood in the light of the stage. Thereupon satins and silks of all colors of the palette were draped about her, while the pine tree stood first on one judicial foot and then on the other.

"And I could not help thinking what a vastly different thing dressmaking is in these whirring times. Gone are the days when the dressmaker can attack her client with pictures of stiff and ugly figures clothed in stiff and ugly gowns and a tiny book of tinier samples. Our imagination will grow rusty with disuse if this demand for realism keeps on.

"And a modern fitting is a wholly different thing from the days when a pattern was cut and the dress made by the pattern. To-day Madame stands while the frock is draped to become her, then a mannequin takes her place and after the mannequin the lay figure.

"Oh, those lay figures! How old and familiar and cherished is their memory in the heart of every woman who has ever been her own modiste. Well do I remember my old 'Maria'—so dubbed because she was so very black—and the struggles I had because Maria was a perfect 36 and alas! my own proportions were sadly short in spots!

"The blackness of Maria was one of her greatest drawbacks. For instance, draping an evening gown against her black neck gave one a disconcerting impression! And so I advanced from Maria, who was hard and impregnable and could be jabbed with pins without the slightest outcry, to her more sensitive child, Genevieve, and that indeed was the beginning of halcyon days.

"Have you a Genevieve in your home? A lining is fitted exactly to your figure and Genevieve, who is a limp, unborn mass as yet, is inserted into the lining. Then the breath of life is gently blown into her and lo! she grows and grows into your own graceful proportions and Genevieve becomes your twin.

"Anything more human than Genevieve cannot be imagined with her waving arm. (Oh, yes, Maria was a Venus de Milo, but Genevieve has adopted one arm). There is something so grotesque about her resemblance to yourself. Mother, who, as I stated before, is ample, has her own Genevieve, which she keeps carefully concealed in the closet and only allows out in the light of day behind closed doors, her sense of modesty is so acute!

FROM KURZMANS

"At first I had a habit, inherited from old Maria, of stabbing poor Genevieve with my pins, and Genevieve would collapse with a long drawn hiss of pain and I would have to resuscitate her by means of a skilfully applied patch. But I learned Genevieve's tender nature after a while and now we are bosom pals, literally speaking.

"Genevieve now makes for me perfect fitting blouses, until my friends exclaim, 'How clever you are! I don't see how you fit your own back.' And not only am I not clever, but I am catty, and I take all the credit to myself and give Genevieve none.

"Genevieve almost died once, and it was a tragic occasion. My small niece, aged seven, had written and was performing a very thrilling melodrama, in which the villainess was stabbed as a grand finale. None of the actors would submit to being stabbed, so little niece had an inspired idea. She dressed up Genevieve as the wicked villainess and stabbed her with a kitchen dagger in most realistic fashion. It was a great success as a climax, but very disastrous for Genevieve.

"Dressmakers who haven't risen to the heights of 'Zuleikas' and 'Tu Tus' all have their Genevieves. Modern dressmaking would be impossible without them. Any old Maria would do in the old days, but now that every fold counts in the graceful effect and every wrinkle has its place, the world is thickly populated with Genevieves."

MISS M. A. ALTER—ADVERTISING MANAGER.

SEVENTEEN years ago a thirteen-year-old girl of foreign parentage was given a small place in the office of an advertising company. She was paid four dollars a week.

To-day Miss Martha A. Alter, the little girl of seventeen years ago, is considered an important factor with the firm in which she earned her first small salary. It has taken a number of years of hard work to attain her present position, but this energetic woman says that the process of climbing is exceedingly interesting and that the goal she has reached is well worth the struggle.

This woman is one of the very few of her sex who understand the advertising business in all its phases. There is very little connected with the business that she could not take in hand and successfully carry through. She is perfectly capable of doing soliciting, drawing up contracts, writing the material, setting it up and placing it. She has spent many years in studying other people's methods and has also originated a system of her own.

Miss Alter is exceedingly modest concerning her work, and declares that what she has done can be accomplished by any young woman who means business and sets her mind to her work.

"You know," this self-made woman laughed, "when a little girl of thirteen begins to work she has no very decided idea of what she wants to do, unless she happens to be one of those infant prodigies who see their lifework mapped out for them before they are out of long clothes. But there are not very many of that sort, and the formulation of a real idea of a future comes gradually to one who begins to work for $4 a week. Then, too, when it is necessary for a little girl of thirteen to go to work she is generally pretty willing to take anything that may be offered to her—she is in no position to pick and choose. Just after I had been graduated from school serious conditions occurred in our family and I had to go to work. I did not choose my position. I took the first thing that offered; was glad to get it; and that's the way I began.

"There are other things as well as earnestness that should not be overlooked by business women. Some of these things are considered by some women beneath their notice, but to me no woman should be careless of her dress and her appearance.

"I do not believe that the majority of women realize how important a matter good appearance is in the business world. Generally they do not make a study of dress. If they do, it is to either overdress or dress too severely. No woman should go to business looking like a walking fashion plate, and it would be utterly foolish to say that properly dressed persons lacking merit can win out, but I have seen many a clever woman fall just short of being truly successful because her appearance was so dowdy and so slovenly that she was nothing more or less than a discredit to the office. I have seen other women not nearly as clever, but smart, trim, neat and businesslike, who could walk away with the laurels without the slightest effort.

"A woman owes it to her employer, as well as herself, to look neat. Every business woman should dress with an eye to the prevailing fashions, not to the extreme, but if she appears antiquated in dress you may be certain that more than one will believe her to be so in thought and business methods. External appearance has a great deal to do in balancing the scales one way or the other.

"Well, after I had been working in one department for three years I became head of that branch. Then it was suggested that I learn stenography, but I did not care for it. I was honest with my employer and told him so; for a long time I had wished for an opportunity to let it be known that I did want to learn how to set up advertisements. This was my chance; I saw it and jumped to get it. At first I was not taken at all seriously, but finally I was given a trial and I made the most of it; my employers saw that I was in earnest and gave me what chances for advancement they consistently could.

"Every girl should have it thoroughly impressed upon her mind that she is a really significant cog in the wheel that runs the machinery. If her work is incorrectly done it throws things out of order. One who has a habit of throwing things into a chaotic condition is generally removed.

"A mistaken impression is that in gaining a higher position responsibility grows less and the work becomes lighter.

MISS MARTHA A. ALTER

It is quite the reverse, for when one is placed in charge of affairs her work is heavier. She has many reasons for worry, for she is then, in a great measure, held responsible for the work of others, and if she is found to be incapable of managing them and getting the best possible out of them, the hard fought for place must go to some one else. It is just as hard, if not harder, a fight to retain your high position after you have reached it as it was to climb to it in the beginning.

"The woman who is worthy of being placed in charge of affairs must not and can not always shut her work up with her desk; frequently it is carried home with her and remains with her far into the night. Yet, resuming the chair at her desk in the morning, she must be as cheerful, bright and active as though she had slept well and had not a business worry in the world.

"Be cheerful. Don't be in the doldrums. Men and women do not fancy dealing with grumpy persons. Few care whether you are worried or not. They may be troubled, too, but it is not ethical for good business people to impose their distempers upon one another.

"There is one thing that is truly deplorable, and that is the mistake the unthinking, giddy girl makes in going to luncheon every day with some member of the office force and many times with her employer. There is really no excuse for this, and nine times out of ten the results are disastrous. Attention shown to a girl of this kind turns her head. She becomes careless in her work, thinks only of gayety, and unless she discovers her foolishness in time her business career terminates rather abruptly.

"Don't expect concessions to be granted because you are a woman. It is not the sex that counts in business, it is the brains of the person. Talk to a man as man to man, don't try to shield yourself with your skirts.

"It is absolutely necessary for a woman to keep her personal and business integrity above criticism. Choose your associates carefully and do not commit follies that will promote gossip. Keep your record clean in every way possible.

"Use tact and diplomacy. Learn when to say just enough and no more, acquire the art of making the other person do most of the talking, for by listening you can find out a great deal more than by asking confusing questions. Be absolutely honest to your firm, learn to work and hope and if necessary fail, then begin anew and work again and with it all do not become discouraged. These are some of the things one must learn on the road to success. Some of the lessons are not pleasant, but must be studied and learned just the same."

Torn From The April Grandmother's Notebook

A Few Simple Recipes for Growing Old Gracefully.

MAKE up your mind not to be a giddy looking old woman. You can have your attire up to date and at the same time dignified. For instance, you need not affect habit skirts. In their stead have inverted box pleats, Directoire postilions and straight back widths gathered on to a waistband. Coming into fashion with the pannier is the eighteenth century sacque of the type worn by the late Mrs. George Washington. Study her portraits and notice how well she carried it, conscious, probably, that it was eminently well suited to the hip development of an elderly gentlewoman.

Have a variety of long shawls or scarfs of lace and the various finely embroidered fabrics. Correctly draped, they fall into graceful long lines about the figure and disguise all too full curves. And don't affect exceedingly décolleté evening gowns; on an elderly lady they look even more immodest than on a young matron or a girl.

Wear the palest of pinks and blues if you wish to and make white a standby for frocks of all kinds. The light shades will become you better than the darker ones, and there is no reason why you should be restricted to lavenders or grays as a relief for black costumes. That delicate tints are only for the youthful is a fallacy long since exploded.

Be especially careful about your hats. Don't let your favorite milliner persuade you to wear a shape that tilts over one eye or covers the forehead, and when she shows you the marked down ticket on a picture hat shame her by showing her the date of your birth. An elderly woman, fat or thin, under a wide brimmed chapeau is one of the seven wondrously ridiculous spectacles which this world affords.

So soon as you've celebrated your fiftieth birth anniversary, don't begin to wear square-toed shoes. Your feet will be equally comfortable and look younger if you put them in very long shoes that are moderately pointed. Turn your back determinedly upon white hosiery. It isn't really a mark of eminent respectability, as so many elderly ladies seem to imagine, and in a few hours' time it begins to look grimy. Moreover, white stockings thicken the appearance of the ankles, and huge ankles—they must show themselves occasionally in public—are unspeakably ugly. And in addition to being ugly, they're vulgar.

Wear gloves and corsets and collars that are comfortably loose. If you squeeze your hands, your hips or your throat, you'll be worried into irritability, and that state of mind makes for a forbidding expression. Beyond all else, the elderly lady's face must express serenity of mind.

When first you adopt eyeglasses have those with gold rims. They're smartest of all, and if you start with them you'll always have them so rimmed. Otherwise the convenient time for getting the golden framed glasses may never arrive.

If you can possibly avoid infliction, do not have artificial teeth on a plate. Have crowns put on each disintegrating tooth by the best dentist you can hear of. Hundreds of dollars expended for expert dentistry are not wasted dollars, and they'll save you twice the amount in doctors' bills, for the food that isn't well masticated can't be thoroughly digested.

Don't say "If I'm alive," "If I'm well enough," or "If I have the strength" when accepting an invitation. Accept enthusiastically and if, at the last moment, "you're engaged in dying" send word to that effect. Your would-be hostess will understand.

Beware of cultivating cranky notions. People always speak of "old cranks" never of "young cranks." Also avoid referring to the customs and ideals of "my time." The present is your time just as much as a portion of the past belonged to you and a part of the future will be identified with your interests.

PETES MADE BAD START AND BEES HAD EASY WIN

The opportunities for the home rooters to get busy at Riverside Park yesterday were very few and far between as the Bees had things coming all their own way and had a rather easy victory in the third of the series.

The score was 10—4, Jimmie Beard giving up the ghost after his fielders had shown themselves to be off color for the day. Beard remained with the ship but "Old Pep" was absent, and the champions hit their way to the big end of the proceeds. Jimmie had a slow ball that the Deneau aggregation had little difficulty in connecting with and with men on the bags, the pellet was generally wafted where the Petes were not.

The locals had a great chance to gather in a few in the seventh when an error, consecutive hitting and a pass scored one run and filled the bags. With two gone White was due, but his best was a short fly to short.

Beattie twirled a nice game for the Bees and had the assistance of good support.

The series close this afternoon with the contest being called at 2.30 o'clock. When the Rowanites will hop some in the hope of an even break.

The Petes jump to St. Thomas for Monday and Tuesday; London for Wednesday and Thursday, and finish out the week at Hamilton. By next week Manager Rowan hopes to have some new material. The following week Brantford will be here for two games, and Berlin follows on Wednesday and Thursday. On Friday and Saturday the Petes invade Guelph

Flax For Flowers.

When soil is meager and too poor for flowers try sowing it with flax. Ten cents will buy a big lot of it at any druggist's. Sow closely in well spaded soil and keep well watered. In a few weeks you will have a flourishing bed of green feathery plants, and from mid-July until September your bed will be covered with pale blue blossom stars.—Woman's Home Companion.

Napoleon as a Bogy Man.

Thackeray once saw Napoleon on the island of St. Helena. The novelist—he was born in Calcutta in 1811—was on his way to England as a child. "Our ship touched at an island where my black servant took me for a long walk over rocks and hills until we saw a man walking in a garden. 'That is he,' said the black man; 'that is Bonaparte. He eats three sheep every day and all the little children he can lay hands on'." That black serving man was not the only person of the time to believe the story which he tole

Jovial on the Scaffold.

Sir Thomas More, who was beheaded in 1535, was famous for his wit. "He died," says the chronicler, "with an unconcern that in others would have appeared to be levity, but in him was nature." He jested on the scaffold, and he had been just as humorous during his imprisonment. With a pathetic touch which is never absent from the true humorist he closed all his windows when they took his books from him. "It is time to shut up shop," he said, "when the wares are all gone."

Von Kubelik's press agent was awarded $750 in a London court for the violinist's failure to perform at a benefit concert.

Probably if everybody had to pay $2 to vote, like going to the theatre everybody would go to the polls.

DIABETES

Sanol's Antidiabetes, the great discovery of a German Specialist, is the only practical and thoroughly tested Remedy for Diabetes-mellitus. It has a specific action against the poisons of the disease, and by its use the secretion of sugar almost immediately abates and disappears altogether after a short time. So long as the disease has not reached its last stages, a cure can be effected with "Sanol's Antidiabetes."

Sanol's Antidiabetes is used with an alternate diet regimen based on long experience in the study of this disease.

All sufferers from this terrible and hitherto considered incurable disease should not hesitate to give "Sanol's Antidiabetes" a trial, as we feel absolutely certain that it will justify all the claims we make for it.

This remedy is perfectly harmless to the organic system, being composed only of herbs and extracts, and containing no poisonous or injurious matter whatever.

CONTROLS BIG HARBOR

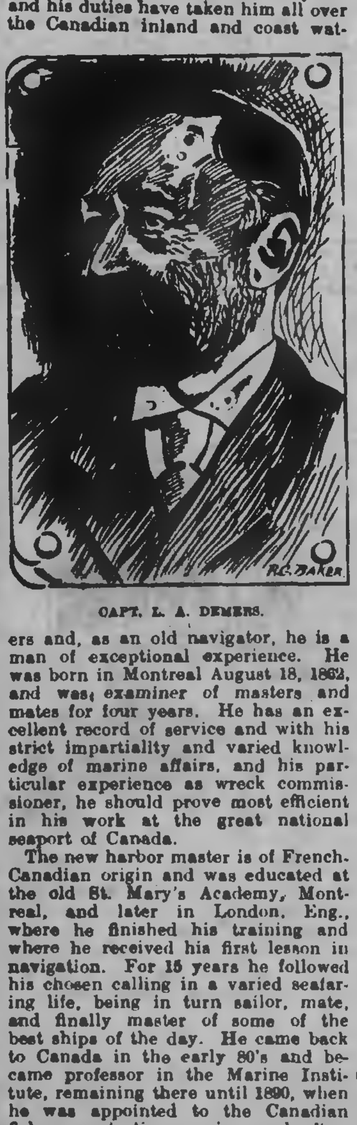
CAPT. DEMERS IS APPOINTED TO IMPORTANT POST.

Wreck Commissioner For the Dominion, Who Is Now In Charge of Canada's Biggest Ocean Port, Is Widely Known and Has Had Extensive Experience In the Work—Worked Up From Before the Mast.

Captain L. A. Demers, the efficient Dominion wreck commissioner, has been appointed harbor master of Montreal, succeeding James McShane, who has retired on superannuation. Captain Demers replaced Captain Spain as wreck commissioner and has rendered splendid service to the Government and country in this position, so that his promotion to the still more important duties of harbor master of the great port of Montreal is well deserved and meets with the approval of business men of the national commercial metropolis.

The numerous friends of Captain Demers in Ottawa are delighted to learn of his appointment and he has received warm congratulations from hosts of friends from all parts of Canada. Few men in the Dominion are better known in marine circles and none are more highly respected and esteemed. His impartiality and fearlessness in carrying out his duties as wreck commissioner have earned for him a most enviable reputation and his work has frequently received most favorable comment by the press of Canada.

Captain Demers has been wreck commissioner for the past three years and his duties have taken him all over the Canadian inland and coast waters and, as an old navigator, he is a man of exceptional experience. He was born in Montreal August 18, 1862, and was examiner of masters and mates for four years. He has an excellent record of service and with his strict impartiality and varied knowledge of marine affairs, and his particular experience as wreck commissioner, he should prove most efficient in his work at the great national seaport of Canada.



CAPT. L. A. DEMERS.

The new harbor master is of French-Canadian origin and was educated at the old St. Mary's Academy, Montreal, and later in London, Eng., where he finished his training and where he received his first lesson in navigation. For 15 years he followed his chosen calling in a varied seafaring life, being in turn sailor, mate, and finally master of some of the best ships of the day. He came back to Canada in the early 80's and became professor in the Marine Institute, remaining there until 1890, when he was appointed to the Canadian fishery protection service, and afterward assistant examiner of masters and mates. He was subsequently promoted chief examiner. Since then his promotion has been rapid. He was made wreck commissioner June, 1909, and he has been made a fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society and also a fellow of the Royal Society of Naval Architects.

While in England he married Elizabeth, daughter of Captain Craggs, a resident of London, England.

Should Stop Him.

During a voyage across the Atlantic Mr. J. K. Jerome was annoyed by a fellow-passenger who persisted in supplying him with information he didn't want.

He was leaning over the rail one day when this particular nuisance came up and tapped him familiarly on the shoulder.

"Sir," he told the famous humorist, very gravely, "do you know that if the earth were flattened out, the sea would be two miles deep all over the world?"

With an air of deep anxiety Mr. Jerome replied:

"My dear sir, if you catch anybody flattening out the earth, please shoot him on the spot. I can't swim."

Probably.

Sir Robert Finlay has never been known to crack a joke, but he tells one of the finest stories of another man's ready wit.

He was in Ireland, and got into conversation with a drover who was taking a herd of cows to market. Eight pounds a head they would average, the Irishman told him.

"Oh, you should take them to England," said the Scot. "They would fetch at least fourteen pounds there."

The drover answered with a flash:

"Shure, yer honor, if yez could take the Lakes of Killarney to purgathorry they'd fetch a guinea a dhrop."

The Month of May.

The Anglo-Saxons called the month of May Trimilki, because then they began to milk their cows thrice a day.

The New York police force is to be insured in bulk. The men will pay the premiums.

"Fruit-a-tives" Cures Constipation

Miss E. A. GOODALL

EDMONTON, ALTA., Nov. 20th. 1911

"I have been a sufferer since babyhood from that terrible complaint, Constipation. I have been treated by physicans, and have taken every medicine I heard of, but without the slightest benefit. I finally concluded that there was no remedy in the world that could cure Constipation.

About this time, I heard about "Fruit-a-tives" and decided to try them. The effect was marvellous.

The first box gave me great relief, and after I had used a few boxes, I found that I was entirely well.

(By T. D. Crothers, M.D.)

Some recent studies of mortality lists show that the names given as the cause of death are very often untrue. The thought of reflection on the character of the deceased and family pride suggests another name for the disease, supported by some transient symptoms at the last.

Thus pneumonia, consumption, apoplexy, heart disease, gastritis and a long list of names of diseases are found to occur in persons who have used spirits to excess for long periods, and these diseases, if they existed at all, were distinctly due to spirits.

In 100 cases of pneumonia eighty-six per cent occurred in persons who were inebriates up to the last moment. The same in other diseases. It is very evident that the lists of diseases are very misleading, and when consumption is said to have been responsible for 100 deaths, careful examinations show that a very large proportion of these cases were directly due to alcohol, and consumption was only the last condition of very short duration.

Studies of vital statistics bring out this fact more and more prominently. If the exact causes were stated of death, in the large cities particularly, the predominance of alcohol would be most startling. In the list of casualties and accidents alcohol is rarely mentioned, yet in reality alcohol is the most prominent cause in confusing, bewildering the person, making him reckless and careless, and provoking the fatalities which would not have occurred otherwise.

In Philadelphia, of thirty fatal occurring in one month, twenty-four were traceable to the alcoholic bewilderment of the persons killed. Railroads understand this, and while they do not publish the exact causes, they realize very keenly that it is bewilderment of alcohol that is responsible for a large proportion of accidents.

The signal-tower man of a Western railroad was given a bottle of whiskey one cold night, and a few hours later he failed to give the proper signals and a terrible accident happened. The engineer was killed, and there was no testimony of the exact cause, and yet the tower-man was undoubtedly responsible.

He was discharged and soon became a chronic inebriate.

The more the alcohol question is studied the more pronounced the injuries that come from it. It is said on good authority that a large per cent of deaths of men and women under forty can be traced to this cause, either directly and indirectly, and when the vital statistics describe accurately the exciting and predisposing causes of death and disease alcohol will lead all the rest.

Scientific studies are widening the field in this direction, and independent observers are recognizing that no one cause in disease and mortality is so prominent and yet it is covered up and concealed as a reflection on the moral character of the person.

The delusion that alcohol has a tonic and stimulating power lingers in every community, and is fostered by the trade, and yet every advance of science disproves it, and all carefully studied experience contradicts it and fails to confirm it.

A great man dies and physicians and friends gather at his bedside, making every effort to prolong life. They fail, and the eulogies that follow talk of the mysterious providence that called away a man in his prime when he was doing the best work.

In reality, it was suicide, pure and simple, from alcohol and delusions that it was helpful to him. The mysterious providence was the realm of cause and effect. He died by his own hands, and yet no one but the physicians knew of this or would dare mention it for fear of hurting the feeling of his friends.

But a revolution is coming. The reality will be recognized, and the facts that are so carefully covered up will appear above all theories or sentiment and be recognized.

Why do men talk so much about women talking so much?

THIRTEEN WERE KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK NEAR CHICAGO

Woman Who Was In Charge of Block Signal System Collapses After a Disaster on the C. B. & Q. In Which a Mail Train Crashed Into a Standing Express—Ghouls Robbed the Bodies of Jewels.

Chicago, July 15.—Thirteen persons were killed and fifteen or twenty injured in a wreck on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway at Western Springs, a suburb of Chicago, at 6.30 a.m. yesterday.

Coming through a fog with supposedly a clear track ahead, train No. 8, a fast mail, ran at full speed into the rear of train No. 2, known as the Overland Express from Denver, which was standing still on the track, telescoping two of the Overland Pullman cars.

Railroad officials refused to fix the blame until after the wreck had been investigated thoroughly. Mrs. F. A. Wilcox, who was in charge of the tower from which the block signals were controlled, said she was certain the black was thrown against both trains. She collapsed after the accident and is still in a highly nervous condition.

All the dead, except Bronson, were taken from the rear coach of the Denver train. The engine of No. 8 plowed through this car, halving it, and crushing out the lives of the helpless passengers, many of whom still were in their berths. On into the second coach the engine then sped. Half-way through that car it veered to the left, derailing the engine.

Fire, starting from the gas lights in the sleepers, then broke out. Many victims, pinioned down by heavy timbers and iron pleaded for death. Members of the fire brigades of Western Springs and La Grange were on the scene in a few minutes after the wreck occurred and they put out the blaze.

Ghouls are believed to have robbed the dead before they reached the morgue in La Grange. More than a dozen large diamond sets are missing, and although most of the dead appeared to have been persons in comfortable circumstances.

Mrs. Wilcox asserts that she is not to blame as the blocks were set against the trains, but the signals were disregarded.

A statement issued by P. S. Eustis, passenger traffic manager of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad last night substantiated Mrs. Wilcox's assertion that she was not to blame, and also corroborated the story that torpedoes were set by the brakeman of No. 2. The statement does not fix the blame for the accident.

DUCHESS GOES TO EUROPE FOR REST

London, July 15.—In view of the serious illness through which the Duchess of Connaught has just passed, it has been decided that she should leave Canada to spend a few weeks at a German health resort.

Therefore, the duchess will shortly take her departure and proceed either to Marienbad or Wiesbaden. She will be accompanied by Princess Patricia, and later in the year, both will come to England and spend a month or two at Bagshot Park.

Handcar Passenger Killed.

Montreal, July 15.—While taking on cars loaded with lumber at Beauceville Friday the locomotive of a special train from Montreal collided with a handcar and caused a gruesome accident. On this handcar were H. Tardiff, his wife, and mother-in-law, and a man whose name the authorities did not secure. The handcar was crushed to bits and Mrs. Pichet, Tardiff's mother-in-law, was instantly killed, her body being horribly mutilated. All the others sustained serious injuries.

Cyclone at Kenosha, Wis.

Kenosha, Wis., July 15.—One woman was killed and many persons were injured in a cyclone which passed through this city early yesterday The storm left a path of desolation behind. Houses were blown down, trees uprooted, barns collapsed and crops ruined.

Mrs. F. Printz of South Kenosha was killed by the shock of the storm. Mrs. Printz was about to become a mother, when the cyclone struck, and she died from shock. The two-storey home of Capt. L. Nelson at South Kenosha was demolished and Nelson was found buried in the debris an hour later.

HORRORS IN PERU NOT EXAGGERATED

London, July 15.—The disclosures as to the state of affairs in the rubber industry in Peru, published in the blue book just issued for the Foreign Office, as the result of Sir Roger Casement's investigations, attract a great amount of attention and have caused comparisons to be drawn between these wholesale atrocities and those at one time reported from the Congo Free State. The British consul-general at Rio Janeiro fully confirms the charges brought against the native agents of the Peruvian-Amazon Co., a British concern, formerly engaged in rubber collection in the Putumayo district.

The gruesome story was first published in the United States and was brought to the attention of the British Foreign Office by the Washington State Department.

Sir Roger Casement was sent out to Peru a year ago, and found overwhelming evidence of the murder and torture of defenceless Indians. He discovered that kerosene had been poured over men, women and children who had been tied to stakes and were then set on fire. The brains of children had been dashed out, the limbs of Indians had been cut off or broken and they had been left to die. The tortures also included the deliberate starvation of many people.

The Foreign Office says that after many months of futile attempts to get the Peruvian Government to take measures to prevent the recurrence of such horrors and to punish the guilty persons, it had decided with the cordial acquiescence of the United States Government that the only course to take was to publish the facts in full.

Smash on the G.T.R.

Montreal, July 15.—The Grand Trunk Railway officials here announced yesterday morning that the Toronto train to Montreal Friday night collided with a freight at Newtonville, Ont. William Burgess of Hamilton, Ont., fireman on the passenger locomotive, was slightly injured and was taken to Cobourg Hospital. Eight freight cars were derailed. The track was cleared after several hours' work and traffice resumed.

Lorimer's Election Invalid.

Washington, July 15.—By a vote of 55 to 28 the Senate yesterday unseated Senator William Lorimer of Illinois, and held his election invalid.

Lightning Kills Farmer.

Kingston, July 15.—While milking a cow alongside his barn about six o'clock Saturday evening, William McKenna, farmer, 63 years of age, was instantly killed during a thunderstorm. A lightning bolt struck the barn and knocked the side out of it, and also struck McKenna and his two children. The father was instantly killed, but the boy and girl recovered. The boy managed to crawl to the house and notified those at home of the terrible accident. Two cows nearby were also killed by the bolt.

PREMIER BORDEN WAS THE GUEST OF KING AND QUEEN

Empire Defence Conference Prepares For Real Work and Will Meet Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday—Their Majesties Entertain the Premier at Luncheon — New Zealand Man Announces a Generous Offer.

London, July 15.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Imperial defence committee will meet three times this week—Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Considerable speculations is rife as to the result, but the Canadian Associated Press learns that the proceedings have not yet passed the preliminary stage in which full information is being tendered and drawn out by questioning on the part of Canadians, nor have the deliberations been confined to the naval question. Trade matters have been dealt with, Hon. George E. Foster making a forcible presentation at Saturday's conference, which lasted nearly two hours.

At the close there followed a luncheon in honor of Premier Borden by the King and Queen at Buckingham Palace. Their Majesties received the guests in the state rooms, Lewis Harcourt, Colonial Secretary, presenting the Canadians.

Among those present were the Duke and Duchess of Argyll, Earl and Countess of Minto, Lord Strathcona and Mount Stephen, Premier and Mrs. Asquith, Lewis Harcourt and Mrs. Harcourt, A. J. Balfour, Winston Churchill, Bonar Law, and some thirty others. After the luncheon, Hon. J. D. Hazen, Hon. Mr. Pelletier and ladies attended Lord Rothschild's garden party, where were also Their Majesties.

Hon. Mr. Borden and colleagues will, to-morrow, be guests at a dinner in the House of Commons of the Empire Parliamentary Association, at which Hon. Mr. Borden and Hon. Mr. Foster will speak.

A Biennial Contribution.

London, July 15.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Capt. Faber, M.P., who is shortly going to Canada, and who lunches with Premier Borden on Friday, speaking at Kingsciere, said he believed it would be found that the Canadian offer was to find seven million dollars every other year for an ironclad and that New Zealand would do the same.

The utterance has given rise to a good deal of comment, but it is not believed that such a decision has been reached.

The Mail, in a probably well-founded editorial, says: "Britain must ask Canada to councils. Canada asks for a sea council and there's a sea vacant."

The Telegraph says: "Canadian Ministers don't show the hopeless attitude of British politicians in approaching the solution of the problem. While they have pretensions as representatives of the Dominion, they are not greedy for power, but are merely desirous of some voice in the Imperial policy in return for effective aid in Imperial defence."

The Express says it understands that Canadians in London are much dissatisfied with the treatment meted out to Dominion Ministers by the British Government.

"When Mr. Borden," it continues, "attended the R.C.I. banquet he was accompanied by six of his colleagues. In view of the fact that Mr. Borden was to make his first public speech, it was expected the Government would mark the importance of the occasion by sending at least one member of the Imperial Cabinet. As it was, not a single member took the trouble to be present, and a splendid opportunity for a public welcoming of the distinguished visitors missed.

"This is interpreted as a slight. 'What,' they ask, 'would English people say if Asquith and their Ministerial colleagues were to visit Ottawa and were entertained to a great public dinner which was boycotted by the whole Dominion Cabinet'."

Fault Destroyed Airship.

Atlantic City, N.J., July 15.—The explosion of the gas envelope of Melvin Vaniman's airship here on July 2, which caused the death of its crew of five men, was due, not to the action of the sun's rays, as at first supposed, but to a fault in construction which allowed the expanding gas to exhaust directly over the exhaust of the propeller engines, thus igniting it. This is the conclusion reached by Charles Hillman, an expert who has just concluded an investigation of the disaster.

Former Hamiltonian Dead.

Moosejaw, Sask, July 15.—Mrs. Rosetta Rogers, formerly of Hamilton, was drowned when a boat capsized on the river Friday night. C. D. Walker, her companion, was saved.

Even the Flowers Have Nerves.

"Why does the sundew not put its leaf tentacles in operation when raindrops fall on them and yet is quick to capture a fly?" writes Andrew Wilson in the Illustrated London News. The only possible reply is that the plant has learned to distinguish between contact which means food and that which implies only the needed rain. The sensitive plant (mimosa) droops its leaves on the slightest touch, but not when it is watered. Placed in a carriage, such a plant lowers its leaves at first when the carriage moves, but soon, accustomed to the motion, expands them. You can give a sensitive plant ether and abolish its sensitiveness just as you rob the animal of its consciousness when you administer the anaesthetic. Clearly we have to revise all our notions of plant nervousness if we would explain the actions even of the daisies, which shut up their petals when the wind blows and open them under the influence of sunshine.

Motor Caught Bicycle Thief.

Brockville, July 15.—The Brockville police had an exciting automobile chase for a bicycle thief, whom they captured two miles east of Iroquois riding the stolen bike. The man acknowledged four other similar thefts committed here during the past six weeks and informed the police that he had disposed of his booty in the vicinity of Cornwall, to which place he was heading when the cops nabbed him. The prisoner gave his name as Fred. Gray of Buffalo, N.Y. He was sent for trial before the county judge.

Goes Home For Trial.

Ottawa, July 15.—Camille Jules Auguste Moriam, a Frenchman, who was arrested by the Dominion police here as the result of a complaint from the police authorities in Paris, that he was wanted there for embezzlement, will be extradited to his native land. Mr. Justice MacTavish issued the order on Saturday. Fifteen days must elapse before it goes into effect.

CORP. MORTIMER MAKES RECORD

Bisley, July 15.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Corpl. Mortimer, a Canadian marksman, Saturday scored a world's record at the 1,200 yards range in the King's Norton match rifle shoot at Bisley, making 73 points out of a possible 75 with his 15 shots.

F. W. Henry, Ulster, Ireland, tied Mortimer's sensational score, but in the shoot-off the Canadian beat the Irishman by 14 points to 7 with his three shots.

Corpl. Mortimer has been doing some phenomenal shooting during the meeting, having taken already four first and one second prizes.

Among the Canadians, Sergt. Smith was 32nd, Capt. Schlater 33rd, Corpl. Regan 40th, Lieut. Maggs, 58th, Sergt.-Major MacDougall 60th, each winning $40; Pte. Mitchell 75th, Capt. Forster 111th, Sergt. Simpson 145th, and Sergt. Armstrong 155th, each winning $20.

Pastor Fatally Injured.

Ashbury Park, N.J., July 15.—Rev. S. Ross MacClements, D.D., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of this city, was mortally injured Friday night at Allenhurst when he attempted to board a moving train. Both feet were severed and his left hand was cut off.

A LIBERAL VICTORY.

Ministerialist Defeats Laborite and Tory In Hanley, Eng.

London, July 15.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The result of the Hanley bye-election, caused by the death of Enoch Edwards, Laborite, resulted in the election of R. Louthwaite, Liberal, who secured 6,647 votes, while the Unionist candidate had 5,993 and Finney, Laborite, 1,694.

At the general election in December, 1910, there was a straight contest between the late Enoch Edwards, a Labor candidate, and the Unionist representative. Mr. Edwards was returned by a majority of 3,695.

After his recent death, the Liberals in the constituency insisted on running their own candidate, R. Louthwaite, and a triangular contest ensued with the result as above. The Liberals thus had a majority of 654 over the Conservative and 4,950 over the Laborite.

Curiously enough the combined Liberal and Labor vote is only two short of the Labor poll in 1910, while the Conservative vote has increased by 1,335. The net result is a drop in the Liberal-Labor majority of 1,337, as compared with the general election figures.

Cherry Garden.

Londoners, in cherry time, used formerly to flock to Bermondsey to regale themselves with fruit at the famous "Cherry Garden." Pepys, in June, 1664, records a visit to the place—"To Greenwich, and so to the Cherry Garden, and thence by water, singing finely." The site of the old garden, alluded to in later time by Dickens, is now covered by a street whose name preserves its memory—and little more. You can still take a ticket to Cherry Garden pier.

Thugs Assault Girl.

Hamilton, July 15.—The police are looking for a gang of eight ruffians who waylaid Albert Hannah and a girl friend named Sarah Holmes, on the mountain Friday night, and criminally assaulted the girl. The pair were held up at the point of a revolver. Three men held the man and one after another assaulted the girl, who is in a serious condition.

Will Hesitate.

Ottawa, July 15.—The Saskatchewan result will interfere with the prospects of a number of M.P.'s from the west who were expecting to resign and take offices or appointments before Parliament assembled.

ENGINEER SOTHAM QUITS HIS JOB

Toronto, July 15.—P. W. Sothman, chief engineer of the Hydro-Electric Commission, announced definitely last night that he had tendered his resignation to Hon. Adam Beck, asking that it take effect on August 1. Mr. Sothman is going into free lance work as a consulting engineer and will establish his business in Toronto. He leaves a position which the commission will find hard to fill.

MR. P. W. SOTHMAN.

"I believe that I have finished my work. I have done just what I started out to do," he said. "If I stayed with the commission my work henceforth would be largely routine, so I believe that it would pay me better to start a business of my own. You may be sure, I will stay in Canada, and, yes, Toronto, because this is the best place in the world."

SORCERY IN FRANCE.

Revival of the "Black Arts" of Long Ago, When Witches Flourished.

An extraordinary story comes from Calais. While a sergeant was on guard before the postern gate of the old citadel two black-veiled women glided slowly into view, and one of the visitors stretched herself out on the damp grass with arms extended in the form of a cross. The other with a small spade began hastily to dig a hole in the ground. In it she placed a packet wrapped in white linen, covered it as quickly as possible, and with her companion disappeared as silently as they had come. Under the idea that he had witnessed the closing scenes of an infanticide, the sergeant notified the authorities, and the package was disinterred and taken to the police headquarters. At the same time a doctor was summoned who at once began to unwrap the parcel.

What was the astonishment of the investigators finally to discover, not the remains of a child, but merely a pig's heart. And, in what a condition! It was pierced through and through in every direction with no fewer than 113 pins, and was also traversed by a dagger.

In fact the authorities were faced with a case of "envoutement," one of the favorite forms of sorcery in the Middle Ages, which borrowed it from antiquity. It was then practiced very generally, together with the "black mass," the "reptile sacrament," human sacrifice and other superstitious relics of barbarism.

The method was adopted as follows: Some hairs or articles of clothing of the person to be bewitched were procured, and an animal was chosen to represent this person, and was named after him. The creature was first placed in contact with the victim's belongings, and then slain with a magic dagger.

Its heart was taken out and wrapped, if possible, in the person's clothes, and during three days pins and nails were driven through it to an accompaniment of curses and maledictions. It was believed that all the tortures inflicted on the dead animal's heart would be endured by the living individual.

A much more common way, however, was to mould a wax image of the person to be bewitched, and to dress it in the clothes he or she usually wore. The waxen doll was then cursed and tortured in the hope that the person would suffer the same.

When the Ostrich Hurries.

Two feet is the usual stride of an ostrich when it walks, but when the bird is alarmed and commences to run it exchanges its mincing stride for fourteen foot steps, which easily carries it over the ground at a rate of twenty-five miles an hour. Ordinarily an ostrich makes no effort to profit by its length of legs, and many birds with legs less than a quarter as long habitually use a three and four foot stride, for it seems to be one of the rules of nature that birds like ostriches, flamingoes and cranes extend their stride only when alarmed. The ostrich when it runs takes both feet off the ground at every stride, its progress being made by means of a series of jumps so rapidly performed as to leave the observer under the impression that one foot remains on the ground until the other is placed.

Great Expectations.

"I expect to be rich some day."

"That so? Somebody likely to leave you money?"

"That's it exactly. You don't suppose I expect to earn a fortune, do you?"

Opportunity.

"Opportunity comes," said the old proverb, "with feet of wool, treading soft." You must have the instinct of an artist for the approaches of this good genius. You must listen for it.

FOUR DROWNING ACCIDENTS WERE RECORDED YESTERDAY

Col. Roosevelt Busy.

Oyster Bay, N.Y., July 15.—Col. Roosevelt said Saturday that he would be unable to attend the organization of the new National Progressive party in the State of Michigan "under the Oaks at Jackson" on July 20. He had been invited to "sound the keynote" of the Progressive campaign at the birth of the new party in Michigan.

"I am very hard at work," said the colonel, "with the preparation of a long statement of my own views on the big questions which are to come up before the National Progressive Convention. I want to have this completed before the convention meets. I do not think that I shall be able to get away from here next week. I am very sorry as I particularly would like to attend the meeting at Jackson, Mich."

NEW GOLD FIELD NEAR SUDBURY

Sudbury, July 15.—George Bruce and Joe Sherry are back from a prospecting trip into a new gold district around Roche Lake, which lies some 12 miles to the northwest of Flying Post, a Hudson Bay post, on the Groundhog Lake.

Roche Lake is one of the big series that seem to connect the east and west branches of the Groundhog River.

It lies on a line due west of Larder, about 100 miles, about 20 miles south of the Nivin's Base Line, which forms the southern boundary of Tisdale, and 50 miles west of Tisdale. To continue the location, it is 45 miles north of the Canadian Pacific, and will be crossed by the Canadian Northern.

It is reached by canoe from Ridout, on the Canadian Pacific, by going down the west branch of the Groundhog River, or the chain of lakes that go to form that river.

But by reason of the winding way the distance is almost double the one the bird would take in reaching the new camp.

"We staked ten claims for ourselves, George and I, and for Jack Hammell, Benny Hollinger and Barney McEnary, and good ones, too. Black and Duncan brought out a lot of samples, and I have heard that these assay from $1 to $100 to the ton," said Joe Skerry.

"We were, possibly, the first on the ground. Jack Monroe, Springer and some others had been in a section to the east, some few miles, but ours is virgin ground. But its richness will soon attract the prospectors, who is ever taking his chances."

ST. MARGARET OF CANADA

Montreal, July 15.—The Roman Catholics of Canada rejoice to-day in the news from Rome indicating that a new saint will soon be added to the calendar and that the faithful will soon be able to invoke the name of St. Marget of Canada.

On the 7th of December, 1878, a decree of the sacred congregation of rites, declared venerable Margaret Bourgeoys, foundress of the congregation of Notre Dame, who died here in Montreal on the 12th of January, 1700, aged 80 years, now after approving of the miracles brought about by her intercession, Rome has decreed her beatification. As canonization is sure to follow, Canada will soon have her first saint in the person of Saint Margaret of Canada.

With a Crowd of Bystanders Looking on In the Belief That the Victim Was Joking, Charles Shearan Loses His Life In Toronto Lagoon—Man Named Farley Perishes In Lake Off Burlington Beach While Canoeing.

Toronto, July 15.—While those who might have saved him looked on and laughed, Charles Shearan, 27 years old, of 20 Soho street, was drowned from a canoe in fifteen feet of water in the lagoon at Hanlan's Point about ten o'clock Saturday evening. Harry Hefferon of 48 Stephanie street, who also was in the canoe when it overturned, swam to the dock and escaped with a wetting. The accident happened about 35 feet south of the Toronto Rowing Club float.

Shearan and Hefferon left the city for the island about 8.30 in company with Rex Saunders, who roomed with Shearan. In the crush at the Point, Saunders was separated from the other two, and did not see either of them again. The others subsequently obtained a canoe and were paddling close to shore when a wave from a gasoline launch hit them, and they found themselves in the water. Hefferon swam to the dock, while Shearan, who could not swim, clung to the canoe and called for aid.

In the meantime Harry Hefferon reached the dock and called to the occupants of two near-by canoes to come to the rescue of his companion. These men heard but made no attempt at aid, treating the whole affair as if it were a joke. A moment after Shearan lost his hold on the slippery canoe and sank.

Several youths have lately been in the habit of feigning distress while swimming near the Point, and when a canoe would rush to the spot its occupants would be met with taunts and ridicule. The life-saving appliances are inaccessible in the majority of cases.

Drowned at Hamilton.

Hamilton, July 15.—When a canoe belonging to E. Muirhead of Toronto upset late last night off Burlington Beach, a young man, who is believed to be a resident of Toronto named Farley, was drowned.

The fatality happened about ten o'clock between stations fourteen and sixteen on the radial. People on the beach heard cries and on arrival at the scene of the drowning found an upturned canoe about one hundred yards from shore.

It was at first thought that the drowned man was E. Muirhead, who is at present camping at the beach, and who lives at the corner of Kingston road and Lee avenue, Toronto, but upon investigation Muirhead was discovered to be safe. He had loaned the boat yesterday afternoon to Farley, and it seems probable that Farley was the occupant when the accident happened.

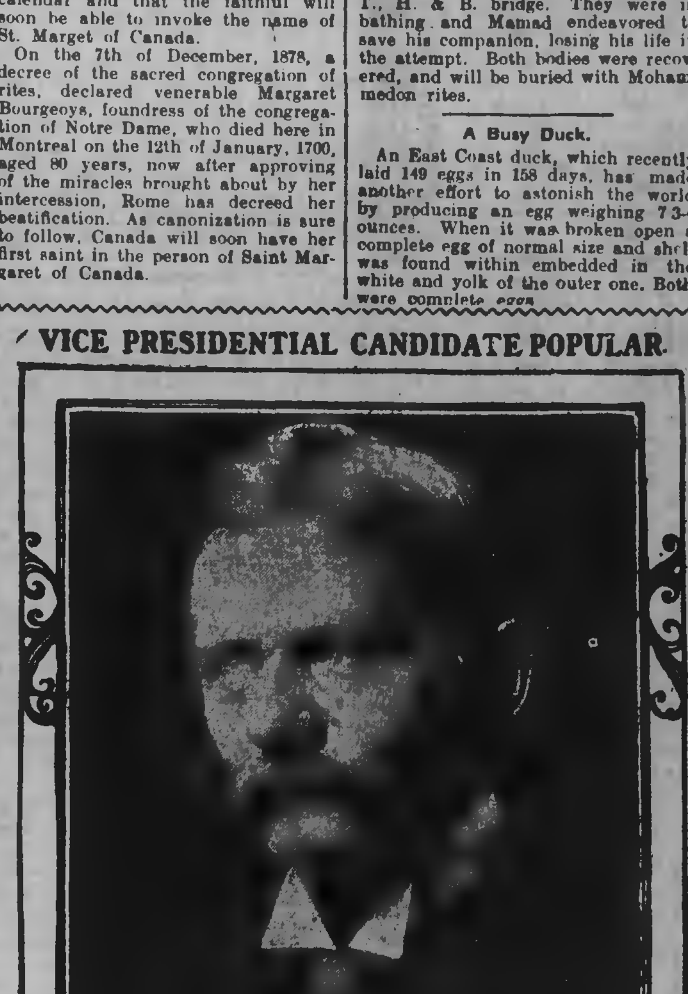
Two Turks Drowned at Brantford.

Brantford, July 15.—Ahmay Mamad and Mahamed Ayaud, two young Turks, were drowned here yesterday afternoon in the Grand River at the T., H. & B. bridge. They were in bathing and Mamad endeavored to save his companion, losing his life in the attempt. Both bodies were recovered, and will be buried with Mohammedon rites.

A Busy Duck.

An East Coast duck, which recently laid 149 eggs in 158 days, has made another effort to astonish the world by producing an egg weighing 7 3-4 ounces. When it was broken open a complete egg of normal size and shell was found within embedded in the white and yolk of the outer one. Both were complete eggs.

VICE PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE POPULAR.



T R MARSHALL.

Governor Thomas R. Marshall, of Indiana, who was selected by the National Democratic Convention as the running mate with Governor Woodrow Wilson, is being congratulated by friends all over the country. Governor Marshall has been identified with democratic politics for many years, and his selection for the Vice Presidential nomination is a popular one. In the East there is a strong feeling that the ticket is a very strong one and bound to make an interesting fight against President Taft.

SUFFERED FROM VIOLENT CATHARTICS

The Warning of Mr. Geo. C. Fox Is One That Should Be Heeded by All.

Few men on the road are better known than genial George Fox, whose friends throughout the West are legion. In the following letter he expresses gratitude for signal services rendered by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. He goes on to say: "Until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills and experienced their wonderful mildness and curative power, I estimated the value of every pill by its activity. Talking about this to a well-known physician I met on the train the other day, he explained there are different kinds of drugs that act upon the bowels, the most active being known as drastic. Except in extreme cases where the life of the patient depends upon speedy evacuation of the bowels, pills should never be drastic. Purgatives cause catarrh of the bowels and inflammation; their dose must be increased, causing even more harm. With such a clear explanation I could see why Dr. Hamilton's Pills are curative and not irritating, why they are mild, yet most searching.

"From my experience I recommend everyone that takes pills to give up the old-fashioned harsh, purging pill, and, instead, to use Dr. Hamilton's. They cure headache, billiousness, constipation, bad stomach, and keep the system in perfect condition."

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP AND TELEPHONES

Hon. I. B. Lucas, a member of the Ontario Government, has gone to England, and part of his mission while attending the International School Congress, is to study the question of public ownership of telephones. The telephone system in England has been taken over by the Government and is operated in connection with the post offices. This has been advocated in Canada, the proposal being for the Provinces to operate the long distance lines in connection with independent or municipally owned local lines. If the cheap rates and efficiency of service that comes with competition can be secured with one system, then the one local or trunk line would be preferred, but it would require regulations better than have yet been found to bring about this condition with one system under the control and operated for the benefit of a company. It is in these "natural monopolies" that public ownership finds its best field and any light that can be obtained on the public ownership and operation of telephones will be welcomed.

THE COUNTRY CORRESPONDENT

Prof. A. Knight, of Queen's University, in a widely published article, deals with the question of education in our public schools and deplores the fact that so many of the youth who are trained there receive little scholastic equipment for the battle of life. It is the rural school with which the professor finds most fault and the most glaring defect which he notices in the system is the inability of its graduates to write the English language properly being deficient in the art of handwriting, spelling and grammar.

While no one can dispute the correctness of the conclusions arrived at it should be remembered that the system is not entirely at fault but that the barrenness of result is to a large extent due to the irregular attendance at rural public schools as compared with those in towns and cities. Every public school teacher finds his or her efforts handicapped by this irregularity against which all compulsory laws of attendance are not sufficient to provide.

Prof. Knight to illustrate his point, cites the case of the average country correspondent who has become a necessary adjunct to the newspaper business of the country and aside from the ignorance of orthography and syntax, the professor deplores the fact that subjects so trivial are selected as articles of news. He refers to such announcements as "house cleaning is the order of the day," or that some citizen "has improved the appearance of his buggy by giving it a new coat of paint."

Prof. Knight loses sight of the fact that the field of the correspondent in a narrow one and that his choice of topics is consequently limited. What is news in a contry village is perhaps of small account in a city; what village people talk about with interest may perhaps appear trivial to a college professor. Still what people talk about most is what they like best to see in print just as they would not fail to be interested by a picture of some rural scene in their midst. Should they attempt any learned essay on a public question there effusion would not be read and their service to the public would fail of appreciation.

When John Jones paints his buggy his neighbors make it a subject of conversation when they meet at the corner grocery or the postoffice and we take it that the owner is not averse to seeing his enterprise chronicled in the local paper. His example is worthy of emulation and publicity given to it is an incentive to his neighbors to go and do likewise. It is a hard matter to draw the line between what should or should not be published, but so long as the public read the contributions they will be sent in.

The country correspondent is a fixture in newspaper life and as a person who is helping to develop his district is worthy of commendation. As he records the visits of the stork, the sad processions to the cemetery or the ceremony at the altar he is making history of events that are always of human interest and the daily movements of his neighbors from place to place are always sure to please those for whose entertainment they are set forth in print.

DROWNING ACCIDENTS

The inevitable Sunday drowning accident occurred yesterday when a father and his child lost their lives owing to the upsetting of a canoe in the Otonabee river. Why is it that so many drownings take place on Sunday? It cannot be altogether owing to the number of crafts on the water for the death list on Sundays exceed those of any legal holiday when every available craft is generally in commission.

It may be that the people who go out boating on Sunday have in some cases a misgiving that it is not just the proper thing to do and go about it in somewhat of a shamefaced manner and seek secluded parts of the water, where they are in a measure free from observation. When an accident happens, they are too far away from other pleasure seekers, to receive any assistance. The same is true of the boy, who, forbidden to bathe, does so in a surreptitious manner and in an out of the way place. When he gets beyond his depth, there is no one near to come to his rescue.

Very few of the small boats on the river are equipped with any life saving apparatus and only a small proportion of those who follow this form of recreation are able to swim. While these conditions exist fatalities on the water will continue, to be of frequent occurrence.

A PART, NOT AN ADJUNCT

Mr. Borden's declaration in his great speech in London, that Canada "does not propose to be merely an adjunct even of the British Empire," voices the spirit of Canadianism of to-day. His accompanying statements that Canada "is resolved to play her full part in maintaining the unity of the Empire, in promoting its influence for the cause of civilization and humanity and for peace among nations," were in harmony with his other declaration and as fully an expression of Canadian opinion. Canada desires to do her share in protecting the interests of the great Imperial institution that is so beneficial to every part of it, is so useful to the world and to which every British subject, in the scattered dominions as well as in the heart of the Empire, are sincerely attached. For many years the Mother Isles has borne the brunt and the expense of maintaining the great navy which gives security to all parts of the King's dominions, but the overseas dominions have begun to assume a part of the responsibility and expense of this service so absolutely necessary for all, and Canada does not want to be behind in doing her part. But this sharing of responsibility in defence brings up the great question of responsibility in government. If the dominions assume part of the expense of keeping up the Imperial navy, and that is what they desire and are desired to do, they must also have some voice in the administration of the navy and, further, in the handling of the questions that may make its employment necessary. As Mr. Borden expressed it: "Any great dominion undertaking to share upon a permanent basis in the sea defence of the Empire must have some voice in the policy which shapes the issues of peace or war."

The British people and British institutions do not take kindly to violent changes. Its form of government has been developed through the centuries by changes brought about by changing conditions and has been evolved without a cataclysm. So the change, the momentous change, to which Mr. Borden refers may not come about with any striking or spectacular accompaniment, and may be evolved from a germ, such as the Imperial conference, quietly and naturally and without any agitation. This would be in keeping with British character and history, and the slow movement would, as in the case of other developments of the British constitution, mean permanency, for the step once taken, and the evolution once begun, it would go on to completion. Just what form the participation of the dominions in the councils of the Empire will take is not yet manifest, but that they will be given some part, and a growing part, at no distant day seems to be clear.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Col. Roosevelt says he does not care a rap where any man is born. That is provided, of course, that he is willing to join the colonel's new party.

That was a long list of teachers who graduated from the Normal schools, but it would seem from the advertisements in the Toronto papers that there is a position for every one of them.

Montreal is getting at the kernel of the street transportation question. The company that proposes to operate a line of motor buses, offers the city $250,000 worth of paid up stock as a starter, and agrees to municipal representation on the board of directors. Fares will be five cents during the day and ten cents after midnight transfers to be issued on all lines.

One of the most noticeable features of the recent election in Saskatchewan is the small majorities that were obtained by the successful candidate in nearly all the constituencies. For a province that has a government so one-sided, the two political parties are more nearly equally divided than in any other part of the Dominion.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to earn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Lower—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, July 13.—An idea that the black rust would have to hurry to catch the spring crop brought lower prices to-day for wheat. Experts in the field declared that unless the plague should develop with extraordinary rapidity the yield would break all records. Closing figures were steady, but ⅛c to ⅜c under last night. Latest trading left corn ⅛c lower to ⅛c up, oats off ⅛c to ⅜c, and provisions at 7½c to 12½c decline.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ⅜-8d to ⅝-8d higher than yesterday on wheat, and 1-2d to 1d higher on corn. Antwerp wheat closed unchanged, Berlin 3-8c higher, and Buda Pest 1-4c lower. The Paris market was closed over the holiday and will not reopen until Wednesday next.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Just what happened between the moment when the big negro brought out the money-belt and the moment when a full understanding of everyday affairs came back to Brockett and Solano, neither of those young men could fully detail. There had been a cyclone, closely followed by an earthquake, after which the roof had fallen in, burying them under the timbers—at least, that was how they figured it all out when they began to sit up and take notice again. They found themselves in a dark, almost pitch-black region of obscurity and silence, with a wooden settee sustaining their weight and a stone floor echoing to the touch of their heels. They found their heads aching fearfully, while sundry bruised spots on their backs, ribs and shins demanded consolation. It was so dark in their new quarters that they could not see themselves or each other, but each of them felt himself strangely soiled and dirty.

"How do you find yourself, Ramon?" queried Brockett, striving to peer across a few inches of midnight gloom at his companion.

"Somewhat battered on the head; somewhat damaged in the ribs and knees; considerably mussed up as to clothing, and, apparently, in jail," returned the Cuban. "Otherwise I think I am all right and perfectly happy. Who pushed the building over on us, anyhow?"

"I haven't the slightest idea," ruefully responded Brockett. "All I can remember is making one grab at that negro, while you tried to seize the belt. Then things seemed to go 'round and 'round, and I began to look through a big telescope at the evening stars. Did things impress you that way?"

"Pretty much so," Ramon answered. "I distinctly remember having one hand on that belt, and the other hand on that large black man's necktie. Then somebody turned off the lights for an instant, turned them on again much brighter than before, and then turned them off for keeps. I wonder where we are?"

"Jail, I believe you hinted. Probably the best place for us—or for me, anyway, after scoring such a failure as this has been. I'm sorry I dragged you into such a piece of foolishness."

"I came along entirely of my own accord," said the Cuban, "and I don't think we have made a failure of the expedition—not yet. We didn't get the belt away from that negro—true enough—but we are a great deal nearer to it than we were an hour before we saw him. There can't be many black men like that one; it's almost a certainty that the Chicago police know him and can locate him, and I think that when they find him he will be quite willing to listen to reason."

"Yes—but how about making the police listen to reason first, in regard to ourselves and our affairs?"

This was a problem which required weighty deliberation, and the unlucky wanderers had just started an animated discussion when there was a clanging of iron and a grating of bolts. Some one turned on an electric light nearby and the boys, blinking in the gleam, saw that they were the occupants of a dingy cell, perhaps eight feet long by five wide, and sumptuously furnished with a long wooden bench and an empty pail. The door was slowly opening, and the aperture framed the bulky figure of a sturdy Irish policeman, who chuckled goodhumoredly as he gazed in upon the captives.

"Rather confused," replied Brockett, instinctively warming to the big Irishman. "Tell us, won't you, how we happen to be here?"

"Have ye no memory at all?" laughed the policeman.

"Almost none, officer. We can remember things going 'round in circles and then someone shooing our senses away from us—nothing after that."

"I can believe ye," returned the officer. "I was just walkin' State street, me and Flynn, me partner—I'm Hogan, an' the well-known, well-respected team is Hogan and Flynn, terrors to all evil-doers. Well, me lad, be that as it may, we were walkin' State street, not too far from Taylor, when we heard sounds indicatin' that Satan had bruk loose in a coon restaurant nearby. We wont over, an' I'm thinkin' we were just in time. Youse two was on the floor, an' half a dozen big niggers was tramplin' the stuffin' outa youse. Five minutes more an' ye'd have both been fine subjects for the coroner."

"Tell me," ventured Solano, "was there one great big fellow, twice the size of an ordinary man, among the crowd?"

"Now ye remind me of it," said the policeman, "there surely was—big Sam Cruitt, the human elephant. Great big nigger, makes his livin' mostly by distributin' ads for fake doctors and thievin' dentists. He was tryin', as near as we could judge, to keep the crowd off from youse two. Anyhow, he wasn't doin' nothin' to harm either wan of youse, an' when we come in he backed out the rear door, nice an' quiet. Bad nigger is Sam, at times, but he didn't seem specially bad on this occasion."

"Just the same," declared Brockett, "the trouble started because he had stolen something of mine—or, rather, had something of mine that another man had stolen. A money belt, containing considerable cash and—well anyhow, containing all my money."

"He showed the belt in this restaurant," put in Solano, "and we, accidentally happening to be there at the time, naturally tried to take it away from him. Then, I suppose, they all jumped on us."

"That they did, an' the only thing I'm surprised at," remarked the officer, "is that they didn't use their razors on ye. Bad lot of coons hang 'round that place, I'm tellin' ye."

"We fully believe it," said Solano with a grimace of pain. "But say officer, how long have we been in here, and how long have we to stay?"

"Ye have been in only a matter of three hours, lads," replied the policeman, "though I suppose it has seemed a week of Sundays. As to how long ye stay—well, ye haven't been booked yet. I'm not a bad judge of people when I see them, an' ye look all right to me. In fact, I haven't a doubt of the truth of your story—ye can explain the details further to me later I'll take ye out of this, take ye up stairs where ye can wash up, an' then we'll have a little talk about ways an' means of recoverin' your property. Come along now—it's glad ye ought to be that youse are both livin'."

Washed and brushed up the boys felt a little more like live human beings. Officer Hogan treated them like younger brothers, assured them that no charge had been entered against them, and that they might consider themselves as simply held for safekeeping. "Better stay right here till evenin'," said the hospitable officer, "an' then we will sally out an' try to get hold of the big nigger. I have a half-idea as to where we can locate him. He's up against the dope—smokes hop regular—an' it won't be hard to find him. Along after supper, lads, we'll go out an' do the best we can."

Neither Brockett nor Solano could find words to fit the case, but the twinkle in the big policeman's eye told that he fully understood their feelings. He shook hands with them reassuringly, brought them a bundle of newspapers to while away the time, and then busied himself with the routine of his report upon the day's events. The boys were buried in the printed columns, when a little packet of paper seemed to waft itself through the window by which they were sitting. The packet fell at Brockett's feet. As he caught it up Solano sprang for the window, peered eagerly out—and saw no one excepting two blue-clad policemen strolling by.

Brockett opened the packet and found several thicknesses of blank paper, bound together to give weight and accuracy to the throwing of the missile. In the center of the package was a slip of cardboard, and written across this in the hieroglyphs Brockett had himself invented, were these letterings:

"BA SH SH FA TC W HR 2BH HR E Pos PO Pos FA FA TC HR E TO A SH E TO BH SH PO Pos WP E TC PO TC E 2BH SH W."

"Keep original appointment. Delay no longer," translated Brockett. "Tonight's fortunes then will decide whether we can keep faith as promised or have to give it all up and admit ourselves utter failures!"

CHAPTER XIX.

The day passed somewhat draggingly, for time flies with leaden pin-feathers when you are in a hurry. Brockett and Solano knew that they had little time left for action, and that if they failed to recover the messages now in possession of the big negro their journey would abruptly end, an utter failure. Most of the afternoon and early evening was spent in discussing the giant black, and the chances of finding the documents still in his possession.

"I only hope," said Brockett, "that he hasn't thrown away the envelopes. He might very likely destroy them to make the chance of identifying the belt so much smaller, and to protect him in the possession of the money."

"I hardly think so," Solano encouraged the worried youngster. "When we get the negro, we'll get belt, papers, money and all. And I think Officer Hogan will come pretty near to rounding him up, if anybody can."

"I wonder if the big fellow remembered us from Detroit?" mused Brockett. "If so, he might also remember the card he passed us, something of its general appearance, and, if he opened the envelopes in the belt, the duplication of the writing might impress him."

"Hardly probable," dissented Solano. "He was simply told, in Detroit, to hand that card to us, and was paid something to do it. He might remember us, all right, but would not be likely to remember anything about the message that he gave us. Quit fretting about the whole business. I firmly believe everything will work out all right, and that the lost envelopes will come back to you before morning. Then we can hurry towards Mexico as fast as you may desire."

It was about nine that night when Officers Hogan and Flynn—the latter as big, as husky and as truly Irish as his partner—summoned the boys for the expedition that should spell absolute failure or a chance to retrieve lost fortunes. Both were in plain clothes, both were heavily armed, and both seemed to regard the evening's program as a rare bit of diversion.

"Don't you worry, me lad," chuckled Hogan, "we'll get your nagur before the stroke of twelve, an' we'll get the goods with him. He's no spendthrift nagur, that felly, an' he'll have pretty near all your money still with him."

"I'd be willing," said Brockett, "to let him keep the money if he'd give me back what else was in the belt."

"Let him kape nothin'," growled Flynn. "Wud ye encourage a chap nagur to unlawful doin's? Ye'd spoil him be lettin' him have money. We'll get him, an' the money too."

Answering a Question.

A scientific lecturer at the conclusion of a lecture of the most abstruse description took a sip of water and said:

"Question time. If any one now has any question of a scientific nature to ask I shall be glad to answer it to the best of my ability."

An old lady in a plaid shawl rose and said:

"Will you please tell me why it is, sir, that wet tea leaves kill roaches?"

The lecturer knew no more than Adam why wet tea leaves killed roaches; but, not to be nonplused, he answered glibly:

"When a roach, madam, sees a wet tea leaf he exclaims, 'Hello—here's a blanket!' and then wraps himself up in it, falls asleep and naturally catches a severe cold, which, developing into pneumonia in a few days, kills the unfortunate insect."—Washington Star.

You Can Thank Advertising

NEXT time you step into the corner store, take a look around. Of all the articles on the shelves, how many were on your shopping list five years ago? Make it ten years, and you will find that most of the things you buy to-day—and could not do without—were not even made then.

¶ You men and women who buy things, let this sink in. You are better men and women because of advertising. You eat more wholesome food. You wear better clothes. Your home is better furnished. You have cleaner and more sanitary houses. You read better books and magazines. You seek more healthful amusements.

¶ Your whole standard of living has been raised—and why? Because the men who make these better things are telling you that you will be more comfortable, happier and healthier if you use these higher grade goods.

¶ It is advertising that makes it possible for you to buy "the best" right at your corner store. It is advertising that encourages the inventor to make new comforts and new utilities and enables you to buy them almost immediately after they are perfected.

¶ J. J. Hill says this "high living" costs more. True for J. J.—but it is worth more. And leaving the cost aside, do you want to go back to buying jam out of a pail, oatmeal out of a barrel, raisins out of sticky boxes, or tea exposed in an open chest?

¶ Isn't a Tungsten worth a thousand candles?

¶ Would you now be enjoying these if enterprising manufacturers had not told you about them in their advertisements?

Isn't life brighter because we have new and higher standards of living?

Let us thank advertising for it.

Advice regarding your advertising problems is available through any good advertising agency or the Secretary of the Canadian Press Association, Room 503, Lumsden Building, Toronto. Enquiry involves no obligation on your part—so write if interested.

DERR, TULLY AND NASHER RELEASED

Three New Men to Join White Caps on the Road

Shortstop Nasher, second baseman Tully and pitcher Derr, drew the blue envelope Saturday night and are no more on the payroll of the Peterboro Baseball Club.

A new pitcher will report to Manager Rowan at St. Thomas to-day, and a shortstop and outfielder are also coming along.

The club is making every effort to strengthen the team, and it is felt that the new material will bring about a desired end.

In the last home series, in particular, Nasher's work at short, was decidedly below the standard he set up during his first appearances with the Petes. Tully had shown signs of improvement, but faded again. Derr's work has been a big disappointment, his inability to win the control of the ball, being responsible

All three boys were gentlemanly players, and Peterboro fans have no kick in that respect.

OBITUARY

Mrs. John Watt

Many citizens will regret to hear of the passing of Mrs. John Watt, at her residence, 263 Rubidge street yesterday morning, at 11.30 o'clock. The late Mrs. Watt had made numerous friends, during her residence of thirty-five years in this city. Her maiden name was Sarah Dudgeon, and she was born in Guelph 58 years ago.

The late Mrs. Watt had been a member of St. Paul's Presbyterian church.

Surviving besides her husband are one daughter, Mrs. A. S. Laing, of Montreal, and two sons, Messrs. R. P. Watt of this city, and J. M. Watt of Midland.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at three o'clock, to the Little Lake cemetery.

The Late M. B. Mowry

Mortimer B. Mowry, well known in the city, expired rather suddenly about nine o'clock Sunday night, after being taken temporarily to the police station in an apparent state of illness.

An inquest was ordered by Coroner Greer this morning at nine o'clock, the verdict being that deceased came to his death from heart failure.

The late Mr. Mowry appeared to be stricken with illness last night in the north-west part of the city, and his actions attracted a large crowd. Dr. Scott was called, and after feeling his pulse and making a brief examination, took him temporarily to the police station in his auto to be cared for.

P.C. Brown was in charge of the station when the sufferer was brought in, accompanied by P.C. Reid. He had only been in the station a few minutes when the officers were alarmed, hearing him give vent to peculiar guttural sounds as if chocking. P.C. Brown made an examination and discovered the man's pulse to have stopped and his extremities almost cold. The constable immediately applied artificial respiration with the assistance of the other officer, but without success. Dr. McPherson was hurriedly summoned, but death had set in ere his arrival.

At the inquest Dr. McPherson said he was of the opinion that death was due to some affection of the heart.

The evidence was very extended.

The jurors sworn were: P. Drummond (foreman); J. White, J. W. Elliott, W. Shea, N. C. Cameron, J. P. Bryson, James Metheral, Frank Detcher, Wm. Gray, L. J. Picard, J. J. McDonald, and Archie Breault.

Surviving the deceased is a family of seven sons and two daughters, viz., Milne of Enfield, Ont.; Minnie, of Rosevear, Man.; William A., Reuben, R. B. Mowry, C. C. Mowry, F. H. Mowry, M. F. Mowry and Margaret Ann, of Peterborough.

Three brothers and one sister also survive, Mereele, of the city; Martin and Richard, of Toronto, and Ippy, of the city.

The funeral will be at three o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, from 310 Margaret Avenue, to Little Lake cemetery. Service at the house at 2.30 o'clock.

Rev. W. C. Riddiford will officiate.

Belleghem's ambulance took Reid to his boarding house on Concession street south, while Comstock's ambulance conveyed Miss Johnston to her place of employment.

AN APPRECIATION OF THE LADIES

Nassau Orangemen Had a Good Dinner at George St.

To the Editor of the Review,

Dear Sir, — Will you kindly permit us, through you valuable paper, to pay compliment to the ladies of George Street Methodist Church, for the good dinner and the neat and pleasant manner in which it was served there, on July 12th, to a great number of people; and the kind and happy way in which we were waited on. Also friends from Port Hope, Garden Hill and other places, spoke in highest terms of the treatment they received from the ladies of George street Church, and the neat and tastefully arranged tables and the well served and plentifull dinner.

Yours truly,
NASSAU ORANGEMAN.

ORANGEMEN AT TORONTO

Mr. Burnham, M.P., was invited by the Orange Association of Toronto, to be one of the speakers at the recent celebration there.

"It was a tremendous gathering of the masses of the people," said Mr. Burnham to the Review reporter, "and a more sober, respectable lot of people could not be found anywhere or wished for. It was a sure and certain vindication of the Democracy, which the present Pope is so fiercely attacking. There was no illtemper or abuse in any of the speeches, but there was a spirit of fierce determination to resist the attempts of any church or churches to take away the right and privilege of the people to govern themselves. I noticed that some people in the vast audience were surprised to learn that in 1836, the parliament of England had to pass an act to allow Catholics and Dissenters the right to perform the ceremony of marriage. The Anglican church at that time, claimed the sole right. To-day the Catholic church is doing the same thing, and the present marriage law agitation is another effort to free the people from the dictation of the monopolists. The crux of the whole agitation is, of course, the determination of the Pope to override and overrule the State, which the Church maintains is not separate from the Church, and cannot be, but is subordinate to it. The papal decree just issued "to restore all things in Christ," means what it says, viz: that we are to be put back where we were. The direction of mankind was given to the Pope, it is claimed. Try to put this claim in force, as this Pope is doing, and you have the present world wide riot. Which will win? That is the question.

I had a delightful time in Toronto and was, of course, most hospitably treated by the Orangemen. You had a great day here."

The Father of Terror.

"The father of terror" is the name the Arabs have given to the sphinx. It stands to-day even as it has done for thousands of years, though the exact date or century of its construction none can say. It is not only the oldest monument in the world, but the largest as well. It is carved wholly from a mass of solid natural rock, with the exception of the forepaws, which are built up with blocks of stone. It measures more than a hundred feet in length and is impressive and awe-inspiring because of its stupendous size.

Not an Absolute Embargo.

The expert burglar, disdaining the use of explosives, had attacked the lock itself.

"This may be a combination somewhat in restraint of my trade," he muttered, turning the knob slowly to the right again and listening intently, "but you couldn't call it a case of unreasonable restraint."

Apparently his view was correct, for presently he was engaged in the unrestricted pursuit of his trade and reaping large profits.

Very Serious.

"I would like to marry your daughter, sir. I realize that this is a serious matter"—

"You bet it is, my son—very serious! You may have her, and the Lord be with you."

People who live in clean houses shouldn't throw mud.

PUPILS IN THE COUNTY SCHOOLS WHO PASSED THEIR ENTRANCE EXAMINATIONS

Miss Galvin of Lakefield Won Prize for Highest Number of Marks—Miss Sanderson Also of Lakefield Wins Second Prize—Miss Dobbin, North Monaghan Wins Highest Place for West Peterboro Pupils.

The results of the Junior High School Entrance Examination for the various centres in the County of Peterborough appear below. In connection therewith a few general remarks may be in place. It will be observed that the proportion of successful candidates is much smaller than usual, there being 87 from a total of 210 while last year there were 126 from a total of 199. The most of the failures this year were owing to inability to make the total mark of 390 required to pass. Of those who were successful in making this total, only 8 failed in individual subjects. Of these 5 failed in Geography, 2 in Arithmetic and 1 in both Geography and Arithmetic. Of candidates trained at the village schools, 11 out of 15 passed at Havelock, 13 out of 14 at Lakefield, and 13 out of 19 at Norwood. One thing very clearly indicated by the results is the general superiority of the work in schools that have been in charge of trained and experienced teachers.

Successful candidates from the village schools will receive their certificates from the principals at the opening of school in September. Other certificates will be mailed. Unsuccessful candidates will receive their marks by mail in the course of a few days.

The County Prize for the highest mark goes to Miss Mary E. Galvin of Lakefield. The second highest mark was made by Miss Ena J. Sanderson, of Lakefield, who will receive Mr. Thompson's prize of a gold watch. Mr. Burnham's prize goes to Miss Clara B. Dobbin, of S. S. No. 1, North Monaghan, who is at the head of the list of those writing from West Peterborough.

The list of successful candidates with the names of the school where trained and the total marks obtained by them, is as follows:—

TWO DROWNED IN OTONABEE; BOTH BODIES RECOVERED

Henry Hayward and Five Year Old Daughter the Victims Near Crawford's Grove

A bricklayer named Harry Hayward, of Gordon avenue, and his five-year-old daughter, Mildred, were drowned about five o'clock Sunday afternoon, just above Crawford's Grove, on the Otonabee river, while fishing from a punt. There are conflicting stories of the exact circumstances which culminated in the shocking calamity. The most reliable report says that Hayward and his daughter were fishing, and the child was holding the trawling line. She was pulled into the water by the line catching in some obstruction in the river. Seeing her plight, her father, although unable to swim, is reported as having jumped in, and endeavored to rescue her, with the result that both sank. No boats were close enough to render assistance and the swiftly flowing current carried the bodies away.

As rapidly as possible the search for the bodies was instituted, with the result that the girl's body was found last evening. The father's body was not discovered until six o'clock this morning, being found by his brother and a Mr. Moule.

Haywards was well known in the city. His home was in the Old Country, he having been only in this country a short time.

The New York police force is to be insured in bulk. The men will pay the premiums.

ST. LUKE'S FREE OF DEBT

At St. Luke's church yesterday, the announcement was made by the rector that the church was now entirely free from debt. A note of long standing against the church was paid off last week on the thirty-sixth anniversary of the opening of the church.

The rector, Rev. F. J. Sawers, and the church officials are to be congratulated on their success. Such a position is an enviable one. Rapid progress has been made since Rev. Mr. Sawers was appointed to St. Luke's and there is every indication that that property will increase as the parish work continues.

Even a small man may have a large opinion of himself.

CHAMPIONS MADE IT TWO OUT OF THREE ON THE PETES

Poor Work at Short and Second Put Osborne All to the Bad--Score Was 10-0

Three out of four was the verdict given against the Petes by the Busy Bees on Saturday, the third slap being well and truly applied.

The figures were 10—0 with goose-eggs on the menu for the Rustlers. Lefty Osborne pitched a nice game. He really twirled winning ball, but the odds were too many for him. Nasher and Tully had a very bad day, the performance of the former being very poor indeed. A good clean three-bagger by himself couldn't have astonished Connor more than did the attempted theft of Nasher in the eighth, when he ran out to the territory of the Petes' middle fielder and dropped a fly. There were two particularly clever plays. In the fourth Nasher threw high to Rowan on an easy chance, Bullock making the bag. Deneau hit to Byrnes, who, while stopping the ball overbalanced himself and the bases held two with none out. Rowan, suspecting a short bunt by Hesberger, yielded the ball about eight feet from the plate, and throwing to Byrnes got the runner to third.

Several fans have a good one on Nasher. While walking from the park one of the young rooters found his way to Nasher's side, and looking up into the shortstop's face, said: "How many errors did you have, Nasher?"

There Were Others.

In the old Fourth ward of New York, where there was a big Irish population, there used to be a character who lived off wakes. He watched the papers for death notices, and when a death occurred in his neighborhood he would put on his shabby best, drop round to the house of mourning, weep over the bier, even though the deceased had been a total stranger to him; extol the virtues of the departed—and then eat and drink until he could hold no more.

One night, according to Dick Malloy, the Tammany politician, the old chap reached a wake. He walked in with leaky eyes, to be met by the two stalwart sons of the dead man.

"You didn't know our father, and he didn't know you," they told him. "You only came here to get some free drinks. Now, you get out or we'll throw you out!"

The old man got out, but at the door he paused for a parting shot.

"I'd have you know," he said, addressing the coffined form, "that you're not the only corpse in New York tonight. There are others and a blamed sight better lookin' wans too!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Standing on His Rights.

During the last city election in New York a bunch of trained repeaters marched into an east side polling place.

"What name?" inquired the election clerk of the leader, who was red haired and freckled and had a black eye. The voter glanced down at a slip of paper in his hand.

"Isidore Mendelheim," he said.

"That's not your real name, and you know it," said a suspicious challenger for the reform ticket.

"It is me name," said the repeater, "and I'm goin' to vote under it. See!"

From down the line came a voice:

"Don't you let that guy bluff you, Casey. Soitinly your name is Mendelheim!"—Saturday Evening Post.

THE ROAD.

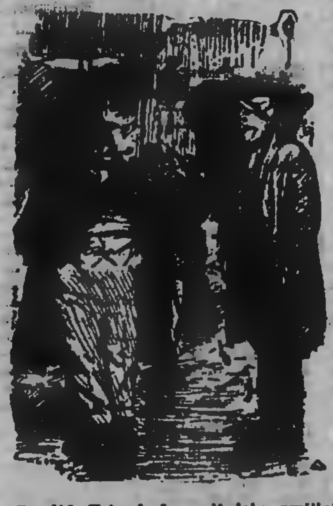
"Now, where are ye goin'," says I, "wid the shawl
An' cotton umbrella an' basket an' all?
Would ye not wait for McMullen's machine
Wid that fragrant instep befittin' a queen?
Oh, you wid the wind soft gray eye wid a wile in it,
You wid the lip wid the troublesome smile in it,
Sure, the road's wet, every rain muddied mile in it"—
"Ah, the saints 'll be kapin' me petticoats clean!"

"But," sez I, "would ye like it to meet Clancy's bull
Or the tinks poachin' rabbits above Slievena-coul?
An' the ford at Kilmaddy is big wid the snows,
An' the whisht little people that wear the green close
They'd run from the bog to be makin' a catch o' ye,
The king o' them's wishful o' weddin' the match o' ye.
'Twould be long, if they did, ere ye lifted the latch o' ye"—
"What fairy's to touch her that sings as she goes?"

"Ah, where are ye goin'," sez I, "wid the shawl
An' the gray eyes a-dreamin' beneath it an' all?
The road by the mountain's a long one. Depend
Ye'll be done for, alannah, ere reachin' the end;
Ye'll be bate wid the wind on each back breakin' bit on it,
Wet wid the puddles an' lamed wid the grit on it—
Since lonesome ye're layin' yer delicut fit on it"—
"Sure, whin's a road lonesome that's stepped wid a friend?"
That's stepped wid a friend?
Who did Bridgy intend?
Still 'twas me that went wid her right on to the end!

—Punch.

Helping His Looks.



Candid Friend—I can't 'elp smilin' when I looks at you, Sam. You're such a ugly blighter. 'Aven't your kids never told yer of it?—Punch.

Not a Bit Offended.

"Football guide, sir?" said the street vender to the burly man who was hurrying to the match.

"No," replied the latter.

"All the news, photos of players, and"—

"No, I tell yer."

"Past records, fixtures, and"—

"Get out!"

"Information worth a quid"—

Out shot the burly one's foot, and the next moment the youth was sitting in the gutter. Slowly he rose, smiled sadly, held up a football guide and continued, "No; but, puttin' all jokin' on one side, mister, d'yer want a football guide?"—Tit-Bits.

Afraid of the Fairies.

Because he was "afraid of the fairies" a laborer named Kilduff threw up an acre of land which he had secured under the laborers' act and upon which the Athlone district council proposed to build a cottage for him. The man's objection to the plot was that there was a fort on it, which would have to be removed for his cottage, and "on no account would he interfere with the fairies' home, which they knew one never had any luck after."—London Standard.

THE MAIL CARRIER HURRIED.

He Took No Chances When the President Came to Town.

It was on an occasion when a president of the United States was making a swing around the country. A man who was carrying mail on a weekly route between a Missouri county seat town and little postoffice out at a country store came dashing madly down the road in the direction of the town. A farmer who saw him coming and wondered at his great haste hailed him and said:

"What's the matter, Jimson? What's your great hurry this morning?"

"Hurry?" Jimson repeated. "Why, don't you know the president is to be in town today?"

"Oh, I see," the farmer replied. "You want to get there in time to see him."

"It's not that that makes me hurry."

"It ain't?"

"No sir! You may not know it, but this working for the government is mighty ticklish business, and a man has got to be awful careful or he'll lose his job. Now, suppose the president gets off the train down there and asks about me, and I ain't there, and he finds out I'm late. Don't you see there'd be trouble right off, and I might be asked to resign?"

"I see."

"Yes, sir. So I ain't taking no chances. When the president steps off the train and asks the crowd, 'Where is Jimson?' I'm going to be there so I can step right out and say, 'Here I am, sir.'"—Kansas City Star.

Always Jones.

J. Ogden Armour, apropos of leap year, said at a luncheon at the Auditorium in Chicago:

"A girl can take advantage of leap year without being at all unmaidenly. There are subtle and delicate ways of doing things, and such ways are just as efficacious as brutal, knock-me-down ones.

"There's a girl named Jones, who, having been engaged altogether too long, took advantage of leap year to hurry on her wedding. But she accomplished this delicately. She just signed a letter to her fiance, 'As always, Edith Jones,' and she underscored 'always' and 'Jones' very heavily.

"The marriage in consequence was celebrated the next month."—Washington Star.

Careful.

A young Clevelander who is always generous with his touring car tells us that he offered to take the old colored janitor of the apartment in which he resides downtown the other day.

"No, suh, boss—no, suh, thank you, suh," grinned the ancient functionary. "I reckon I'll wait and go on de street cyah."

"What's the matter, uncle? Are you afraid?"

"No, suh—me afraid? No, suh, I got to wait."

"Uncle, have you ever been in an automobile?"

"Nevah but oncet, an' den I didn't let all ma weight down!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

YOU CAN BE ABSOLUTELY SURE OF VALUES

If you carefully read the store advertisements and follow them in your buying.

Merchants advertise certain lines because they know these lines will advertise their stores. Because there is something about certain goods, they are put in conspicuous places and the people are told about them. It may be the exclusiveness or newness of design, it may be an unusual quality, it may be an attractive price.

But there is at least one definite, sure reason why a merchant advertises an article and is willing to stake the reputation of his store upon it.

Therefore, when you see an article advertised in THE REVIEW, depend upon it, that article is good value, as good value as can be obtained in that particular store.

FOR OUR BOY AND GIRL READERS

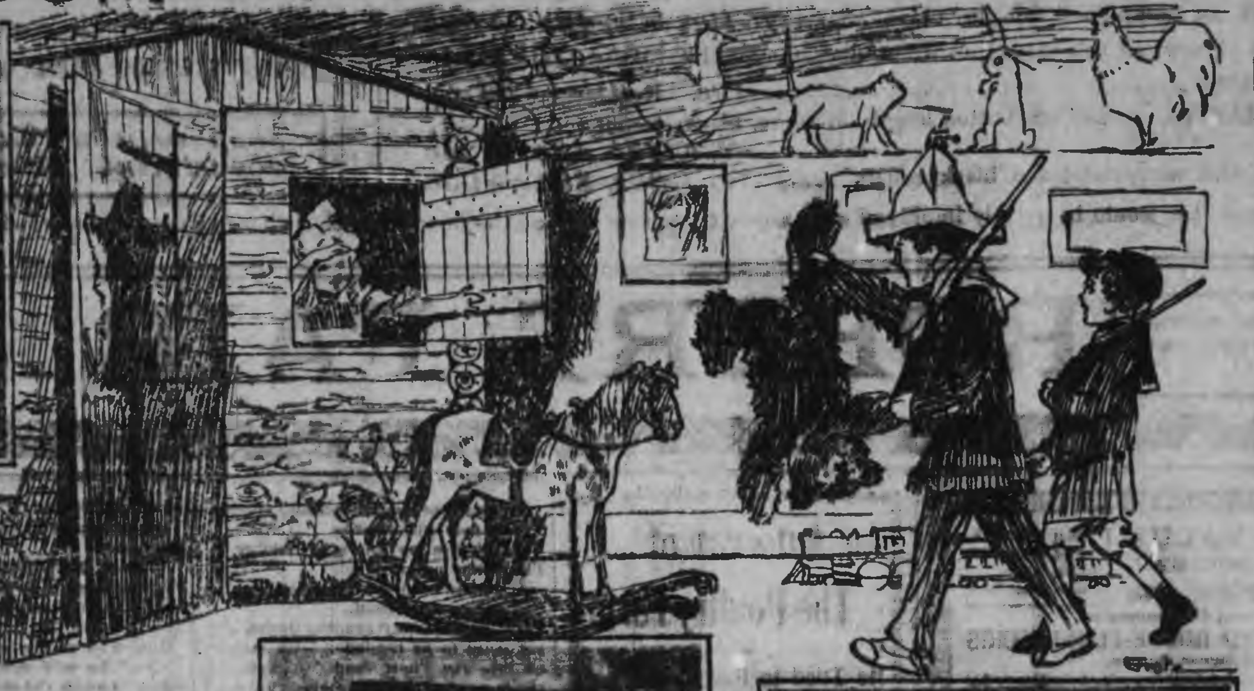
LITTLE SCREEN HOUSES FOR THE PLAY ROOM

DID you ever see a screen play house which could be folded up and set away in the corner when you didn't want it and set up again in perfect order in less than a minute after you had decided that it would [illegible] for a while? The screen play house is the very nicest kind of a playhouse for indoors, especially when you live in a large city where play place indoors is limited so that you cannot have a large permanent play house built in the corner of your nursery or playroom.

These screen playhouses are built exactly like the ordinary three leaf screen except that the middle section is much wider than the middle section of the ordinary screen. The framework of the screen is just like that of the usual screen, and the leaves are hinged together in the same way. The two end leaves of the screen are the sides of the house, and the middle section, which is quite wide, is the front of the house. There is no back or roof. The walls of the room in which the playhouse is set up supplies the fourth wall of the house.

The screens are covered with heavy burlap or canvas, which varies in color according to whether you want your playhouse to be a real house or a grocery store, a log cabin or a school. All of these buildings are included among the screen structures.

The Little Brick School House

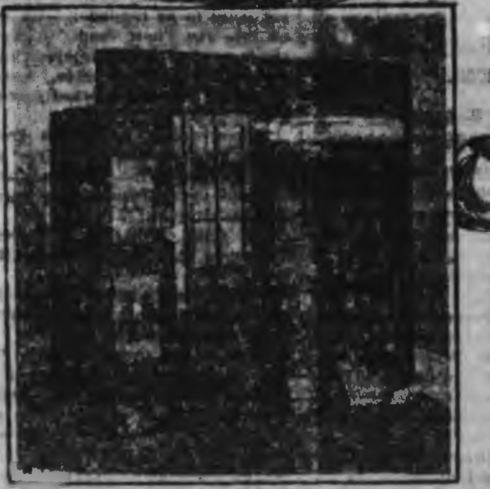


The summer cottage screen house is made of dark green canvas. Stripes of dark paint are used along the walls of the house to represent the walls. Then on the front wall, which is the middle section of the screen, climbing roses and other vines are painted to look as they would if clambering over the walls of a country cottage. There is a square window large enough to look out from at the passers by. This window, which is cut in the upper corner of the front section of the screen, has no glass in it, but there are two cross sections of wood to make it look more like a window. There is also a front door, small, but large enough to go in and out, especially for a small person. The door is not of wood, but of wire screen, so that the inhabitants of the cottage can get plenty of air and yet keep out the mosquitoes. The front section of the cottage instead of being perfectly square, like the other sides, goes up into a point. This effect is produced by an additional strip of wood cut out in peaks along the upper side.

The school house is made of the same sort of a three sided screen, covered with red burlap. To make the structure look like bricks white paint or crayon is used to make the lines of mortar on the red burlap, so that it looks as if made entirely of the red bricks. The middle section of this screen has a wooden strip put across the front, and on this are erected two strips of wood, so that with the base they form a triangle. From the peak of this triangle is suspended the school house bell. This little red brick school house is just as patriotic as the largest and handsomest school house in the world. It has a little flagstaff fastened above the door, from which floats the American flag. The school house has a blackboard inside on one of the side walls. This screen house can be fitted up with a little desk or teacher's table and a bench for the pupils.

The log cabin screen is of gray canvas, with a streak of dull purple and dark brown paint to represent the varying colors of wood on an old log cabin. The door is also of the canvas.

The grocery store is the most elaborately furnished of all the screen houses. The front of the store is cut away and a wooden counter, which can be put directly under the opening, is a part of the outfit of the store. The counter has a weighing scales and scoops for sugar, &c. Inside the house on one of the walls a set of shelves is hung up on which are kept many package groceries. It is great fun to keep the store and make up packages. Every one can get from the kitchen any number of packages, boxes of all shapes and sizes, &c., in which various spices, teas, condiments and other groceries have been delivered. The grocery screen is of brown canvas, and on the front wall are painted all sorts of advertisements of groceries. These are exact reproductions of well known advertisements.



A Complete Grocery Store

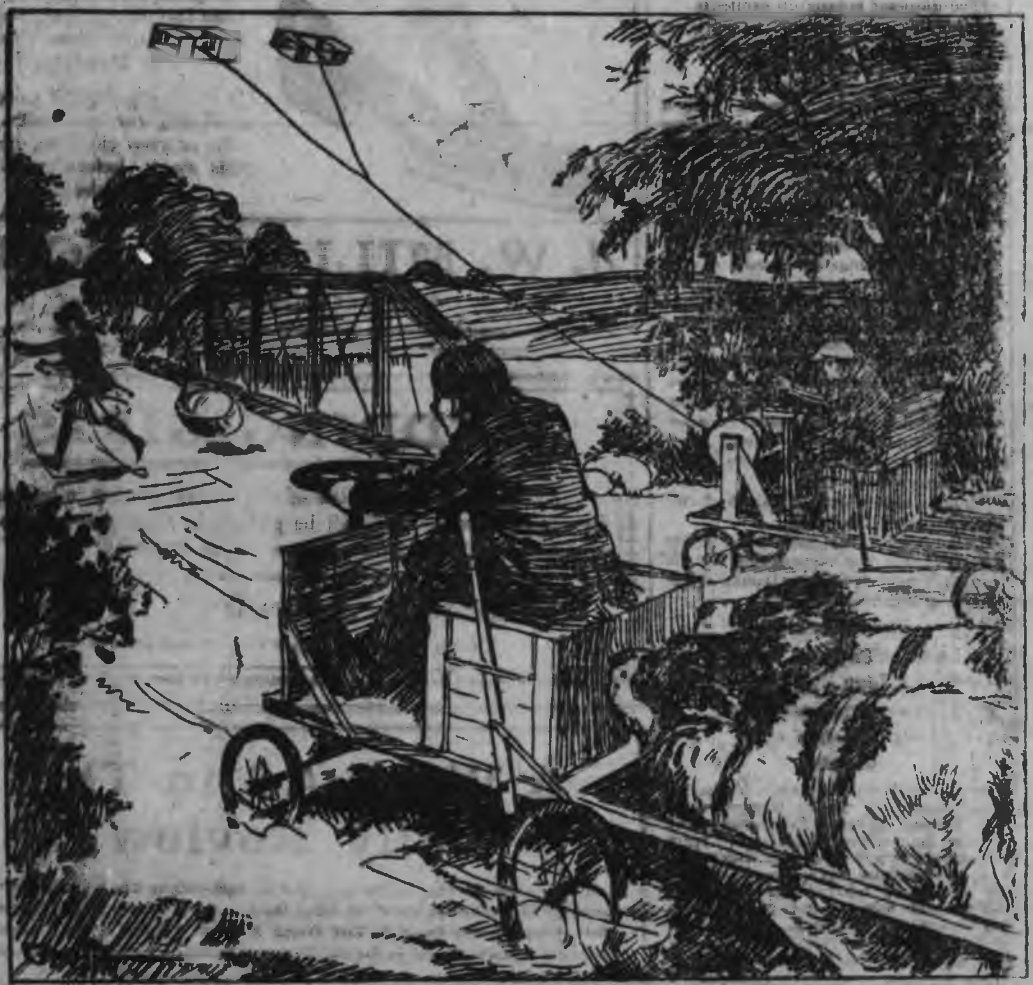
A Country Cottage

The screens that have been described are very carefully made and are one of the most attractive features of a large toy shop, but ingenious boys and girls who wish to make something very attractive for a Christmas gift for their younger brothers and sisters will find it very interesting indeed to try their skill at making the screen houses. Although canvas and burlap are used for those described it would be possible to make the frames for the screens of strips of wood and cover them with heavy paper, some of which comes already marked in brick patterns, lattice patterns, &c. Those who wish to make the cover for the screen of plain material and cannot paint or draw sufficiently well to decorate the walls can produce very good results by using vines and flowers cut from wall paper.

PLINY QUICK'S DOG-POWER AUTO

WHAT Happened When His 1912 Model Carlo-Rover Raced Walter Armstrong's Sky-Power Machine

BY ARTHUR MORGAN LANGWORTHY



The Little Girl in Front of Them Gave a Frightened Bound Sideways

PLINY QUICK created a sensation when he arrived at school in his 1912 model "Carlo-Rover," as he proudly called his new dog power auto.

Most boys are familiar with some form of dog driven vehicle, but Pliny's "advance model" was quite different from the usual type, as the drawing shows. For the two-dog power canine engine from which it derived its fashionable double name was placed in the rear instead of the front, as the young auto constructor figured that the two fine Newfoundlands could exert more "pull" with the specially constructed strap harness.

But Pliny's Carlo-Rover triumph didn't last long.

The next morning he had to more than divide honors with a new entry in the field of freak auto construction. Pliny had scarcely arrived when a shout went up. All those gathered around the Carlo-Rover deserted it to welcome the grand entrance of Walter Armstrong's spectacular 1912 two sky power "Terra-Aero," as its creator proudly named it. Walter explained it in this way:—

"It's a 1913 model because it's over a year ahead of anything 'round Oakdale!" and he looked rather scornfully at Pliny and his eclipsed Carlo-Rover. "It's two-sky power because of the two box kites which furnish all the wind. And it's called the 'Terra-Aero' because it's a combination land and sky auto—'terra' meaning the earth or land and 'aero' meaning the sky," he concluded, very proudly airing his Latin.

And it did look as if Walter's auto was "sweller" than Pliny's, particularly after this Latin explanation. Poor Pliny felt very mad and humiliated after Walter had then gone the length of making all sorts of fun of Pliny's "mutt auto" and suggested he might get more power if he "tied a couple of tin cans to the canine motor!" This was not nice at all, and it riled Pliny, who, however, managed to keep his temper and carefully examine the rival machine.

It was truly a "land and sky" chariot. The land part consisted of a four wheeled buckboard, with a raised seat for the driver and a round steering wheel, and at the front was built the connecting mechanism with the aerial motors. This was a large reel or spool set in a couple of upright supports and turned by a crank attached to its axle. On this reel was wound the heavy clothesline to which the two giant box kites were attached. These kites were enormous in size, so large they had a pulling power equal to a pony, and in a fresh wind would pull the chariot along at a great clip. And it was a fine spectacle to watch them whizz their driver down the road nearly as fast as a horse could run.

It was an ideal day for the Terra-Aero's trial trip. The strong wind held good all through the morning and at recess Walter grandly embarked for home behind his aerial steeds, the wind having kindly shifted about so he could turn back home. That was the Terra-Aero's one drawback. She had to go in the direction of the wind if she wanted to get anywhere.

Pliny watched Walter launch his kites into the air, assisted by admiring schoolmates. Then Walter climbed into his chariot and took off the brakes. The aerial motor quickly set the wheels in motion, and Walter sailed for home, followed by the whole school. He soon distanced his racing schoolmates, including Pliny, who had not used his Carlo-Rover to drive home with to-day. Pliny had a good reason for this; he knew that it was Walter's idea to challenge him for a race. He was not afraid to race Walter, but first wished "to get a line" on Walter's new auto. If the odds were not too great Pliny meant to challenge him that afternoon.

The whole school looked on while the two wrangled over the conditions. Finally this agreement was reduced to writing. It recited the usual challenge, &c., and then called for the following conditions:—

"1.—The race is to start from the point known as Five Forks.

"2.—The challenged party (Walter Armstrong) shall have the choice of route. He is allowed to choose any one of the five roads meeting at Five Forks.

"3.—The race shall be straightaway for five miles, the distance to be measured by officially tested speedometers on each machine.

"4.—The competitor who completes the five miles in the least time wins the race."

Then followed the names of the race officials and signatures of the principals. Walter was given the choice of routes because he had to depend on the wind. Thus he could take any one of four directions at Five Forks, as the roads left the turnpike in all directions at this point. The next Saturday afternoon was fixed for the race, and the two competitors spent the rest of the week grooming their strange chariots for the great test of dog power versus sky power.

The start was most imposing. A sparkling day of crisp sunshine and a strong, steady wind of high velocity made the conditions of travel ideal, especially for Walter. A starting circle instead of line was drawn in the exact spot where the five roads intersected one another. Walter, whose kites were now in the air, solemnly inspected them, tested all his mechanism and then gave out the route, which the crowd anxiously waited to hear.

"The River road!"

The two racers were faced about in the circle and pointed down the River road, with the two official timers alongside each, ready to mount their bicycles. The official starter raised his pistol. Bang! Pliny threw off his brakes and chirruped to his eagerly prancing canine motor. Walter threw off his brakes and looked up at his aerial motor; the two timers mounted their "bikes;" the whole group began to move—the race was on.

The two racers gradually increased their speed. The dogs tugged and bounded along in their strap harness and the going was very easy, as the road was slightly down grade to the river, which it crossed at this point. First Walter and then Pliny led, and in the excitement of the race at last threw off all brakes. The two rival "speed merchants" reached the bottom of the hill going their fastest, scarcely able to keep their chariots from capsizing. A slight curve approached the bridge itself. It was fringed by a group of willows as was most of the road they travelled, and any one on the bridge would not see them coming until they almost reached it.

"Look out!" suddenly yelled Pliny. The little girl in front of them gave a frightened bound sideways, and just managed to get out of the way, but she dropped the large wicker basket she carried. It struck the low bridge parapet and fell into the river. There were a series of frenzied squawks as the covered basket floated away. The girl, Edna Farbush, began to cry, but by this time the two racers were nearly across the bridge, they were going so fast.

"Say. We made Edna lose her chickens!" exclaimed Pliny to Walter. Pliny was a great admirer of pretty Edna Farbush, and besides that, he knew she couldn't afford to lose those chickens. Edna and her mother were very nice people. They were very poor and those chickens meant a week's living to them, for Edna raised and sold them to help her mother.

"Say, Walter, let's call off this race for ten minutes! We're both even up now—and we can get a boat and save em for her—it's our fault!"

"What did she get in the way for? Nothing doing!" snapped Walter, hanging on for dear life as the terra-aero jolted over the rough bridge roadway. It cost Pliny an effort to do it, but he put on the brakes. Walter shot ahead, laughing derisively at him. There was no boat in sight on either shore, but Pliny had a better plan. He quickly unharnessed Carlo and Rover, led them down the bank and pointed to the floating basket. The two Newfoundlands, who were fine retrievers, soon towed the basket ashore, where Pliny restored it to the grateful Edna.

It seemed hopeless to try to overtake Walter, but Pliny refused to give up, although his timer advised him to. The dogs were reharnessed. The stern chase continued over two miles by readings from the cyclometer attachment. The timer still urged retirement, but Pliny only chuckled now. Something had happened.

Shortly after the fourth mile the timer gave a shout. A turn in the road disclosed Walter just ahead barely moving.

"Something's gone wrong!" cried the timer.

"Yes, you chump! Haven't you caught on yet?" laughed Pliny.

It was the breeze. The wind had died out completely. Pliny couldn't help snickering as his 1912 model Carlo-Rover dashed by becalmed but anything but calm Walter.

"You'd better change your engine!" he grinned. "There's nothing like a good reliable dog power motor to save chickens and win races!"

A SLEEPING DOG.

BY ROBERT GILBERT WELSH

MY pet dog Spot
The whole day through
Will jump and trot
And gallop, too.

When night gets here
And all is snug
He settles near Me on the rug.

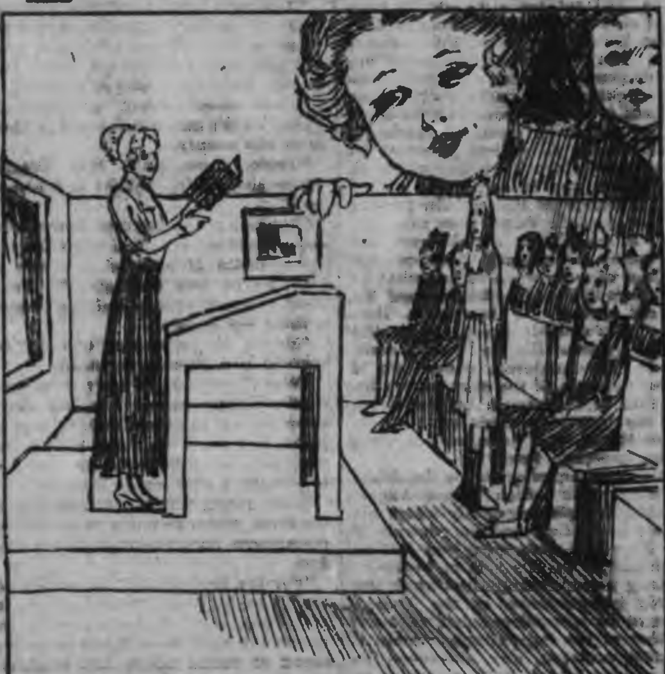
I know he sleeps,
And yet it seems
His good time keeps
Right on in dreams.

I hear his tail
Thump in the dark;
I hear a frail
And sleepy bark.

Upon my word
He's dreaming that
He caught a bird
—Or chased a cat!

A CARDBOARD SCHOOL FOR THE FASHIONABLE PAPER DOLL

BY MILDRED PURDY



ONE rainy afternoon I was pining for something to do. I had four houses for my paper dolls, two of which were apartments made from egg boxes, barns made of shoe boxes, two shops out of writing paper boxes and a theatre out of a hat box.

What more could these fashionable paper dolls have? They didn't have a school; how could they educate their children with this missing? After conversing with the president of the town I decided it should be a select boarding school.

I went up into the attic and looked around. In one corner there wasn't anything but trunks, in another there were three ordinary sewn hat boxes. "Just the thing we want," I said.

I took them down into the playroom and dusted them off. I then put two of them side by side and cut a door between them which was five inches high and three inches wide. I then put the remaining box on top of these so as to make a second story. Next I cut squares out of the sides of the boxes to make windows.

My school finished, I wondered where I was going to get furniture for it. It was raining too hard to buy any, and even if it hadn't been, the people of Paperville didn't like the kind of paper and cardboard furniture the store had, and wooden furniture would have looked funny in a town like Paperville.

I had noticed some long strips of cardboard in the waste paper basket so I ran and got them.

I wanted to get the dormitory finished first, so I started by making the beds. I took a piece of cardboard eight inches long and three inches wide. I folded this over one-fourth of an inch on one end and one-half of an inch on the other. In this way I made twenty beds, which I put in two long rows along the wall.

My paper dolls were so afraid that they would muss their clothes if they took them off that they told the artist when he drew them to stick their dresses on so tight that they wouldn't come off. This was convenient for me, as I didn't have to make any bureaus for their clothes.

I then made the benches for the schoolroom by measuring fifteen three inch by four inch pieces of cardboard. These I folded in the middle and placed in rows in the schoolroom, with a teacher's chair made in the same way as the benches, and a desk was made by folding a six by two inch strip exactly in thirds.

Next I made the head teacher's or principal's room. Four chairs were made in the same way as the schoolroom benches, a table the same as the teacher's and a bed like those in the dormitory.

I got some pink tissue paper from a hat box and hung it up to the windows for window curtains. I took some of this same paper and folded it to fit the beds for pillows and counterpanes. On the floor I placed some brown essay paper which I found in the house.

The school being finished, it did not take me long to erect it on the corner of Paper street and Doll avenue.

BURNS' "WHISTLE OF WORTH."

EVERY boy who has visited the Glasgow exhibition, where many of the most interesting historical relics of Scotland are shown, has wanted to see the "Whistle of Worth," about which Robert Burns wrote a poem. This whistle is ordinarily kept at Craigdarroch, the residence of the Misses Ferguson, whose ancestor married Annie Laurie. It was one of the Fergusons who won the whistle from the boasting Continental soldier, who had never found any one who could drink as much as he could. He had never tried it before with a Scotchman, however. A contest took place at Friars' Carse, and Ferguson outdrank the soldier, who owned the whistle. Afterward the son of the first Ferguson won the whistle at a similar bout and it has since remained in the family.

A RIDDLE

What is it that has several sides
But neither front
nor back,
That's often clothed
yet never hangs
Its garments on a rack,

That almost always has a pass
Yet never cares to go
Upon a railway journey or
To opera or to show

That has a top
which will not spin,
And peaks but cannot see—
That often turns entirely green
But not with jealousy.

CARPENTERS ALL HIKED TO REGINA

Writing from Caron, Sask., Mr. Rees Dobbin, who is on the engineering staff, engaged in the construction of a waterwork's system for Moosejaw, says in part—

"I worked all day at carpentry, setting up forms and other work. All our carpenters went out on strike for more pay and to keep the mixer running we all had to turn in and build forms. We did it all right, but will be in a hole soon if some more carpenters don't turn up soon. On account of the Regina devastation all the carpenters in the West are rushing in that direction and I guess ours got the fever."

"Things around here are getting in pretty good shape now. The reservoir is finished and the pipe line leading from the well to it is nearly done The main pipe line will be late. It is only about two-thirds done and some of the hardest of the work to do yet. I guess it will be well on to the last of September, before the water gets to Moose Jaw.

"We have a new pet, a baby hawk. As yet it isn't much more than a ball of fluff, but it is coming along and will soon have to have its wings clipped. I had a great time getting it. The parents were hanging around the nest, and when I reached for the young one, they flew quite fiercely at me. I had a good club and so scared them off. They were very big, much larger than the hawks we have at home. I still have my small rifle and Mr. Roseboro and I go out shooting whenever we have a minute to spare. Gophers are the regular target. They are such a pest that the farmers are always glad to see them killed. They say that an abundance of gophers means a bumper crop. If this be true, then the crop this year will be enormous.

"The weather so far, has been especially suited to wheat growing. The early spring rains directly followed by the very hot weather has brought the grain on very fast, and there is every prospect of a heavy harvest and also an early one.

The water is being brought to Moosejaw, a distance of thirty miles.

THE POPE'S BROTHER

He Is a Plain Unassuming Postman and Swears by the Pontiff.

The pope's recent attack of illness and the comparative frequency with which such attacks occur have somewhat alarmed his family, although he has done his best to allay all anxiety. His brother, Angelo Sarto, being of the class who do not believe anything they hear, and only half of what they see, determined to come to Rome to judge for himself. He was accommodated by his sisters, who live a stone's throw from the Vatican, so they may spend the few leisure moments of the Pontiff with him.

These two venerable men, both handsome and with thick white hair, alike, and yet not alike, might have been seen walking the Vatican gardens when the air was warm and summerlike. The Pope sometimes leaned upon his sturdy brother's arm, gesticulating slightly as he talked, with those earnest eyes of his turned on the dome of the church he loves, or wandering over the city at his feet, of which he is so wonderful a part, but which he never sees any nearer.

It is whispered that certain persons at the Apostolic Palace were not overglad to see Signor Angelo back, for although, on ordinary occasions, the mildest of men, when he see what he considers little omissions toward his adored brother, he becomes a lion. Pius X. is amiable almost to frugality in his personal life, and would never think of complaining, indeed, would never notice it, if the soup were a little thin or the wine a little watered, but the lynx eyes of his brother note these things, and he speaks of them in no uncertain tones.

It is very amusing to see the determination with which Signor Angelo put things right, especially where his sisters had failed, and the protests of the Pope that everything was just as it should be in this best of worlds.

Many persons who do not know the sturdy independence of the Italian peasant have wondered that the only brother of the Pope should remain a humble postman, and, moreover, in the employ of the state, which is at least the nominal enemy of the Papacy. Strange as it may seem to an outsider, Signor Angelo is a fervent patriot and one of the hottest upholders of the present war in Tripoli.

So good an Italian is Signor Angelo, and so much does he hope for the triumph of Christianity, that he would feel only shame in being paid for idleness. So he continues to carry letters for the King of Italy, not presuming one hair's breadth on his relationship with Pius X., as very well he might with impunity. Rain or shine, heat or cold, makes no difference to this old man of over 70, who daily goes his long round, declaring at the end of the day that, no matter how fatiguing, his is the most satisfactory work in the world.

In his little house — little in our eyes, and so comfortless — the most conspicuous object is an immense portrait of Pius X., painted and presented to him by a famous Hungarian artist. In another room are several excellent large photographs of the Pope with affectionate dedications, and a beautiful ivory crucifix given to Angelo Sarto by his pontifical brother one Christmas. It is said to have come out of the Vatican; anyway, it is sixteenth century work, the figure of Christ being carved from one piece of ivory, and hung on an ebony cross.

An Autocrat of The Poultry Farm

He Tried to Balk Cupid, but Failed.

By OTHO B. SENGA.

Josiah Preston always had been of a despotic disposition, but his natural tendency in this direction seemed to strengthen after his remunerative experiments in poultry raising.

Josiah's mind apparently held but one thought—his hens. The earth was made for the sole purpose of providing them with a scratching ground. The sun rose to give them light and warmth. Night followed day that they might have time to rest.

When Flower Preston, Josiah's only daughter, came home from boarding school and her father discovered by diligent questioning that the words incubator, brooder, trap nest, bone cutter, elicited no answering enthusiasm he grunted sarcastically, "A gal that's been to boardin' school for three years and don't know a leg band from a bone cutter!"

"You must learn about things as soon as you can, dear," whispered the mother nervously. "If you can't talk poultry talk with your pa you might just as well be in the desert of Sahary!"

"There's one comfort," continued Josiah—"I ain't raised the only fool there is in this county."

"There, there, pa." Mrs. Preston spoke soothingly. "What is the matter?"

"Squire Curtis' boy got home from college t'other day, and what do you think—instid of studyin' law so's to help his pa he's been studyin' bugs. Four years in college and don't know a thing but bugs!"

"Maybe his pa wanted him to," remarked Mrs. Preston pacifically.

"Waal," harshly, "I can't crow over Squire Curtis none. His boy don't know nothin' but bugs, and, as near as I kin figger out, that gal don't know nothin' at all. The only advantage is it took her a year less to learn it!"

When young Curtis began calling at the farm, which he did with suspicious promptness, Josiah's cup of misery was full.

"For the land's sake," he exclaimed testily to his wife, "can't you go in there and set?" indicating with his thumb the room from which came the sound of young voices and laughter. "You let that gal git boys and bugs inter that slim brain of hern and she won't be good for nothin'."

"There, there, pa, don't talk so loud. You didn't want my ma to come in and set when you used to come to see me."

Josiah's face purpled. He clutched at his collar as if he were choking.

"You don't mean"— he gasped.

Mrs. Preston nodded.

"Don't take it so hard, pa," she murmured soothingly. "Jim Curtis is one of the likeliest young men, and"—

"I could stand it better if 'twan't for the bugs," he moaned feebly. "If he didn't want to be a lawyer like his pa, why didn't he take up somethin' sensibler than bugs? What good is a bug? Bugs—millions on 'em—couldn't hatch out one chicken!"

"He's studying bees now, pa, and they're good for honey," appeasingly. "He has ever so many hives—newfangled ones—in his pa's back yard."

Josiah only groaned.

"And, pa, it's all arranged, only I said he'd have to be old fashioned enough to ask your consent, and Flower, like a good girl, said she'd never marry anybody without her pa's consent. That's a good deal nowadays, pa."

Perhaps it was because of Josiah's reputation for irascibility, perhaps because the young man felt that he could express himself more satisfactorily in writing, that his formal application for the consent of the autocrat reached Josiah by mail.

The old man read the letter several times, groaning and grunting. When he rose there was a grim smile on his face and a look of determination in his keen gray eyes.

This was on Thursday. In the evening Mrs. Preston reminded him—"Aren't you going in to see Jim, pa?"

"Dunno's he's callin' on me," testily.

"But you—his letter"—

"I ain't in no hurry to answer it. I'm makin' up my mind."

A similar reminder the next evening met with a like rebuff.

But on Saturday evening Josiah did not want to be reminded. He marched into the "best room," carrying a small basket, and displayed its contents—twenty large eggs, fair and beautiful, to the astonished young persons.

"There, young man," he growled, "there is my answer. Three weeks from tonight, if you bring me fourteen chickens out'n them twenty eggs, I'll give my consent."

"All right, Mr. Preston," returned the young man easily, "I shall be on hand."

"Pa Preston," cried Flower indignantly, "Jim doesn't know anything about chicken raising, and"—

"Time he did, then," sharply. "He'll have a chance to show what four years of science is good for. And any little thing he don't happen to know you can learn him," and with a sardonic chuckle the autocrat tramped out, leaving a greatly perplexed young man and a dismayed, tearful girl.

"He knows you can't do it," she sobbed. "Three weeks from tonight."

"Good thing he gave plenty of time," observed Jim cheerfully.

"Plenty of time!" echoed Flower despairingly. "Why, Jim, don't you know that twenty-one days are required to hatch chickens?"

"Well, I'll buy a hen on my way home and put her right to work," with twinkling eyes.

"There's very little chance of your being able to get a sitting hen," gloomily.

"Is that a particular breed?" innocently.

"Jim Curtis! Don't you know that you must have a hen that wants to sit You can't make one hatch eggs if she doesn't want to."

"Well, I can buy an incubator," undauntedly.

"You'd be four or five days late by the time you could order one and have it shipped here. And tomorrow is Sunday. Oh," she cried understandingly, "pa had it all planned—that's the reason he wouldn't see you until tonight."

"I know, Flower," with sudden inspiration. "I'll make an incubator. Come out and show me one of your father's, so I may get an idea of the principles involved. Come!"

Slightly encouraged, Flower led the way. Meeting her father, she asked coolly: "Have you any objections to my showing the incubators to Jim, pa? He's going to make one to hatch those eggs."

Preston grinned.

"No objections. Not in the least. Go ahead! Show him all about 'em, and tell him everything you know. 'Twon't burden his brain none. He might put the eggs into cold storage while he builds the incubator."

On Tuesday of the third week the autocrat remarked sarcastically: "I saw Jim this morning, Flower. I told him if he brought the chickens I'd announce the engagement in the county paper an' give you $300 for weddin' folderols."

Flower set her red lips in a firm, straight line. She had not inherited all her characteristics from her submissive mother.

"Lend me your pencil, pa. I want to make out a list of wedding folderols."

Saturday evening came, but Mr. Curtis did not appear.

"Where's the bug professor, Flower?" asked her father tauntingly.

"He's wrapping the chickens up in cotton so they can't take cold," retorted Flower spiritedly.

The old man smiled grimly, but the smile died away as Curtis entered the room.

"I'm a little late, Mr. Preston," he said cheerily, "but here are your birds."

He handed the autocrat a flat wooden box, which the latter opened with trembling fingers. He removed a sheet of cotton, displaying a number of fluffy, sleepy, peeping chickens.

"There are eighteen," remarked Jim carelessly, "four more than you asked for, but I put them all in for good measure."

"Them chicks didn't come out'n the shell today," he declared, with conviction.

"No," answered Jim quietly. "They came out Thursday."

Josiah gazed at him in actual consternation.

"I hope, Mr. Preston," courteously—"I hope there is no doubt in your mind that these chicks came from the eggs you gave me?"

Josiah shook his head mournfully.

"No," he said slowly. "They're all right. I know the strain."

He sat in silence pondering over the mystery.

"'How doth the little busy bee improve each shining hour,'" suggested Curtis, smiling. "Bugs are good for many things, Mr. Preston."

The autocrat sprang up excitedly.

Jim laughed pleasantly.

"I surely did, Mr. Preston. When Flower showed me the incubators three weeks ago tonight I observed that the temperature was similar to that in my beehives. I verified this on reaching home by placing a thermometer in a hive. So I put the eggs in the upper section of the hive, separating them from the working apartments of the bees by a cotton cloth. I was positive they would hatch, but you may imagine my surprise when they began chipping the shell in nineteen days."

"I guess I'll put 'em in a brooder," said Josiah, recovering himself somewhat. "These chicks has cost me $300 —too expensive to be allowed up dissipatin' at this time in the night."

He bore the precious peepers away, muttering wonderingly:

"Bugs! Hatched by bugs! And two days ahead of time!"

Later the autocrat announced in the county paper the engagement of his daughter to the "brilliant young scientist, James Curtis."

CANADIANS ARE CONVINCED THAT EMPIRE IS IN DANGER

Unofficial Statement Made In London Declares That Hon. Mr. Borden Has Carefully Probed the Demand For Naval Aid and Has Been Given All the Facts—France Keeping a Keen Eye on Negotiations.

London, Eng., July 16.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—A statement regarding the progress of the negotiations between the Canadian Ministers and the Imperial defence committee, given to the Canadian Associated Press by an apparently well-posted informant, is as follows:

"If the Canadian Ministers were in a position to speak, there is not the slightest doubt they would say that the aims of Great Britain with regard to naval requirements, modeled mostly on German expansion at sea, which have been the keynote of representations made by British Ministers, have been made in a most conclusive manner. Canadians are absolutely convinced that there is danger in prospect.

"Hon. Mr. Borden particularly, it is learned, put a series of questions in order to elucidate the real inwardness of the naval menace and requirements. He took nothing for granted, and, as a result, voluminous, vouched-for facts are now in his possession, including technical explanations from navy experts dealing with the strategic position and structural recommendations with regard to the type of ships required.

"What form aid will take has not been decided, but the question will be submitted at meetings beginning today at which the naval experts will be present.

"It is generally believed in inner circles that the granting to Canada and other dominions of a place on a remodeled committee on Imperial defence is practically settled as a matter of principle, but details have to be worked out. Just as the Canadian Premier declared that Canada would not be an adjunct of the Empire, so he has insisted on assurances of representation being given.

"Much conjecture surrounds the visit of Canadian Ministers to Paris on the 27th. No doubt while there, unofficial enquiries will be made with regard to the relations between France and Germany. Having in mind the entente between Britain and her neighbor across-the-channel, and the community of interest involved, Canadians are assured of a warm welcome. Their arrival in London has not been unheeded in France, and the importance and significance of the moral force surrounding the prospective assistance of British colonies to the Mother Country is fully recognized in French circles, both in London and Paris."

Pall Mall Gazette's Guess.

London, July 16.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Pall Mall Gazette pubishes an apparently inspired message which says the naval arrangement will provide for $7,500,000, as a minimum contribution to the navy. In return Canada hasn't put forward any requests, but it is understood that the British Government will do its best to meet Canada's requirements in regard to certain transportation matters, such as the granting of a subsidy towards a steamship line between Canada and the West Indies also a subsidy towards an all-red route steamship line, which has already occupied public attention in both hemispheres. In the latter case, the sum suggested was $1,250,000 a year. It would be a condition for the all-red steamship route that the money shall not be given to any line now in existence.

There must, says The Gazette, be an entire scheme for the fast steamers, not merely between Grat Britain and Canada, but also between Canada and Australia.

SIR THOMAS IS STILL RETICENT

Montreal, July 16.—Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, who returned yesterday from St. Andrew's, when asked about the rumor that the Canadian Pacific was to get a million dollars a year as a subsidy for a fast cruiser steamer service, replied, 'There is nothing of the kind of which the C.P.R. has been advised.''

Sir Thomas, on his return from England, admitted that something of the kind had been talked over, but said there was no information to give out until Premier Borden had returned from London.

In shipping circles it has since been rumored that the C.P.R. is to build four vessels of 25 knots each for a fast weekly service, the vessels to be of the three-funnel type, with cruiser sterns and capable of being converted into formidable fighting machines.

Soccer Player Badly Hurt.

Galt, July 16.—Abby Grieves, the big full back of the New Dundee football team, who was injured in a collision with one of his own team and a Preston player in a game with Preston here Thursday night, is in a very serious condition at his home in Plattsville. He has concussion of the brain and two doctors are in attendance.

Jealousy Upsets Revolt.

London, (via the frontier, July 15.)—The Government is now in possession of the complete plans of the royalists. These show that several regiments in Lisbon garrison were in league with them, and it was arranged that these troops should march into the streets and proclaim the reestablishment of the monarchy on the night that Capt. Couceiro, the royalist leader, crossed the frontier. The rivalry between Couceiro and one of the principal leaders at Lisbon, however, caused the conspiracy to fall through.

It is estimated that the royalists have lost 250 killed and 170 wounded. The Republican loss is heavy, but is not known exactly, as the Minister of War refuses to make public the casualty lists.

Winnipeg's Hundredth Birthday.

Winnipeg, July 16.—The one hundredth anniversary of Winnipeg's birth was celebrated yesterday by the laying of the foundation of a memorial monument to Lord Selkirk on the corner of Main and Note Dame streets in the presence of a crowd of distinguished old-timers. The stone-laying ceremony was performed by the Duke of Connaught. Over one hundred descendants of the original settlers who came over with Lord Selkirk were present and were the guests of the exhibition board, together with the royal party.

GRANTS TO VETERAN WILL SOON BE MADE

Ottawa, July 16.—The Fenian raid veterans are going to get their money after all without any more delay. Arrangements have been made whereby the necessary amount, which will be close upon a million dollars, will be taken out of consolidated revenue.

Veterans can secure certificates from the Militia Department, and upon presentation to the Department of Finance the $100 grant will be paid to them. Checks are being made out to-day. A large number of applications have been passed upon and it is expected that something like 4,000 grants will be paid out.

A great many applications are being received from persons who are laboring under the misconception that all those who turned out in '60-'70 are entitled to the grant, whether they saw active service or not. This, however, is a mistake, and only those whom the Department is assured saw active service will get the $100.

Mother and Babe Killed.

New York, July 16.—Mrs. Nelly Kelly, 28 years of age, is dead and her two-year-old baby boy is dying in a hospital as the result of injuries sustained when both were impaled yesterday on an iron picket fence as they fell from a fourth storey window in their home in West 12th street.

Mrs. Kelly fell in a futile attempt to save her child, which had crept to the window and lost its balance in leaning out. The mother died on the way to hospital and the child has a fractured skull and cannot recover.

Death of John Beatty.

Sarnia, July 16.—John D. Beatty, an old and respected resident of this town, and whose name was widely known with that of his brother, the late James Beatty, as founders of the Beatty Steamship Line, which is now the Northern Navigation Co., died on Sunday evening after a short illness, at the age of 74 years.

He was for twenty years general manager of the steamship line, and for a number of years president of the Sarnia Street Railway and active in civic affairs in the town in general.

Samuel S. Jones, teacher of mathematics in London Collegiate Institute for 20 years, is dead.

Special to the Review.

Toronto, July 16.—As a result of the high rates charged by hospitals in Toronto, the fraternal societies have called a meeting to frame a remonstrance and appoint a committee to present it to the City Council. If rates are not reduced they will build an hospital to take care of their own sick.

HERMAN ROSENTHAL SHOT TO DEATH ON NEW YORK STREET

Noted Gambler Exposed a Great Graft Scheme in Which the Police Were Interested—Witnesses Say Several Officers Were Among the Dead Man's Assailants—One Arrest.

Special to the Review.

New York, July 16—Herman Rosenthal, well-known gambler, who was to have been chief witness in a sweeping police graft enquiry, commencing to-day, was shot and instantly killed at 2 o'clock this morning in the Times square.

His assailants, six in number, escaped in a high powered automobile which brought them to the spot, a moment before. At least, two witnesses agreed that one or more of the men in the auto, were policemen.

Rosenthal sprang suddenly into public notice Friday last, when he filed affidavits charging that a raid on his gambling place on West Forty Fifth street, headed by Police Lieutenant Becker, followed a misunderstanding between Becker and himself. Becker, he alleged, was a partner with him in the profits of the place, having made a loan of $1,500 on a chattel mortgage on the furniture, for 25 per cent. of the profits.

Five shots were fired at Rosenthal just after he came out of the Hotel Metripole. He had told his wife on leaving home, that he had an appointment to meet Police Lieut. Becker. He went out of the lobby of the hotel, on being called by one of the party in the auto, and when he was a dozen feet from the door, five shots rang out. Four took effect, and he fell dead with a bullet in his brain.

Police Lieut. File, who was dining in the hotel at the time, gave chase in a taxicab, but was outdistanced by the car, which the assassins occupied.

There were several witnesses to the shooting, but it happened so quickly that testimony conflicts. Three claim to have seen the number of the car, but all saw a different number.

Mrs. Rosenthal charges the police with the murder, and says she warned her husband that something would happen if he kept his appointment.

The police visited the headquarters of the taxicab robbers this morning and captured a man giving the name of Louis Libby, who they claim was chauffeur of the auto used by the assassins, and one of those doing the shooting. The car is owned by Libby and has been identified as the one used. Libby has also been identified as the driver of the car. Police Lieut. Becker joined in the search for the murderers and said he knew no motive for the crime. He had not seen Rosenthal for a week.

SGT. ARMSTRONG WINS THE TROPHY

Bisley, July 16.—(C.A.P Cable.)—Sergt. J. H. Armstrong of the 66th Regiment, Halifax, won The Daily Telegraph Cup tie with five bulls, including a sighter. Other Canadian scores were:

Auld 28, Battersill 35, Blackburn 25, Davidson 30, Dymond 30, Forester 31, Kennedy 31, MacDougall 29, Maggs 32, MacPherson 33, McInnes 30, Mitchell 34, Mortimer 32, Regan 27, Richardson 28, Slater 32, Smith 30, Steele 32, Stoddart 31, Andrews 30, Bayles 30, Simpson 31.

The Canadians beat the City Rifle Club by 4 points for Col. O'Grady's cup.

In the Corporation of London match the winners were: W. A. Halls, London; Norton, London, second; Gower, Staffordshire, third; Mortimer, Canada, fourth; Allen, East Anglia, fifth; Kerr, Argyll, sixth. Each won $25. Forrest 12th, Blackburn 21st, Sclater 22nd, Dymond 26th, Forster 48th, each winning $10. Maggs 63rd, Armstrong 67th, Regan 79th, MacPherson 91st, and MacDougall 101st, win $5 each.

SIR WILFRID TO TAKE THE STUMP

Ottawa, July 16.—There is considerable curiosity and speculation in political circles at the announcement that during the coming summer Sir Wilfrid Laurier is billed to speak at various picnics and political gatherings in Quebec and Ontario.

The leader of the Opposition left last night for his old home in Arthabasca, Que. Before going he intimated that he would attend a number of political gatherings during the latter part of the summer and the early fall.

This is looked upon as a deliberate move on the part of Sir Wilfrid to secure an opportunity to discuss at these meetings the naval policy of the Government should one be announced in the meantime, or at least as a desire on his part to investigate personally the sentiment towards it in Quebec, and also in Ontario, before deciding upon the stand which he will take when Parliament meets and the result of the present naval conferences announced.

GAVE HIS LIFE TO SAVE ANOTHER

Hamilton, July 16.—The bodies of Hatty Gavey, 53 East Stuart street, and Edward Haigh, 212 East Macauley street, who were drowned in the bay on July 1, were recovered yesterday afternoon by Captain Lundy and Robert Luts. Captain Henderson of the Macassa on his trip out about four o'clock noticed the bodies and reported his discovery at the piers. The bodies were brought to the piers and taken to the Lakeside Hotel. Coroner Hopkins was notified and at once empanelled a jury, which viewed the bodies and adjourned until July 22. The bodies were taken to Green Bros. undertaking establishment. The body of the man was positively identified by Dr. Hopkins as Edward Haigh and it is certain that the other body is that of Hattie Gavey.

The bodies were found clinging to each other and appearances indicate that Haigh was drowned trying to save his companion.

The body of E. H. Farley, a seventeen-year-old boy, who was drowned from a canoe in the lake Sunday night, was recovered by Captain Lundy.

Nearly a hundred people were within fifty feet of the boy at the time, but could not see him in the darkness.

It is alleged that a man and a woman in a canoe could have saved Farley, but did not go to his assistance. Farley had borrowed the canoe from a Toronto man.

TORONTO LADY'S FATAL PLUNGE

Toronto, July 16.—Miss Amelia Taylor, 24 years of age, youngest daughter of the late Thomas Taylor of Scarboro Junction, was drowned while bathing last Saturday afternoon at the beach at St. Elmo, a summer resort in Muskoko. Miss Taylor had been visiting with some friends there and arising early on the morning of the fatality had gone down to the beach for her early morning plunge. She was evidently stricken with heart failure for she drowned in about two feet of water. No cries for help nor any signs of distress were heard or seen, and it is evident that the young woman was suddenly stricken.

MRS. BORDEN SENDS MESSAGE

London, July 16.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Premier Borden's return yesterday morning from Arundel Castle was followed by a conference with Colonial Secretary Harcourt. No other Minister was present. All the Ministers and the ladies attend the state ball Friday night.

Speaking of the visit, Mrs. Borden said: "Our welcome here has been complete. If I have a message for the people here, and in Canada, it is that to-day is the appointed time for work, success, gladness and good-will."

The Bordens spend the next week with Lord and Lady Salisbury.

Well Killed Sixty Children.

Montreal, July 16.—The mayor of Ste. Cecilie yesterday applied to the city for water, which, he said, was necessary to stop the rapid wiping out of the child population of the village, which has about 300 inhabitants all told. He said the village used to get water from a river owned by a power company. This was stopped and the people had recourse to a well, as a result of which sixty children have died within two weeks. Water was promised the municipality.

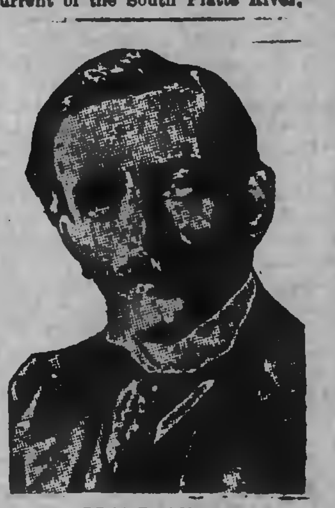
Cloudburst In Denver.

Denver, Colo., July 16.—Several hundred men, women and children are homeless, a number of deaths are rumored, and a million and a half dollars worth of property is in ruins here to-day as the effect of a cloudburst which resulted in the overflowing yesterday of the shallow bed of Cherry Creek through this city from ten o'clock until midnight.

The big city auditorium to-day is a refuge camp. At dawn five hundred of the homeless were gathered there and are being fed by the city. Twenty-five children six months to six years old, whose parents have been lost, are in the care of a police matron.

Relief parties at dawn began the search in the course of the flood, which is a trail of wrecked dwellings and other misshaped objects in the current of the South Platte River.



LLOYD GEORGE.

The Great Amazon River.

In South as in North America nature does her work on the grand scale, and one of her noblest achievements is the Amazon river. Rising in the Andes, it flows across the continent and discharges into the Atlantic ocean at the equator. The vastness of the area which it drains, amounting to 2,368,000 square miles, will be evident when it is borne in mind that this is more than the area of Russia in Europe and Austria-Hungary. It has a length of nearly 4,000 miles, is navigable for 2,300 miles from the sea and is fed by numerous streams, which in any other country would be ranked as great rivers. In the wet season, which lasts for about eight months, its width varies from five miles to 400. No wonder the Amazon has been called a gigantic reservoir rather than a river.

Some men who know very little are not altogether sure of that.

President Chamberlin of G.T.P. Says Northern Route Is Cooler for Shipment of Grain—Little of Panama Protest Is Being Made by Canadian Roads—U. S. Senators Declare That Britain Is Right in Contention.

Washington, July 16.—Great Britain's protest that the United States has no right under the Hay-Pauncefote treaty to pass its own coastwise vessels free through the Panama Canal, while it collects tolls from British and other foreign ships, found emphatic support in the Senate yesterday.

Opening the fight over the Panama Canal bill sent to the Senate by the House, in which the free provision is an important feature, Senators Burton of Ohio, and Root of New York, outlined the ground upon which the opponents of free passage to American ships will fight their battle.

Both Senators declared Great Britain had surrendered important right at Panama held under the former Clayton-Bulwer treaty for the pledge of "equal treatment" to all ships, given by the United States in the existing Hay-Pauncefote treaty. The controversy hinges on the question of whether the United States in its pledge to treat the ships of "all nations" equally, meant to include vessels owned by its citizens.

Railways Not Interested.

Montreal, July 16.—That the question of rates through the Panama Canal has little interest for Canadian railways, was the rather surprising view expressed by President E. J. Chamberlin of the G. T. R., in an interview here yesterday after his western tour.

"I don't think the Canadian railways have had anything to do with the protest made by the British Government against discriminatory rates through the Panama Canal in favor of American ships," he said, "because in my opinion very little Canadian traffic will go by that route.

"My belief is that the life-blood of the Canadian railroads is the traffic east and west," he said.

Asked if the G.T.P. had ever contemplated running a line of steamships from Prince Rupert to Europe via the Panama Canal, Mr. Chamberlin replied in the negative; adding that he did not believe any other Canadian railway had contemplated such a move either. As regards the transportation of grain, he remarked that the whole of the Canadian crop of last year would have had to be dried before it could be transported by such a hot route as the Panama Canal.

The present route, he said, was much cooler and, therefore, more desirable, and the transhipping of the grain at Fort William, Georgian Bay, Montreal or other outlets all had the effect of drying it. It must be remembered that the Canadian farmer wanted to market his grain as soon as it was threshed; he could not wait to dry and store it.

TORONTO POWER AGAIN OFF FOR THREE TEDIOUS HOURS

Accident to Power Line Causes Sixth Bad Tie-Up In Ten Days and Thousands Have Long Walks In the Rain — Cataract Company at Hamilton Has Mishap and City Suffers Severely—School Struck.

Toronto, July 16.—For the sixth time in the last ten days the power was off between here and the Falls and the car system was at a standstill, this time for three hours. Thousands had either to walk home or stand on the corners in a drizzling rain. The power had no sooner gone off than it started to rain. The nearest people to the cars found shelter in them. Others who were not so fortunate stood on the sidewalks. Those who had parasols were partly protected, but there were hundreds who depended on the doorways of the business houses as places of refuge.

Warned in the past how much to depend on the cars starting again thousands of the working people disregarded the drizzle and started for home on foot. Hundreds of other persons took advantage of the motor buses, which were running on the main thoroughfares, and were taken to their destinations.

It is thought that the trouble was caused by a bolt of lightning striking the Ontario Development Co.'s line near Hamilton. The Hydro-Electric system again came through unscathed.

Hamilton Suffers.

Hamilton, July 16.—The breaking of one of the Cataract Co.'s high tension wires caused a large part of the city to be in darkness for half an hour, commencing at 10 o'clock last night. In the down town section all the lights were out, and the performances at the theatres were temporarily stopped.

The gas footlight were lit and the curtain had to be drawn up so that light could be afforded to watch the act being set. The innovation proved quite popular with a large number in the audience who had never before seen a stage set.

The telephone service was paralyzed. The lights were all out, leaving the switchboards in darkness and the centrals were unable to make the proper connections.

Struck School Chimney.

Strathroy, July 16.—During an electrical storm here yesterday morning, a bolt of lightning struck the chimney, on the Caradoc street school, demolishing it, and continuing its way down the stovepipe, tore the stove door off its hinges and then ripped a large hole in the floor. Mr. Frank Hawkins, who lives nearby, was struck by lightning, but not seriously injured.

Lightning Struck Umbrella.

Chatham, July 16.—John Stafford, director of music in the Princess Theatre, while trying to board an electric car, had a narrow escape. A flash of lightning struck the umbrella he was carrying, snapping it off at the handle as if it were cut with a knife. Outside of receiving a severe shock he was uninjured.

King Honors Bostonians.

London, July 16.—King George, after inspecting the detachment of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston, now on a visit here said:

"I feel sure the exchange of such visits will do much to promote and cement the friendly feeling which I trust will always exist between the two great English-speaking nations which are so closely connected by the ties of race and brotherhood."

The inspection occurred at an early hour, as the King had arranged to visit the city of Winchester, in order to re-open the cathedral, the foundations of which have undergone alterations.

H. B. AMES' YACHT WAS STRANDED

Port Hood, July 16.—The sailing ship Manona owned by H. B. Ames, M.P., Montreal, struck a ledge at the southern end of Port Hood Island, Cape Breton, on Saturday night and foundered.

Mr. Ames and party, consisting of Mr. Middlebro, M.P., Owen Sound, Ont.; Dr. Wood, Brooklyn, N.Y., and Mr. Sherrard, Montreal, were rescued by boats and landed at Port Hood Island.

The party were cruising from Montreal to Cape Breton, thence to Labrador, for a couple of months. They carried provisions, etc., enough for the complete trip, and were to be joined by their wives in a day or two.

MR. BOURASSA'S PLAN

Henri Bourassa believes, evidently in the principle of asking for the whole earth that he may receive a portion of it. Only a few weeks ago at the Quebec Congress he practically demanded a universal French language for Canada with the Church of Rome enjoying powers supreme over the state.

Mr Bourassa has spoken again, this time on the subject of naval defence, and once more he is inclined to ask for more than he is willing to give. He is not altogether satisfied with the govermental plan that has been outlined by Premier Borden and proceeds to exploit a scheme of his own. He would have an Imperial council composed of equal numbers of representatives from all parts of the empire, to be elected by direct vote of the people, and all to have an equal voice in settling the war or peace problems of Great Britain. In return for this Mr. Bourassa would be willing to contribute to the navy approximately one per cent. of its fighting strength.

No sane government could be expected to listen for a moment to a proposition so preposterous, and it is here cited chiefly as an illustration of the lengths to which Mr. Bourassa's zeal in the cause of his race leads him. Among the attributes which he may possess modesty is certainly lacking.

Even the cautious English are not above hazarding a guess at the offer which the Canadian minister will make with regard to the great question of an Imperial navy, but these conjectures are as idle as they are unwarranted. The latest forecast is that Premier Borden will make a donation of $7,000,000 every other year for the construction of a battleship under the supervision of the British navy.

In the meantime the Canadian premier is silent, true to his habit of refusing to talk until the time is ripe for utterance. And when that time comes Mr. Borden will speak so that all may understand.

NO PLACE FOR BATHING

With one of the finest rivers in the country running through it from end to end, it does seem strange that Peterboro has neither private or public bath house and that one of the most healthy and attractive summer recreations is, in consequence, practically denied to its citizens. The Otonabee is in every respect a desirable piece of water for the purpose and the recent hot spell has again drawn attention to the lack of bathing facilities here noted. Is it any wonder then that a large proportion of our citizens are ignorant of the art of swimming and that, in case of a boating accident, the victims are at the mercy of the waters?

A bath house as a private enterprise has been made a paying investment in smaller cities than Peterboro and the marvel is that no one has seen the opportunity to open what would, during the summer months, become the most popular amusement resort in the city. But if no private citizen is inclined to make a move, what is to prevent the civic authorities to do so, following the example of city councils in other places?

The cost of a bath house, seeing that a mere shell would suffice, with dressing rooms for the patrons of both sexes, would probably not exceed $75 or $100. One in the central part of the city might be built as an experiment, and if the patronage seemed to warrant the additional outlay others could be erected at different points, say five in all, so that the entire city could enjoy equal advantages. Riverside Park would make a desirable location to the north. Another could be erected for the benefit of East City at the eastern terminus of the C.P.R. bridge. The foot of Lake street offers a suitable site for the third, and at the south terminus of the street car line there is a splendid point for a fourth structure.

For the benefit of the western part of the city, the stream running through Jackson Park could be dammed and a fine bathing place constructed, and thus all sections of Peterboro could enjoy the advantages which such an enterprise would surely afford. Everybody could learn to swim and the small boy would no longer wander, contrary to the paternal mandate, to the secluded parts of the river, to court death in waters too deep for his powers. All could enjoy the healthy pastime without being haunted by the fear of police interference and a session in the police court.

The young man who now would enjoy a dip these hot evenings, cannot at his own residence, array himself even in the most approved style of bathing suits, and make his way through the streets to the river, without rendering himself liable to arrest. Patrons of fashionable watering places in other parts of the country, where the bathing outfit in season is regarded as much a legitimate article of attire as the evening suit in its place, may be allowed that privilege, but not so here. Mothers who take their children down to the Otonabee and watch the little folks gambol in the cool water, often express the wish that they themselves could do the same.

The other evening, a young lady, recently from Scotland, swam several times across the river in the northern part of the city. She did not seem to regard the feat as anything out of the ordinary, but was surprised that it was beyond the powers of so many residents of the city. She accounted for her own proficiency by explaining that to learn the art of swimming was a compulsory course in the schools of her native land.

There is scarcely room in the already overcrowded curriculum of our schools for another department in athletic training, but the remedy is simple. If no private individual avails himself of an opportunity to embark in a paying venture, the City Council should act in a matter so intimately associated with the health of the public.

NOTE AND COMMENT

It is not necessary to go far from home to find heroes. Harry Hayward, himself unable to swim, jumped into the river to save his little child only to lose his own life.

August 1st is Emancipation day and that is the date selected by Col. Roosevelt for the formal organization of his new party.

Don't be too hard on the boy who insists upon going out in a canoe before he learns how to swim. Life is a game of chance from beginning to end and the young fellow has to take a hand sooner or later.

Burglars broke into the office of the Central Prison one night recently and stole eleven watches belonging to prisoners. The authorities tried to hush the matter up, but the burglars were so elated at carrying citadel that they notified the papers themselves.

At the recent entrance examination 88 per cent of the candidates from the city schools and 41 per cent of those from the rural sections were successful, thus showing the greater efficiency of those trained in the graded educational institutions of the city. The result is in no way a reflection upon the ability of the country school teachers, but rather shows the disadvantage under which they labor by reason of irregular attendance on the part of the pupils, as well as from lack of a graded system. Lakefield school, by carrying off the two highest honors in the county, holds the enviable position of leader among all its sister institutions, and the distinction won by its two pupils is well merited.

All Records Broken.

All previous immigration records for Ontario have been broken by the tide of immigration that has poured in during May. The Government immigration office has so far this month distributed between three thousand five hundred and four thousand immigrants throughout Ontario. This is nearly four times as many immigrants for this province as for the first fifteen days of May last year.

Gravitation.

Which would drop to the ground first, a bullet fired from a gun held perfectly level or one dropped from the hand from the same height and at the same time? They would strike the earth at the same time if the cannon is perpendicular to a plumb line, the firing and dropping to be at absolutely the same instant of time.

Walking on the C.P.R. tracks near Chalk River, Robert Stoddard, a farmer was struck by a train and killed.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, July 15.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market, the receipts of live stock for the week ended July 13 were 1700 cattle, 1300 sheep and lambs, 1110 hogs and 700 calves, while the offerings on the market this morning were 550 cattle, 600 sheep and lambs, 400 hogs and 175 calves.

Owing to the continued very warm weather and the more liberal supplies of cattle coming forward, for which the demand is limited, a weaker feeling developed in the market, and prices scored a further decline of fully 25c to 50c per 100 pounds since this day week. Even at this reduction buyers showed little or no disposition to operate, owing to the fact that the hot weather has driven so many people out of the city, the consumption of beef, therefore, having fallen off considerably. Choice steers sold as high as $7.50 per 100 pounds.

Hogs were strong, and prices advanced 5c to 10c per 100 pounds since this day week, and the prospects are that they will go higher, owing to curtailed supplies. To-day's offerings were light, only 400 head on the market, for which the demand was good. Selected lots sold at $8.60 to $8.70 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

There was no change in the condition of the market for small meats, prices being about steady, but the demand for all lines was slow, as buyers generally were not disposed to operate freely.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.25 to $7.50; do., medium, $6 to $6.50; do., common, $3.50 to $4; do., choice cows, $4.75 to $5.25; do., medium, $3.50 to $4; do., bulls, $5 to $6.25; milkers, choice, each, $75 to $80; do., common and medium, each, $60 to $70; springers, $40 to $60.

Sheep, ewes, $4 to $4.25; bucks and culls, $3.25 to $3.75. Lambs, $4.50 to $6.

Hogs, f.o.b., $8.60 to $8.75.

Calves, $1.50 to $6.

His Proof.

A large boarding house caught fire during dinner, and much confusion resulted. After the worst was over the landlady, who was a philosophical soul, remarked that it was a blessing that the fire had not happened at night, as some life might have been lost. A little later the colored boy, who heard this, mysteriously called her aside and cautiously exhibited a great bunch of dark, tangled hair. "Don't say nothin', Miss Nora," he whispered. "Dis fish is worse than it 'pears. One o' dem ladies in the room over de liberry done got burnt up. I been up dar to see, an' I found her hair."

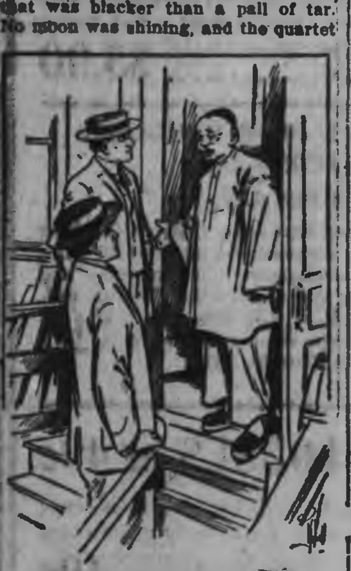
Walking and chatting pleasantly, the policemen led their companions over a side street, and into an alley that was blacker than a pall of tar. No moon was shining, and the quartet stumbled along, occasional smothered remarks of a thoroughly profane nature marking places where the stalwart "coppers" stubbed a toe or barked a shin. After penetrating the alley for perhaps 200 feet, the policemen ordered a halt, under the lee of a high board fence—the boundary of a miry, evil-looking yard.



THE YELLOW MAN LOOKED THEM OVER, AND THEN BECKONED THEM INSIDE THE PORTALS.

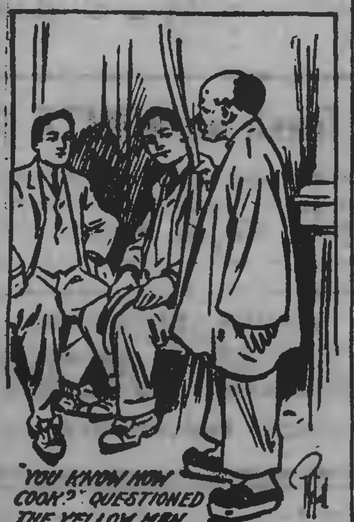
"Now, me sons," said Hogan, "right here is where we have to show a bit of generalship, ye understand. Go youse two through this yard to a small back door ye'll find at the far end. Knock three times an' whistle. Some wan will look at ye through a peephole. Seein' that ye are only kids, an' harmless-lookin', they will let ye in. If ye find the big nagur there, it is up to youse to open the door, sudden, an' let us in. If they hinder ye from openin' the door, yell—we'll hear ye. If the nagur is not there, make some excuse—a friend ye wanted is not there, or ye have no money to buy a card av hop—an' come out again. Then we'll hang around an' wait for the black gazabo. Can ye make good? Ye can? Then go to it."

The boys walked through a yard filled with mud, bricks and wreckage of every imaginable kind. At the far end of the yard they brought up against a brick wall. They fumbled along this wall, soon finding the little doorway, and tapped thrice upon the panels. Somewhere in the woodwork of the door a spark of light gleamed, and they were uncomfortably aware that they were under scrutiny. They whistled softly and tapped the door again. It opened and a Chinaman confronted them.

-You want smoke?"

"Of course we do," Solano answered.

The yellow man looked them over, and then beckoned them inside the portals, shutting and bolting the door behind them. Cat-footed, noiseless, he conducted them up a hallway damp with mould, noisome with dirt and the smell of many nights of opium "cooking," and guided them into a room of considerable size. A mattress, gray with dirt, lay on the floor and on this mattress three men—two negroes and one white man—were stupidly reclining, while a peanut oil lamp burned on a bit of matting nearby, and a bamboo pipe was being passed from hand to hand. The sweet, penetrating, sickish smell of opium thickened the air; roaches ran, fearless and inquisitive, along the floor, and the wooers of the poppy-god, silent, lost in happiness, drowsed, smoked and drowsed again, contented in their horrible surroundings as monarchs in a palace hall.



"YOU KNOW HOW COOK?" QUESTIONED THE YELLOW MAN.

"Cheap, fella, hims," said the Chinaman. "You want bunk, yes?"

Curtains of cheap, drab material masked wide stretches of the wall. From behind these curtains came the hum of subdued conversation and the perfume of the cooking "hop." The Chinaman parted two strips of the drab cloth, and showed a bunk between the curtains and the wall. Brockett and Solano looked up and down the room. There was no sign of their quarry. The boys quietly entered the bunk which the Chinaman had assigned them, and their host quickly brought them the full paraphernalia of the opium smoker's pastime.

"You know how cook?" questioned the yellow man, as the young fellows handed him a few silver coins. "You not can cook, me cook for you?"

"Not just yet," said Solano. "Let us rest a little—we are tired and need to stretch out awhile before we smoke."

"All lite. Yet get leady smoke, call me. I cook for you." And the heathen shuffled away to his eyrie near the door, where, with a mulatto woman, he alternately chatted softly and cast up accounts on the age-old counting strings of the Mongolian race.

"This is worth watching," whispered Brockett. "Our black man may be in one of those bunks, or he may come in at any time. We can stay here a little while before calling in our friends or going out again."

A voice came to them from a nearby bunk—a voice that they had heard before. Both boys started agitatedly as they recognized its thick, oily tone, but they restrained their impatience by gripping each other with firm though shaking hands.

"Ah done tole yo, mah fren'," came the voice, "dat dis heah place am haunted. Haunted by a ghos' wivout any hald. Dass right. Long time ago, dere was a man done been killed right heah. Dey cut off his hald, took de hald away wiv 'em, an' left de body. Evah since den dis heah haidless man have done haunted de spot. Now an' den he comes right in heah an' scahes de smokehs silly. Now an' den yo'll see him in de yahd. Mah lil' fren', dis ain't no joke. Onst every so often dat haidless man comes roun' heah, an' Ah'm almos' suah dat he's pretty nigh due. Didn't yo' neveh see no ghostses oveh in Manila?"

CHAPTER XX.

"Dis ain't no joke, no lie at all," went on the well-known voice. "Ah was in heah one night las' winteh, when dehe come an awful scream outside. Kee Lung, de Chinaman, goes to de dooh, an' in falls a niggah woman. She'd seen it. She'd seen a man standin' outside in de yahd wivout no haid—just his body all complete up to de neck—a big, upstandin' feller in good clothes, he was. She done let out one yell an' fall agin de dooh. Den dehe was a cihcus man, a mighty fine young man he was, too, what goes roun' de country in de summah, graftin' wiv de big-top shows. He was jest a comin' in heah when he seen de same ting, esackly identical. Dat man mighty nigh tuhned hones' den and dehe, so he did."

"Don' yo' spose, Sam," quavered a voice from an adjacent bunk, "as how all dis was a joke? Summun might have been foolin' an' projickin' roun' jest to scahe folks silly, don' yo' think?"

"No, indeedy," answered the voice of big Sam. "Dehe was no joke 'bout dis at all. Yo' jest ax Kee Lung. One time when dat haidless ghos' done frighten de livin' soul outen some people comin' in heah, Kee Lung runs out wiv a lamp an' a smokewagon. He seen de same ting—de haidless man—stannin' right longside de doohway. Kee Lung frow a fit an' bus' de lamp all oveh hisseff tryin' to get back inside."

"Madre de Dios," came a new and trembling tone from the same bunk whence the voice of the negro had just issued, "I am ver' sorry I mek entrance here. I care not, not me, to see ghosts. Ay de mi—I haf de good reason!"

The air thickened again with the smoke of opium, and the voices died down to soft, uncertain whispers. Brockett wriggled from the bunk, and Solano was just extricating himself from the narrow limits of the smoking-den, when there came the sound of a sudden struggle only a few feet away. Thumping blows, hoarse cries of surprise and rage, and the cracking of the woodwork under agitated feet and hands made up a startling mixture of noises. Heads protruded from the half dozen bunks around the room; the Chinaman and the mulatto woman rising from their chairs, came hurrying toward the scene of trouble—and then the curtains of one bunk were violently burst asunder. A writhing fighting heap fell heavily to the floor and a huge black man, extricating himself with a great heave of knees and shoulders, rose up gigantic in the smoky room. Round his knees clung a smaller man, striving frantically to drag the giant down. Big Sam, with a beastlike snarl, drove his massive fist upon the head of the clinging enemy, but did not break him from his hold. The smaller man tugged madly; big Sam, caught off balance, fell like a severed tree, and before he could rise something flashed in the blue murk of the room. Big Sam, with a hoarse gurgle, straightened out upon the floor. The little man sprang up, a knife in his blood-spattered hand, and reached quickly into the clothing of his victim. As he fumbled in the negro's pockets, the Chinaman struck him with a billet of wood, and the mulatto woman caught his knife-hand. The three dusky fighters rolled and grappled, upsetting the miserable furniture of the room, while another hideous uproar began outside the threshold, and a scream of "The ghost! The ghost!" mingled with insistent beatings on the panels.

Stepping clear as best he could from the struggle on the floor, Solano tore away the bolt. A man and woman, white-faced, shrieking, stumbled into the room—and at their heels came Flynn and Hogan, large, convincing pistols ready in their hands. Flynn shot his fist against the ear of the Chinaman, while Hogan, in most unchivalric fashion, applied the gun-butt to the head of the mulatto woman. The writhing knot upon the floor resolved itself into its proper factors, and the little man whose knife had been driven into the body of big Sam rose, gaspingly. He drew his hand across his eyes to clear his brain and get his bearings—and then his gaze fell upon the face of young Brockett, not six feet away. Another frightful yell rang out, and, staggering straight at the man he thought he slew two nights before, the Filipino, Aguilar, fell shrieking to the ground.

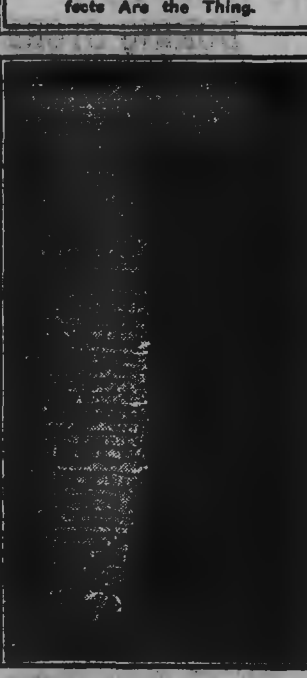
THE SUMMER'S STYLE.

Sash and Bow Effects Are the Thing.



AN ECCENTRIC RIBBON SASH.

One of the quaintest effects of summer fashion is the revival of the familiar bow and sash idea, a mode that has come into being at the same time as the pannier. As a matter of fact, not always one sash bow, but two are to be seen in some of the best sash arrangements.

A curious modification of the sash is the "ladder" treatment, which is particularly modish just now and correspondingly hard to make.

Such a sash is seen in the cut. It is fashioned from very broad, soft, satin ribbon run with little pin tucks its entire length and edged with a quilling of chiffon.

The new pannier sash hooks snugly around the waist, three pink roses concealing the fastening. The sash ends are attached to each side of the belt at the back in almost the full width of the ribbon, but at the knee these wide ends are caught together with a stiff little rosette of pink roses.

BLOOM OF AMERICAN WOMAN

Something Which Counts For a Good Deal in Europe in a Social Way.

Yes, the American woman has "bloom," which means she has charm and something besides—the talent for being interesting, the gift of being companionable, not only with other women, but with men. This is the more remarkable because the companionship between women and men in America is not nearly so constant and consistent as it should be. An American man bustles away to his office at 8 o'clock in the morning and only comes back at 8 o'clock in the evening or later. During all these hours his wife has to occupy herself as best she can, and often she has not even the household duties which give an Englishwoman something to do, because she lives in an apartment house or in a hotel where every domestic service is rendered to her as part of the machine, says the London Graphic.

When he does come home the American husband is probably dead tired and only able to go to bed, and, therefore, as nice American women often say when they visit here, it is a delight to meet leisurely men such as they meet in England and to talk over, in a leisurely way, the things which interest both men and women. After all, Providence so ordained things that men and women are needed to make up a complete world, and it is pretty obvious that the sort of segregation between them domestically which exists in America is not a good thing. The tired husband, the unoccupied wife—it is not, surely, the best sort of arrangement. Less labor, less wealth and more companionship are better.

Every woman sees the possibility of a garage in her own chicken house.

YOU CAN BE ABSOLUTELY SURE OF VALUES

If you carefully read the store advertisements and follow them in your buying.

Merchants advertise certain lines because they know these lines will advertise their stores. Because there is something about certain goods, they are put in conspicuous places and the people are told about them. It may be the exclusiveness or newness of design, it may be an unusual quality, it may be an attractive price.

But there is at least one definite, sure reason why a merchant advertises an article and is willing to stake the reputation of his store upon it.

Therefore, when you see an article advertised in THE REVIEW, depend upon it, that article is good value, as good value as can be obtained in that particular store.

My Dear Mr. Stooker,—

WHO FOLLOWS DUKE?

Some of the Princes Eligible For the Post at Rideau Hall.

Long before he was appointed Governor-General of Canada, the Duke of Connaught, in a public speech, expressed the hope that he might live to see the day when a son of King George should represent his Majesty in each of the British overseas dominions. It is most unlikely that that remark would have been made in public unless it were known that it expressed his Majesty's own wishes. And as the King has plenty of sons for the purpose, it is probable that those of us who live long enough will one day see the duke's wish fulfilled, and a son of the sovereign acting as his gracious father's substitute in each of the great self-governing lands which owe allegiance to the British crown. However, that is a matter of the more or less remote future. The Prince of Wales is yet but a lad, and, even when he arrives at man's estate, it is unlikely that he could be spared from the United Kingdom for so long an absence as a Governor-Generalship would necessitate, while more than one of his brothers is at present of an age so tender as to require the care of a governess rather than to be fitted for the cares of a Governor-General. Still, it is quite commonly said in England, so far as Canada, at least, is concerned, that this country, having once basked in the sunshine of royalty's presence, must not be allowed to fall from her high estate. In other words, Amurath must succeed to Amurath—royalty to royalty.

And it is quite surprising to note how many royalties there are immediately or potentially eligible to represent the august head of their family in the capacity named. Certainly, we none of us grow younger with each day we live, but royalties seem to have a habit of growing up unawares almost like mushrooms. Take the case of Prince Arthur of Connaught. His is one of the two names most frequently mentioned in the Old Country as that of the probable successor of the urbane prince so lately a welcome visitor to Canada. It seems only the other day that Prince Arthur was a schoolboy, and it is hard to realise that in a few months he will be thirty years old.

He has been often termed the "handy man" of the royal family, and, of late years, much of the "spade work" of royalty has devolved on him, and, by common consent, he has discharged all the duties, agreeable and disagreeable, with which he has been entrusted, with a tact and assiduity which seem to have come to him by inheritance.

For another name is pretty often mentioned in the Old Country as that of a probable immediate successor to the duke—and that is the name of Queen Mary's oldest brother, the Duke of Teck, last year created a "Highness," instead of, as formerly, a "Serene Highness." The Duke of Teck is of a more mature age than Prince Arthur of Connaught, being forty-four years old—six years older than his brother, Prince Alexander of Teck, who may also be looked on as a possibility in the way of a royal Governor-General. These two brothers are very much alike in appearance, and they have both a large share of the good-heartedness for which Queen Mary is noted.

There are three other cousins of the King who will shortly be of an age to occupy a position so responsible as that of his Majesty's representative. And they are the three Princes of Battenberg — Alexander, Leopold, and Maurice—sons of Princess Henry of Battenberg, the youngest daughter of Queen Victoria, and brothers of the Queen of Spain. Their ages are respectively twenty-six, twenty-three, and twenty-one.—Toronto Star Weekly.

A Man in a Book.

Dr. Arthur of Vegreville, Alta., is said to be the man whom many persons know as Mr. Brown in Ralph Connor's book, "The Foreigner."

When Dr. Arthur began his work in the West, he was merely a missionary with but little knowledge of medicine, but as there were no doctors in the district, he had to look after the bodies as well as the souls of men and women for miles around. He took his medical course later on, but experience had already taught him a great deal about attending the sick. Early in his career, he tried to start a school and got a number of foreigners to carry logs for that purpose. They were willing to work until some person happened to tell these men that when they had finished the school they would have to pay for a teacher. They did not like the outlook and building operations stopped immediately. It may be mentioned that Dr. Arthur and his wife were not daunted. They started classes in their home, which continued until school accommodation was finally provided.

Found Little Gold.

That there are no well defined veins of gold at Whiskey Lake on the north shore of Lake Huron, is the report of Prof. A. P. Coleman to the Bureau of Mines. Prof. Coleman of the university, has made a geological survey of Whiskey Lake district, most of which has been staked, with the expectation that there are gold deposits. He found that there was only one claim being worked at the present time. This is the Payton property, where good looking quartz has been stripped for some hundreds of feet. Free gold can be seen at several places in the district. At many places the quartz appears barren and white. Copper deposits are of low grade and are small in amount.

Ottawa's Goal.

Ottawa is striving to have itself created a federal district. The $15,000,000 of Government property pays no taxes, but contributes $15,000 a year for fire protection and pays for extending the park system moderately. It will soon wipe out a lot more taxable property. The puzzle is to do it and preserve the franchise of the inhabitants.

Brockville police, in an auto, caught a bicycle thief, who gave his name as Fred Gray, of Buffalo.

TWO COWS LOST DURING STORM

Hail Fell in Some Parts of the Country

Yesterday's electric storm killed two cows belonging to Mr. Franks, of Smith township. Mr. Hancock of the 2nd line of Smith, reports seeing the railway section house at Best's Station, in flames as he was driving past during the storm. In his neighborhood the storm was accompanied by hail for several minutes.

YOUNG MEN DOVE BUT WERE UNABLE TO FIND BODIES

Although the late Henry Hayward and his daughter were both drowned on Sunday, valiant attempts at rescue were made by several people, who were in the vicinity, at the time Hayward's perilous state became noticeable.

Among these were two young men of the We-Never-Sleep camp, who spared no efforts to effect a rescue if possible. Two of the young men, Elric White and Howard Cranfield, succeeded in reaching the sport first where Hayward was seen to go under. Mr. White dove several times, although greatly fatigued by his violent paddling in reaching the spot. Owing to the body having been carried away by the current, his attempts to find the body were fruitless. He however, continued diving for fully three-quarters of an hour, and, assisted by others, continued the search for the bodies.

MARRIED THEIR MAIDS.

Servants Who Have Found Fortune at the Altar.

Cupid is notoriously no respecter of persons; and if, in a mischievous mood, he makes a master succumb to the charms of his maidservant to the extent of putting a wedding-ring on her finger, he can at least boast that he has made many a happy union out of much more incongruous material; for the "wicked little god" thinks nothing of mating a prince with a peasant or a nobleman with a "Miss Nobody."

Sir Gervase Clifton wanted little help from Cupid when he wooed the first of his many wives; for among his domestics was a pretty, blue-eyed maid who satisfied his ideal of the beauty and virtues he sought in a wife. And the wedded life that followed his nuptials proved so happy that for the rest of his days he never went a-wooing outside his own circle of domestics. One maidservant after another graduated in turn as My Lady Clifton, until number seven survived to smooth the pillow of his deathbed.

And so it has been in many cases. The maid has made an excellent wife to the master. There was never a more loyal or beloved spouse than Elizabeth Starkey, maid-of-all-work, red-armed and rosy-cheeked, whom Thomas Coutts, the rich banker of the Strand, promoted from the kitchen to the drawing-room. And her virtues were transmitted to her three daughters, who found husbands respectively in the Marquess of Bute, the Earl of Guilford, and Sir Francis Burdett.

George Stephenson, the father of the railway, never did a better day's work in his life than when he gave his name to "Fanny" Henderson, domestic servant, whose life-achievement was summed up in this testimonial: "The bearer, Frances Henderson, is a girl of sober disposition, an honest servant, and of a good family; as witness my hand.—George Alder." It was "Fanny" who became the mother of the famous Robert Stephenson; and when, after a too-brief wedded life, she left her husband desolate, he found consolation in the affection of Elizabeth Hindmarsh, farmer's daughter and housemaid.

Shortly before George Stephenson won his maid-of-all-work, John Crossley, of Halifax, had made a wife of Martha Turner, who ruled over a Yorkshire kitchen, and, thus unknowingly, laid the foundation of an enormous fortune. Martha's domestic services were assessed at $30 a year; but she soon proved worth much more than that to her carpet-weaving husband.

In later years she confessed, "I used to get up at four o'clock in the morning to stitch carpets and had usually earned two shillings by the time my neighbors were coming downstairs." These were the "days of small things"; but Martha, thanks to her clever brain and industrious hands, lived to see "her John" head of one of the greatest carpet-weaving firms in the world, with more than $6,000,000 at his back. Her fifth son became a baronet, and her grandson is known to-day as the Right Hon. Sir Savile Crossley, Bart., K.C.V.O.

A valuable team of horses belonging to Fred Pollock was killed by a Pere Marquette train at St. Thomas.

PETERBORO' DAIRY RECORD

(MANY COWS ARE BEING TESTED)

CENTRE, LARGEST IN ONTARIO

The report of the Dairy Record Centres in Ontario for the month of May has just been received, and shows that while there is not as many cows being tested here as at one or two other centres, owing to the herds being smaller, that the number of farmers testing their herds is away ahead of any other centre, thus bearing out the prediction made last fall by the local recorder, Mr. Andrews, that the Peterborough Centre would, in 1912, be the largest in the province.

There are many good reasons for the popularity of the cow testing work in this county, but no doubt the principal one is that the farmers are beginning to relize that they cannot afford to take up their time or the time of expensive labor in milking cows of doubtful value, and are determined that nothing but the best milkers shall find a place in their herd. With the excellent prices being received for all dairy products it is but natural that a great deal of interest should be taken in the cows, and every effort made to secure better animals, and it is evident that the farmers of the Peterborough section do not intend in the future to take second place with any section in Ontario in this respect.

That the silo is becoming very popular is shown by the large number which are being erected this year. Twenty per cent of the members of the Cow Testing Associations are building silos. Quite a number are building concrete and part stave, a few are stave, and a few men are putting up the Ideal. The number of people who spray their cows are rapidly increasing, and about 95 per cent of the members of this centre are spraying this year.

In looking over the average production of the cows in the different Associations, it is seen that the Trewern Association leads for the month of May, with 944 lbs. milk and 31.4 lbs. fat, while Norwood is a close second with 916 lbs. milk and 30.3 lbs. fat.

The average for the entire centre is 823 lbs. milk and 27.7 lbs. fat.

HE MUST HAVE DECIDED THAT HE WAS NOT SICK

A rather strange case is reported from the south end of the city. Willie Taylor was taken ill, apparently with an attack of appendicitis. The ambulance was summoned and he was taken to the hospital to undergo an operation. This was on uSnday. On the following day a swelling on the side of an older brother, Alfred, became larger, and he was conveyed to the hospital. Willie, however, returned to his home, without having an operation performed, and it is said he went on a fishing trip to the river.

The older brother, Alfred, however, was operated on and is reported to-day as doing nicely.

OUTRAGES ON THE AMAZON

Rubber Company Named in Case is Not British

London, July 16—Sir Conan Doyle who championed the cause of the rubber gathering natives of the Congo, said in an interview on Sir Roger Casement's report respecting the outrages on the Amazon—

"There is an important point to be considered. Although technically a British company, the Amazon Company is not in any particular sense a British Company. It was started by a man of the name of Arana, who owned all this forest land. He came over to London some years ago and attempted to float a company, but couldn't get anyone to invest. Nevertheless he registered a company. The great bulk of the shares were left on his hands, and he disposed of them elsewhere. The company, however, thus became a British company, as it was registered in London.

"The whole control was invested in Arana, himself, and of the few Englishmen who had shares, one or two were on the board of directors, but they had no means of knowing what was going on in South America. As soon as they learned of the outrages they sent out their own representative with Sir Roger Casement, and they joined whole-heartedly in trying to bring the miscreants to justice. It is very unfair to put it as though it was a British company that was to blame. If we find that the shareholders had anything to do with these cruelties, we must punish them, but I don't think they had."

NEW AGREEMENT WITH CARPET CO.

A letter was read from the Brinton Carpet Company, saying their agreement with the commissioners had expired. Instructions were given that the city solicitor prepare a new agreement with a minimum rate of $225.00 a year gross.

The rate on the Murray street Baptist church was set at $75.00 gross per year.

A letter was read from E. M. Cooke asking for an increase of salary. The request was laid over.

Several other applications were dealt with of lesser importance.

Offered Position at Ottawa

Mr. J. N. Kelly, late principal of the King Edward school, received an offer of a position with the Ottawa Collegiate Institute, more lucrative than that of the accepted position with the Kingston Collegiate. Mr. Kelly, however, had accepted the Kingston position.

Handing Out a Hint.

School Director (to teacher) — We were thinking of having a nice motto framed and put over your desk to encourage the children. How would "Knowledge Is Wealth" do?

Teacher—That wouldn't do at all. The children know how small my salary is, and they might draw conclusions of their own.

Easy to Answer.

"Why is a burglar's tool called a 'jimmy?'"

"For the same reason that a policeman's tool is called a 'billy.' What else would you like to know about?"

As Others Knew Her.

"She seems to be a natural flirt," he said.

"Natural?" the woman impatiently replied. "There's nothing natural about her but the framework."

STAGE REALISM.

Mechanical Devices Now Used to Secure Wonderful Results.

Undoubtedly one of the most striking examples of modern stage realism is the scene enacted night after night at Drury Lane, when Ben Hur, hero of the play of that name, drives four beautiful Arabian horses, which beat his rival's team. There are five chariots altogether in the great race, and the horses appear to the audience to be madly galloping towards the wings. As a matter of fact, it is a wonderfully clever stage illusion, the platform on which the horses stand moving rapidly beneath their hoofs as they gallop.

"Of course," said Mr. Joseph Brooks, who helped largely to organize the production, to the writer, "only the most accomplished horses can keep pace with this moving part of the stage. We commenced training the animals by putting them on treadmills to accustom them to he awkward motion. When they were brought into the theatre we tried them on the stage, slowly at first, then got them into a trot, and by degrees reached a gallop. The chariot race is staged and run exactly as Gen. Lew Wallace describes it in his famous novel, and it was only after examining some hundreds of horses that we were able to select the requisite number."

Another remarkable piece of stage realism shown at Drury Lane was the great shipwreck scene in "The Price of Peace." Readers familiar with the play will remember the incident of a liner running into a yacht with a terrific crash and bang—the noise, by the way, being produced by a number of men armed with big drum and cymbals, several yards of heavy chain being also dropped on a resonant iron plate, and a contrivance like an overgrown watchman's rattle being also used.

A wonderful foggy effect was produced by numerous gauze curtains passing between various sections of the yacht. The manner in which the sinking was represented was exceeding simple. Drury Lane stage is divided into several large lifts. The sinking stage in this particular scene was 40 feet by 22 feet, the surface being cut into three parts and worked by separate lifts, the two nearest the audience being hydraulic. The rocking motion was imparted to the yacht by two of the lifts being worked independently of the other. The large liner at the back was but a painted ship upon a painted ocean, but the scene-shifters had to manipulate her in such a way that she loomed up out of the fog of gauzes and bore down on the yacht.

Talking about stage mechanism, it was recently stated that gramophones are likely to take the place of the super who acts the part of "Mr. Shouts-Without." In "Jelf's," at Wyndham's Theatre, London, the gramophone takes no fewer than three roles, while Sir Herbert Tree has used the machines frequently in some of his Shakespearean productions. Again, the roar of the infuriated crowd at a certain crisis in "Count Hannibal," in which Mr. Oscar Asche appeared at the New Theatre, London, some time ago, was not omitted by the usual supers and stage hands, but by a gramophone.

Changed His Mind.

A little adventure of the Duke of Norfolk at the reception after the double wedding of the Misses Cicely and Dorothy Smyth-Pigott at Brompton oratory the past winter is being told in England.

After the wedding the duke slipped out quietly at the back of the fashionable crowd and walked across to the hotel where the wedding guests were received. Going in unostentatiously, he disregarded the assiduous flunkeys at the cloakroom, took off his coat himself, folded it neatly and, going into the hotel office opposite, laid it on the table and put his hat on top.

"I'll just leave these here," he said to the man in charge.

"You can't," was the reply. "Take them across to the cloakroom."

"But I want to go away early and avoid trouble," he mildly protested.

"Really, my coat is in no one's way, I think it should be allowed here."

"What's the name?" asked the man.

"The Duke of Norfolk."

"Oh, ah! Your grace can leave it here by all means!" exclaimed the abashed servitor as the duke went off quiet and unperturbed by the incident.

Sardinia.

The resemblance of Italy to a booted leg ending in a pronounced toe and heel is familiar to everybody. But how many of those who have glanced at Sardinia on the map have observed the likeness of the island to a footprint? Yet two of its oldest Greek names were Ichnusa (from "ichnos," a footmark) and Sandaliotis (from "sandal"). If these names had not yielded to Sardinia (said to be derived from Sardus, a son of Hercules) what should we be calling sardines to-day? And what of the "sardonic" laugh, which commemorates that island herb which distorted the features into a grin?—London Express.

The Sincerest Flattery.

Everything about Aunt Dorothy seemed lovely and wholly desirable to Bobby. Even an accident that broke a piece from one of her front teeth produced at last what seemed to her small admirer an attractive result.

On his first visit to the dentist Bobby bore with more or less patience the work which had to be done and then made a request.

Dangerous Rights.

MR. C. H. SAWLE WRITES FROM HAZELTON B.C.

Mr. C. H. Sawle, writes from Hazelton B. C., as follows—

Hazelton, July 5, 1912.

Dear Sir—We are in pretty good shape considering that we have just pulled through a real live pioneer winter. It was a cracker-jack too. For two weeks it was never above 20 below zero and nearly every night it went down to 40 or 45 below. That's some cold. But we were very comfortable in our camp, and we are still living in it, although there are pretty good prospects of getting to the new town in the near future. We will then have a house. I rather fancy a log bungalow, as they can be built very comfortably here.

Since the winter, we have had most delightful weather. The sunshine is wonderful. For weeks we have been going to bed and getting up in daylight. At half-past ten p.m., we can sit out doors and read books or papers. The country has been one mass of wild roses since the second week in June. They are just about over now. Wild flowers flourish and the whole country is a bower of beauty. Of course the natural beauty of this district surpasses even the wonders of Switzerland—of course I know as I have been there several times.

Aside from these things we have the world by the throat. The mines are turning out greater than the wildest dreams of a fanatic novelist. There are three properties that are now ready to ship ore and they have the stuff to ship. There are many more properties coming along very rapidly. Of course we have always been hindered by lack of transportation—items like $60 a ton, freight up the river cannot be winked at, even by a millionaire, but these days are now rapidly passing. Real live trains will run in here, or at least New Hazelton, about the time that Mrs. Sawle and I leave for the east. You can learn all you want about our mines, from the Herald, if you are interested.

Mrs. Sawle and I will likely leave here the latter part of August or the first part of September, for the east. We will, of course, spend some time in Peterborough, as we have both a very warm spot in our hearts for the old town. There are lots of places that are attractive, but we have often thought of the time when we could return to Peterborough.

PROSPECTS GOOD FOR HONEY CROP

The report of Morley Pettit, Provincial Apiarist, shows that there are 434 beekeepers in the province and that 15,758 colonies survived the recent severe winter. The increase to this by swarming since the opening of spring is 25 per cent. Owing to the lateness of the season bees did not begin work on the clover field until about the middle of June, but notwithstanding this a fair crop of honey is expected.

There are now about fifty colonies of bees in the County of Peterborough.

A GOOD WORD FROM IRELAND

The Review has received a copy of the Evening Telegraph published in Belfast, Ireland, of July 1, last, in which nearly a page is given up to exploiting Canada as a desirable haven for the Irishman who wishes to leave his own land. Sir Richard McBride, Premier of British Columbia, sent a cablegram, containing a message of congratulation to the Emerald Isle. An interview published in the London Times, in which Premier Borden discourses on the benefits that have followed Confederation is reproduced in the Telegraph. Lieut.-Gov. Langelier, of Quebec, Lieut.-Gov. Gibson, of Ontario, Premier Whitney, Chief Justice Townshend, of Nova Scotia, and Hon. Geo. E. Foster each have signed articles in the Telegraph and all of them extend a welcome to any son of Erin who may make Canada his home.

DID NOT HEAR NOISE OF HOUSE NEXT DOOR BEING BLOWN DOWN

Miss Jean Shaw Tells of Her Experiences when Cyclone Struck Regina.

Miss Jean M. Shaw, who visited friends in the city last winter, writes of her experiences at her home in Regina, when parts of the city were devastated by the cyclone. Miss Shaw is a daughter of Dr. J. M. Shaw, formerly of Keene, who have many friends in the city and vicinity. Miss Shaw says:

It has all been the most terrible thing, but then we all escaped, so we have a lot to be thankful for. On Sunday afternoon we had only been home from Sunday school a few minutes when it got very black, and we thought we were in for a bad storm, so we all went into the house and shut the windows. We had hardly done so when all the glass in the porch blew in, all the windows all over the house and curtains, pictures, blinds and everything started to whirl around. Really the roar was something never to be forgotten. It was so deafening that we never heard the house next door blow completely down, so you can imagine what it was like. We all ran for the basement and managed to get there, where we stayed until the worst was over. Really it is awful. Whole blocks of beautiful residences were completely destroyed and all up and down the streets there is just a row of basements, and heaps of boards, etc. We thought there would be at least 100 killed, but although there were a great many cut and badly hurt, there have only been about thirty who have died. Of course there are quite a number missing, and it is feared there are several in the various chuches or in the lake. Oh, the whole thing has been sickening, so I won't talk about it. We put in about ten minutes of the most awful time I ever want to put in when we were waiting for father. He was down street and we thought he was killed. He escaped from the Temple, which is wrecked to the extent of about $15,000.00, but was held up so often on the way home, as there were people lying on the streets, and there didn't seem to be half enough doctors. Our house is damaged to the extent of at least $500.00, but we count that as nothing after what we have gone through. Our roof lifted, but settled again, and that is what saved us. If the wind had once got into the house, I am afraid we would all have been done for.

Mollie went down to Winnipeg with Irene and Donald last Monday, and since then I have been very busy as we have a man and woman and three children staying with us (their house was completely destroyed), and of course, every curtain in the house has to be washed, also all the bedding, etc. However, I feel real well and am so thankful that I just feel ready to work from morning to night. That Mrs. Shaw, who was killed was a Mrs. S. D. Shaw, who lived just a few houses from us. Their house was carried right along the street, and as the two girls were in the upstairs they were badly hurt and their mother, who was downstairs was killed almost instantly. My I do feel so sorry for those poor girls, as father and I have received several letters sympathizing with us, and it makes us feel terrible to think it might have been our own dear mother.

TORONTO CHAFFEUR FINED FOR EXCEEDING SPEED LIMIT

Too Much Reckless Driving is the Opinion of Magistrate Dumble.

"I have been looking for some one through whom to intimate the views of the court upon reckless driving," said Magistrate Dumble this morning to Chaffeur D. B. Martin, of Toronto, charged with exceeding the speed limit. The fine was $22.35.

Martin is the driver of a car owned by a Mrs. Gough, of Toronto, who with a party are visiting Mrs. B. Morrow on Water street.

When the rain was pouring down yesterday afternoon, Martin, after leaving the occupants of the car at Mrs. Morrow's, put on speed to get to the shelter of the Simcoe street garage of Mr. O. R. Banks. There was scarcely a soul on the street, but the eye of a blue coat caught the car number during its evolutions from side to side, with the result that the chauffeur was notified to to appear.

He was fined $22.35 including costs. The minimum fine is $10, and the maximum $50, or one week in jail, or both.

"I am giving a pretty stiff fine," remarked His Worship, "for there is too much of this reckless driving." His Worship also said that in his opinion there were many others who exceeded the fifteen mile an hour regulation.

A large number of our citizens were at Peterborough on Friday and had a very enjoyable time. The weather was exceptionally fine and there was never a better showing of Orangemen and their supporters from this town. L.O.L. 113 looked pretty in their uniforms and marched like veterans to the elevating and aggressive music of their band. The decorum of the great host of Orangemen in the parade is worthy of the highest terms of praise. The elevating power of the Order was never more plainly demonstrated than in the 222nd celebration.

Mr John Boyd of Mount Pleasant, visited with his daughter, Mrs. J. W. Mitchell.

The new stable being erected is in connection with the Methodist parsonage, not with the manse as reported last week.

It is expected that work on the new armory will soon begin.

Miss Maud Handley of Mount Pleasant, called on Omemee friends the last of the week.

Dr. Colebourn, a late practitioner of our town, called on some of his Omemee friends a few days ago. The Doctor was returning to Western Canada after a trip to England.

On Monday evening, the Boy Scouts held a meeting, and examinations for certificates were gone through with. At the conclusion Reeve Mulligan treated the Scouts and the Council to ice cream, and Mr. W. H. Currie, duplicated the cream. Speeches were made by Rev. D. H. Currie, Mr. W. H. Curry, Reeve Mulligan and Mr. T. W. McLean. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Scout Master Winslow, for his great and untiring interest in the boys. All regret that his duties preclude his longer residence in our town, and he heard many nice things that we hope will encourage him to still greater zeal in this noble work.

SUPERSTITIONS OF BALL PLAYERS

Ty Cobb always swings three bats as he walks to the plate. The fact that one bat is so much lighter after holding three is a truth, aside from the superstition of the thing.

Nap Lajoie always draws a line in the dirt of the batter's box before taking position. He will not face the pitcher without this preliminary.

Barney Pelty must throw a curve ball just before starting to pitch. His last to the catcher when warming up between innings is always a curve.

Rube Oldring insists on the little mascot of the Athletics standing in a certain place when he is at bat.

Always before delivering the ball Russel Ford adjusts his cap.

Bill Donovan dislikes to strike out the first batter. He believes it the forerunner of bad luck.

Heinie Peitz, when manager of the Colonels, was averse to having any pictures taken of his team. He believes it hoodooed the game.

Bill Armour, when watching a game in which one of his pitchers is going well, waxes warm if some curious spectators asks how many hits have been made off the pitcher. Bill says such a question invariable brings on an avalnache of bingles in the next innings.

Joe Cantillon is also one of the most superstitious individuals who ever sat on a bench, and brother Mike joins him in his beliefs. In the ninth innings of a tie score game, and the visiting club last at bat, when the batter slams one over the right field fence, Joe turns up his coat collar, cusses the pitcher and goes to the club house well content that it is practically imposcsible to win that game.

Mr. Perkins, of Woodstock, is dead as the result of injuries received in a runaway a week ago.

OSHAWA SCORED ONLY GOAL IN FINAL WITH BOWMANVILLE

Winners Will Play C. G. E Eleven for 1912 Championship of Midland League.

Armed with whistles, horns, cowbells and other weapons of torture, a big crowd of enthusiastic rooters gathered at Hampton last Saturday and watched the Bowmanville and Oshawa football teams battle in one of the most exciting games ever witnessed in the history of the Midland Football League.

Oshawa scored the only counter of the game on a swift shot to the left hand corner of the goal, Boult turning the trick, and as a result will play with the C.G.E. team for the 1912 championship.

The two teams had played four games, one in Oshawa and three in Bowmanville. The third game was protested and ordered to be replayed. The contest was staged alright, but when some of the spectators interfered the referee called the game off. The executive committee ordered a sudden death fixture for Hampton, a small burg five miles north of Bowmanville, and on Saturday the two clubs went into the fray, Oshawa emerging the victor. At the time the excitement was very high. During the first half the play was of the end to end variety, and the winning goal was taken after 17 minutes' play. The shot that beat Appleton, the Bowmanville goalie, caught him completely by surprise.

Bowmanville fought like demons to even up in the second half, but Oshawa, although forced on the defensive, succeeded in holding the tally, being somewhat assisted by inaccurate shooting. The game was free from roughness, and altogether a great exhibition to watch. The teams were:

Oshawa—T. Pellitt, H. Derry, J. Robinson, F. Stevens, H. Woods, W. Heavens, T. Faveau, W. Mitchell, S. Vamplew, L. Woods, T. Boult.

Bowmanville—D. Appleton, A. Brown, H. Ireland, J. Thorpe, E. Horn, W. Redman, P. Harmsworth, G. Longmire, P. Werry, R. Benson, J. Davidson.

Mr. E. E. Brumwell, of Peterborough, had a difficult proposition, but handled the game satisfactorily.

BREEZES FROM THE DIAMOND

"McManus doesn't disport any frills" remarks a London paper of the Ottawa pitcher. "He goes into the box with a smile and a bushel of confidence. Clothes don't make a man and a fancy delivery don't make a pitcher. But London fans will take off their hats to the rural gent who has won 14 straight for Ottawa. He's the best all round pitcher that has ever graced the Canadian League.

Harry Brant, the London shortstop will rejoin the Cockney team next week. He was suspended by Manager Bowerman for listlessness.

Fred Applegate, formerly on the pitching staff of the Toronto Maple Leafs, has been signed by Manager Needham of Guelph.

The Ottawa Senators are shortly to be without the services of "Casey" Dolan, the big first sacker, he having been offered another position at his home town.

STAN CRESWELL MAKING GOOD AT NEWMARKET

Mr. Stanley Cresswell pitcher in the Newmarket baseball league is spending a few days in the city. "Stan" is well satisfied with his job. His arm is not overworked, as only two games a week are played.

Recently he received an offer to go to North Porcupine and pitch one game for the team of that place, but was unable to get away owing to the day being one on which Newmarket played. He was offered a tidy sum, and his expenses for the one day.

The class of ball in Newmarket is very fair, but is rather tame after being used to, even the Canadian League games.

There is one other twirler on the team to which Creswell is attached.

The league is supported by the factories of the town, of which there are four and the town also has a team in the league, thereby producing some very interesting ball. He has won all of the five games in which he has worked for Newmarket.

Smith's Inkstand.

An interesting literary relic has been acquired by the town of Kirkcaldy, the "lang toun" of Fifeshire, Scotland. This is the inkstand made use of by Adam Smith while engaged in writing his great work, "The Wealth of Nations." The inkstand passed into the keeping of Adam of Blair Adam—Sir Walter Scott's friend—after the death of Adam Smith; it was afterwards acquired by John Fergus, for some time a member of Parliament for Fifeshire, and from him it passed to the father of the lady who has now handed it over to its original owner's native town.

SIR WILLIAM MEREDITH.

CHURCHILL WILL ANNOUNCE PLANS

London, July 17.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—It is now authoritatively stated that Winston Churchill will on Monday make an important pronouncement on the British course of action in view of the German naval program. He'll deal fully with the policy of the Government regarding the fleet in the home waters and Mediterranean, and he'll go out for a united Imperial navy. He has consulted the highest authorities, Lord Fisher, Lord Charles Beresford, and in addition, his chief professional adviser, Admiral Sir Francis Bridgeman.

The supplementary estimates which Churchill will introduce, are expected to contain a provision for the addition of men to the whole fleet, and the acceleration of certain ships for this year's program, and a special program for the Mediterranean.

SIR EDWARD GREY MAKES STATEMENT

London, July 17.—With a view to heading off attempts at premature and perhaps provocative discussion of the Panama Canal question, Joseph King, the Liberal member of Parliament for North Somerset, was put up in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon to ask the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs: "Whether friendly representations are being made to the United States Government with the aim of securing generous treatment for such British shipping as shall pass through the Panama Canal."

Sir Edward Grey, Secretary of Foreign Affairs, in replying, said it seemed to the Government that some provisions of the bill now before the U. S. Senate were inconsistent with the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, and it was thought right to point out these objections.

Sir Edward Grey can now stall off would-be catechizers by saying he has nothing to add to yesterday's reply.

Mrs. William Shibley Dead.

Kingston, July 17.—Mrs. William Shibley, aged 84, died in Bath yesterday. She came from Ireland and settled on Amherst Island when it was a wilderness. She was the mother of Rev. Samuel Shibley, Kingston. Three other children survive.

Portsmouth Has "Big Eyes."

Kingston, July 17.—The council of the village of Portsmouth, desirous to encourage the extension of the city electric lighting service, has granted the free use of all streets within the municipality for installation of the service.

DRUNK IN DRY TOWN

Chatham, July 17.—Unless they pay fines of $20 imposed upon them by Magistrate O'Neil of Merlin, William Bellaire and Joseph Phillips, both of Chatham, must remain in the county jail for 15 days. They were arrested while intoxicated in the local option town of Merlin and professed to be unable to pay the penalties.

Bellaire was arrested in his bed by High Constable Peters, and Phillips tried to make his escape in a livery rig, but he was overtaken by Constable Hall, who went after him in his automobile.

There was much drinking in Merlin and vicinity and the authorities are trying to put a stop to it, though they seem to be in the dark as to the location of "blind tigers."

TWELVE INSANE FROM THE HEAT

Naples, July 17.—When the steamship Canada, from New York, arrived there yesterday twelve of her American passengers were in the ship's hospital insane from intense heat. They were taken to Naples asylum.

Kingston Painters Obstinate.

Kingston, July 17.—The painters' stirke is not settled yet and employers are seeking non-union men to do the work. The painters are holding out for their original demands.

PREMIER BORDEN SAYS THAT COLONIES ARE NOT WARDS

Canadian Prime Minister in a Notable Speech Says Canada Must Have a Say in the Empire's Councils of War—Provide Aid When the Time of Danger is Near.

London, July 17.—Amid prolonged and renewed applause Hon. R. L. Borden declared in Hon. Lewis Harcourt's room in the House of Parliament at Westminster last night: "In time of peril, we believe every dominion, including Canada, will give a response not less loyal and less earnest than that of the Motherland herself. One realizes, however, that when the day of peril comes, the day for effective preparation may have passed. I conceive that those who accept a share in and responsibilty for the definite security of this vast Empire can no longer be considered wards by self-constituted guardians."

The occasion was the inaugural dinner of the Empire Parliamentary Association to Premier Borden, with Alfred Lyttleton presiding and with a most distinguished gathering of invited guests.

In proposing the toast of overseas members of the association Mr. Lyttleton in passing remarked it was fortunate for French-Canadians they had developed the genius of the race and pursued liberty under the British flag, something that would have been difficult, if not impossible, had Canada been retained by France and fallen under the sway of the revolutionary movement in the Napoleonic periods.

Hon. Mr. Borden, who followed, noted the similiarity in the development of Parliamentary institutions overseas with those of the Mother Country, and then proceeded to develop the argument.

In the course of a striking utterance, Hon. Mr. Borden said that when Canada began to take part in Imperial defence then would conditions change and the overseas dominions necessarily be summoned to the councils of the central authority in foreign affairs and naval matters.

He said the mother of Parliaments was in truth and fact one Imperial Parliament. In the highest sense that status ceased to exist. The Parliament was elected upon issues chiefly local and domestic. A Parliament which expends a large portion of its time and energy of purely domestic concern could hardly be regarded as an Imperial Parliament in the highest, truest sense. The complete autonomy which has been granted great dominions has given them practically complete control of their own affairs, and as a result the crown becomes the strongest, if not the chief, tie which unites the dominions with the Motherland and preserves the integrity and cohesion of the Empire.

In one important respect the Parliament and the Government of the Mother Country still control the relations and destinies of the Empire. The policy which settles the issues of peace and war for the entire Empire was formulated and carried out by a Government responsible only to the House of Commons elected by the inhabitants of the United Kingdom.

So long as British supremacy on the seas was unchallenged, so long as that supremacy was maintained by Britain alone, there was little cause to criticize this condition which was supposed to be based on the theory of guardianship or trusteeship. The dominions in the meantime have been developing their resources and been expending money on public works ad providing means of transportation.

Then followed with prolonged applause, the passage first quoted. He closed with the eloquent peroration: "The next ten or twenty years are critical in the history of the Empire. They may be even decisive in its future. God grant, whether we be of these mother islands or of the dominions, that we may so bear ourselves that the future shall not hold to our lips the chalice of our vain regret for an opportunity neglected and dead."

Hon. Mr. Foster and Speaker Lowther spoke, the former amid great applause.

TORONTO WORLD REPORTER HAD ACCESS TO BANK PAPERS

Important Testimony Given at the Investigation This Morning—Warrant for Dr. Nesbitt's Arrest Not Properly Entered and the Doctor Escaped to Chicago.

Special to the Review.

Toronto, July 17.—Donald Yeats, former stenographer of Inspector of Dectectives Duncan, Toronto, now secretary to Chief Cuddy, Calgary, testified before the Farmers' Bank Commission this morning that a representative of the Toronto World had access to the bank papers in possession of the police.

The Court Clerk who has charge of issuing warrants, testified that the one for Beattie Nesbitt had not been entered up in accordance with custom and consequently the police stations had not been notified of the warrant in proper time.

TRAVERS STILL SAYS HE LEFT THE CHECK FOR RYAN

Ex-Bank Manager Says He Does Not Know Whether Mr. Ryan Got It or Not, But Is Sure He Left It—Most of the Time at the Enquiry Is Taken Up With the Details of Issuing the Nesbitt Warrant.

Toronto, July 17.—Declaring that Peter Ryan had met him in Mr. Clarkson's office in June last, and had told him to be brave that he was looking after his interests, W. R. Travers added to his testimony at the hearing of the Farmers' Bank inquiry at Osgoode Hall yesterday afternoon. The bulk of the time of the afternoon session was taken up in an effort to find out just what lay behind Inspector Duncan's evidence, in which he said that he had been sent on a wild goose chase when he went to Muskoka to arrest Dr. Beattie Nesbitt. On this point, Col. Denison, Crown Attorney Corley, Supt. Rogers of the provincial police, and Curran Morrison, clerk of the police court were heard. Supt. Rogers declared that he had had no official notification of the issue of any warrant until several days after he had read of the doctor's flight across the border. He was first notified by the crown attorney, but was not notified by the police until March.

Crown Attorney Corley said that Inspector Detective Duncan had discussed the possibility of issuing a warrant with him before he consented to allow it to be issued, but that at that time no evidence sufficient to justify the issue of a warrant was submitted to him. He said that Inspector Duncan quoted the county judge as being of the opinion that the evidence was sufficient, but that he and the deputy attorney-general differed with them. Supt. Rogers denied all knowledge of any warning having been given to Dr. Nesbitt.

At the morning session Messrs. J. R. Stratton, Dr. Nesbitt, A. S. Lown and Lindsay denied being the men who had suggested to Tarvers that he had better take the three thousand dollar check, which is still missing, to Ottawa to give to Peter Ryan. Travers had previously sworn that he thought it was one of these men who had advised him. At the afternoon session, Travers reaffirmed his statement that he had left the check at the Russell House in Ottawa addressed to Mr. Ryan although he said that he did not know whether he had ever got the check, and he had never spoken to Mr. Ryan about it before or since.

Mr. Ryan again denied all knowledge of the check and explained a $3,000 entry in his bank account as a loan from J. G. Scott, master of titles. This was confirmed by Mr. Scott.

Col. Denison, police magistrate, was the first witness called at the afternoon session. He was asked as to the system of marking exhibits in the police court. He said they were marked by the clerk and kept in the clerk's office, but if the case went on to a higher court the papers would be sent on to the clerk of that court.

The hearing was then abjourned till 11 o'clock this morning, when the guard who was with Travers in Mr. Clarkson's office in June last, when he says Mr. Ryan told him he would look after his interests, will likely be called.

LE CANADA RAPS ORANGE ORDER

Montreal, July 17.—Le Canada, in an editorial article yesterday morning, quotes The Toronto Telegram's report of the Orange celebrations in Ontario, and makes it an excuse for a very severe criticism of the Ontario members of the Orange Order.

"It is easy to perceive the sentiments which animate this fanatical society, with which some French-Canadians, misled and deceived, allied themselves last September to overthrow Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The Telegram shows the true spirit of the society, which counts among its members Col. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, and Dr. Sproule, M.P., who was for a long time its grand master."

Hubert Latham Killed.

Paris, June 17.—Hubert Latham, the aviator, was killed by a buffalo June 7, while hunting near the source of the Nile, according to a cable message received by the Government yesterday from the Governor-General of French equatorial Africa. A Government representative broke the news to his mother, for whose sake Latham gave up flying some time ago.

Latham was one of the pioneers of aviation in France. He was a skillful mechanic as well as a daring pilot of heavier-than-air craft, and up to the time of his retirement from the sport of flying, took part in every important aviation contest held in Europe, in many of which he was a victor. He was well known in America, where he accomplished many great feats.

It was on a rhinocerous-hunting expedition that he went to Africa, whence his body will be brought home for burial.

MURDERED GAMBLER WAS WELL KNOWN IN MONTREAL

Herman Rosenthal Once Attempted to Revive Gambling in That City and is Said to Have Offered $100,000 for Police Protection.

Montreal, July 17.—Rosenthal, the gambler murdered in New York in such a sensational way was in Montreal two years ago in connection with an effort to revive gambling. He was prepared to spend half a million dollars, and it is said offered $100,000 for police protection. He made overtures for the purchase of a fashionable house on Sherbrooke street, with furniture at a cost of $125,000. Local gamblers defeated his object.

New York, July 17.—Through the alleged confession of a man under arrest, the names of seven men are believed to be in the hands of the police to-day as participants in the sensational killing early yesterday of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, just as he was presumably about to make important additions to his recent disclosures of alleged partnership between high police officials and members of the gambling fraternity. As a result of the new material in the hands of the officials, additional arrests are expected to follow.

According to District Attorney Whitman, Rosenthal was about to name gamblers who would be able to corroborate his assertions regarding police collusion with men of his law-banned calling.

That such a raking up in gambling circles was not relished by men who might come to be involved was apparent, it develops from talk among members of "inner circles" in the tenderloin which began as soon as word of Rosenthal's purpose was passed along. Threats were made Monday. It was declared that things would fare ill for Rosenthal if he continued to press his charges.

"If Rosenthal does not quit within the next few days we will 'get him and get him for keeps'," was a remark of a member of a poker party on an east side "association" outing on Sunday, reported by a man who declares he overheard it to District Attorney Whitman yesterday afternoon.

Up to a late hour the police had given no inkling of the man in custody, who had made the alleged confession. During the day three men were arrested in connection with the murder of Rosenthal. Eugene Libbie, part owner, it is alleged, of the atomobile containing the party of six men who a little more than an hour before daylight were driven up in front of the Hotel Metropole, and from which came the volley of shots which stretched the gambler dead upon the sidewalk as he stepped from the building, was one of the trio. The police declare they are assured that he was the driver of the motor car, and they have charged him with homicide. His partner in ownership of the machine is William Shapiro, who also is a prisoner—held as a material witness. So is a man whose identity the police have been hiding under the name of "John Doe," and who was declared to have been in the neighborhood of the hotel at the time of the shooting.

Instead of fearing harm at the hands of the gambling fraternity, Rosenthal's chief dread, it is declared, was police enmity because of his charge against a member of the police.

Rosenthal left his home late Monday night, telling his wife that he had an appointment to meet Becker at the Hotel Metropole at Broadway and 43rd street. Rosenthal reached the hotel, where he was well known, some time after midnight, and sat down alone in the lobby, smoking a cigar and whistling as he watched the usual midnight crowd in Times square outside.

Shortly before 2 o'clock a slate-colored automobile drove up in front. One of its six passengers got out, and walked into the hotel, beckoning to Rosenthal.

"Herman," he called, "come out here. Someone wants to see you."

Rosenthal, without hesitation, walked out.

He had reached a point not more than a dozen feet from the door, when a volley of shots rang out from the slate-colored car. Four of them found their target and Rosenthal fell dead instantly with a bullet in his brain.

Almost before the crowd on the sidewalk and in the lobby realized that a shot had been fired, the touring car was under way and disappearing in the direction of Fifth avenue.

Acute Dyspepsia

Restoration of Stomach Power Comes Quickly With the Right Medicine.

"My food seemed to decompose in my stomach," writes Mr. Ralph Clemmons, of Newbridge, P.Q. "I had a stomach that failed in some way to perform its work. Digestion seemed more or less arrested and I grew thin, yellow, nervous. The stomach became distended and impeded apparently the action of the heart, for often at night it would do great stunts. At times I would vomit a mucous mass, and at these times my head ached most terribly. A friend, who had been cured of a similar condition, advised me to take Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly, which I did. The result in my case was simply marvelous. Dr. Hamilton's Pills removed the cause, strengthened the stomach, excited the liver to normal action, the kidneys were released of excessive work. Health soon glowed within me. I can now eat, sleep, and live like a live man."

Be advised—Use Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they are sure to do you good. 25c per box, at all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

THE TROUBLE IN TORONTO

Scientists tell us that lightning does not strike twice in the same place probably for the reason that it seldom needs to, but the transmission line of the Electric Development Company from Niagara to Toronto seems to afford an irresistible attraction for the thunderbolt, although the devastating shaft is aimed at different points of the structure. For the sixth time within a space of ten days that company has been put out of business for hours at a time and all depending upon it for power or light have been left helpless and the street car service has been stalled at times when traffic was naturally heaviest. In the meantime the Hydro-Electric system has escaped all damage from the elements and there has been no inconvenience experienced by its patrons.

An apparently satisfactory reason for this was given the other day by Hon. Adam Beck when he stated that the Hydro-Electric's immunity from disaster was due to superior construction. When the electric commission built their line from Niagara Falls they were careful to secure the best that was available and no details were slighted. At that time a portion of the public were of the opinion that too much was being spent on the plant but the subsequent satisfactory service rendered by it has fully justified the expenditure.

One important result of the recent trouble in Toronto will, from present indications, be that the Hydro-Electric will be left in practical possession of the field in Toronto. Acting Mayor Church has already made a move looking to the expropriation of the Street Car Company's property on the ground that the Company has forfeited all right to its franchise by failing to run cars according to agreement. The railway people could probably save themselves from further trouble on this score by making arrangements to secure power from the Hydro-Electric in the event of such accidents as those of the past few days.

Private corporations and citizens who secure power and light from the unfortunate company will not much longer submit to interrupted and unreliable service. One or two more such occurrences will see the beginning of a shifting of patronage and in the end the city will be the gainer as possessing a source of power and light that has been perfectly satisfactory since it was first put into operation. Wherever the Hydro-Electric system has been installed the most beneficial results have been obtained where it has enjoyed a monopoly of the field, and the same is true of all public utilities that are under municipal ownership.

THE CRY FOR WIDER MARKETS

Saskatchewan is not Canada, any more than the Tooley street tailors were the people of England. While the vote of last week represents the opinions of what was after all, a small majority of the electors, judging from the entire vote on each side, and not by the results in the different constituencies. It is no indication of public sentiment in the other provinces of the Dominion.

Saskatchewan was of similar political faith last September, and ten months is too short a time in which to hope for the repentance and conversion of a province, especially when that province has been so coddled by politicians, that it has come to regard itself as a potentiality out of all proportion to its true importance. It is one of the spoiled children of the Confederation, and is possessed of the petulance which is peculiar to the adolescent period of individuals and commonwealths. Like a child crying for the light, and with no language but a cry, it raises its voice for wider markets, a new designation for the dead and buried issue which in life was known as Reciprocity.

What would wider markets mean for the people of Saskatchewan, in the way of increased material prosperity? One of their chief complaints is that they are paying too much for their agricultural implements and they want that portion of the tariff broken down. Ploughs and binders are the chief implements which they use and these are now almost entirely manufactured in Hamilton by branch concerns of the corporations engaged in similar lines of industries in the United States. Put plough and binders and all other agricultural articles that are used in the equipment of a farm, on the free list, and whence will come any benefit to the purchaser? What would be the difference between buying from the parent concern in Chicago or the branch factory in Hamilton? Would the two enter into competition with each other to secure the farmers' trade by a cut in price? Would not the inevitable result be the closing down of the branches to Canada's general and Hamilton's particular financial loss?

Sir Wilfred Laurier listened to the farmers' tale of distress and put binder twine on the free list. This move, however, was all to no purpose seeing that it not only failed to give the user cheaper twine, but crushed out of existence every binder twine factory in Canada except three.

The farmers are wont to refer to the International Harvester Company as a trust. It has for political purposes been so stigmatised in the United States and been made the subject of governmental investigation, with a view to its dissolution. So far the probe has discovered nothing more startling than the fact that the company, since its organisation, has never paid a higher dividend than seven per cent. and the most hypercritical cannot reasonably complain of that rate of profit on a business venture which is considerably lower than any western farmer is earning on his own investments.

Every section has its drawbacks, every individual has his troubles and grievances but the western wheat grower, with all his plaints, is really the most favored and prosperous individual in the entire community of provinces. His wheat today brings a higher price in Winnipeg than the prevailing price in either Chicago or Minneapolis.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The police of New York have in the past been charged with every crime except that of deliberate murder, and now that has been added to the list.

Let the small boy go into the river if he so desires, and it is safe to wager that he does, so long as due precautions are taken. This is the only way in which he can learn to swim. Besides it is the venturesome youth who makes the successful man.

That Senator Lorimer is the first member of the United States Senate to be expelled for buying his seat is no sure indication that he is the only sinner in this regard. His misfortune was that he bribed his constituents so brazenly that he was caught at it.

"Greater love has no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friend." Harry Hayward, of Peterborough, and Edward Haigh, of Hamilton, gave practical illustration of the fact that there are men today ready to exemplify the highest type of human affection.

An exchange seems to fear that the reporting of baseball games will disfigure the English language by the introduction of picturesque phrases. A mode of speech that has withstood the assaults and corruptions that has assailed the mother tongue has nothing to fear from any quarter.

The Liberal party is once more likely to be lured from the straight path by false gods. Mistaking the voice of Saskatchewan for the verdict of the nation, Sir Wilfred Laurier and his followers are to come out squarely, it is said, for free trade. Experience along that line since 1878 should teach them that they have never won an election on that issue.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

¶ There is a deal of difference in how you handle the range or furnace. Our long experience tells us that fact, and we are ready to advise any in doubt as to the best way to make use of coal as fuel.

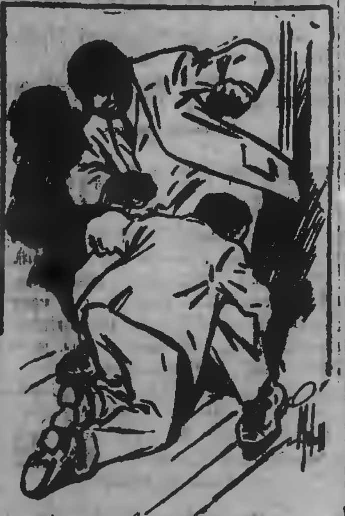
"Seems to be quite a collection of choice ghosts around here, me lads," remarked Officer Hogan, while his partner was giving such aid as he could to the bleeding negro. "This little brown party seems to take ye for wan, an' it's meself as made a fine spook by the door. Flynn an' me was standin' in th' shadows, waitin' for youse two to give the signal, when we see these two well-dressed people comin' to th' door. As luck wud have it, I had taken off me hat an' was rubbin' me forehead with a handkerchief, when they chanced to spy me. Forthwith they tuk me for the ghost that loafs be night around these premises—the ghost av a gent without a head. All they cud see, I'm supposin', was me manly frame up to the neck, an' they certainly wint nutty with th' horror av it. 'The ghost, the ghost!' they begin to yell an' beat upon the door. Ye opened it—an' we got in just in time to have a hand in an elegant little battle. It's glad I am I was a ghost, for this felly might have put up some argyment if he'd had his proper senses."



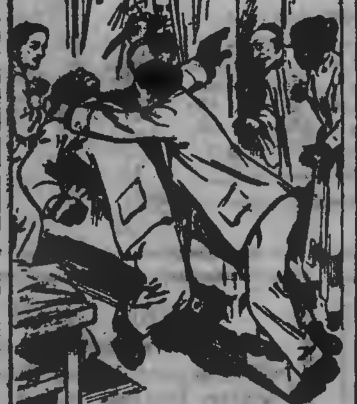
HE STROVE FRANTICALLY TO DRAG THE GIANT DOWN.

Hogan, as he spoke, snapped handcuffs on the well-dressed man who had come stumbling in when the door sprung open. The prisoner was still all unnerved, and offered no objection, while the woman who had entered with him cowered in a corner, also utterly overcome

"A good catch this," exulted Officer Hogan. "The man is Jerry Killen, wanted for half a dozen clever con jobs, an' the woman is Bessie Donovan, a lovely little bit av a panelworker. I knew that Jerry smoked, but never knew this was where he came to do it. Cheer up, Jerry, old scout—I was the ghost. No other will harm ye."

Flynn looked up from the prostrate negro. "The black boy isn't so badly stuck," said he. "Give him a little care an' he'll be fit as a fiddle in a week or so. How about the little brown wan? It was the brown wan that stuck the black wan, wasn't it, boys?"

Aguilar was still unconscious. He tossed and moaned upon the floor, and Flynn, after satisfying himself that the Filipino was unharmed save from fright and a few blows on the head, tied him up with strips torn from the sheets of a bunk. Hogan, bending over big Sam, drew from his pockets a bunch of miscellaneous trinkets, policy slips and some crumpled currency.



SOMETHING FLASHED IN THE BLUE MURK OF THE ROOM.

"No sign av your belt here, lads," he announced, disappointedly.

"Look in the brown wan's pockets," suggested Flynn, and Brockett, thrusting eager hands into Aguilar's apparel, gave a shout of sheer delight as his fingers closed upon the well-remembered leather. Out came the belt and the boys, with shaking hands, opened its compartments.

"Everything present for duty, lads?" questioned Officer Hogan.

"Everything except about $200 of my money," replied the joyous Brockett. "The big fellow probably spent that celebrating. I think I understand now just how a man feels when he has been pardoned on the morning of his hanging."

"I'm dommed glad," heartily spoke Officer Hogan, while both policemen wrung the youngsters' hands. "We've all done well this night, an' if we were drinkin' men it's sure some blowout we'd have for the occasion. What's that, me boy? Money? Ah, put it back. Put it back. The prizes we have gobbled this night are worth more to us than all the money ye could hand us, an' we were lookin' for no graft on this particular evenin'."

CHAPTER XXI.

The missing property safe in the hands of its rightful custodians—through sheer good fortune, not through skill or Sherlock Holmes sagacity—and only a limited space of time remaining for the journey to the Rio Grande, it was only natural that the young messengers should wish to hurry on their road. They did not interrogate either the wounded negro or the captive Filipino, much as they would have desired to do so, for neither was in condition to stand an interview. They did manage, however, to get this information, through the good offices of Flynn: that it was not the Filipino from whom the giant African had wrested the belt in the corridor of the hotel. How big Sam had fallen in with Aguilar, how the islander probed the secret of the negro's sudden affluence, and how he also learned of the more valuable contents of the belt—these were mysteries reserved for later solution. The boys were glad enough, under present circumstances, to regain their property and be on their way.

They were standing near the sergeant's desk in the police station on the following morning, bidding goodbys to the big officers who had done so much to aid them, when a little bunch of "harness bulls" came in, hustling a clump of intoxicated prisoners to the cells below. Two or three of the captives could hardly keep their feet; the group swayed and weaved from side to side like some huge, broken-legged animal, and the boys were almost trampled under the uncertain feet of the drunks and their guardians. As they broke ground to get free from the crowd, Brockett thought a hand sought his pocket, and, warned by the painful memory of recent happenings, snatched quickly at it. He caught nothing. Hurriedly thrusting his hand into his pocket, he brought up a scrap of paper, dingy and thumb-marked, but criss-crossed with the sign of a familiar code.

Stepping over to the window he read, scrawled upon the dirty paper, these hieroglyphs:

"L TC A SH FA SH TC FA PO SH
3BH Pos T SH A TC W SH PO Fin R
3A TO 3BH Pos E L SH E L SH.

R TC E TO HR E Fin SH TC E W TC
Fin TO SH TO HR PO PO SB Fin W
TO 3BH SH W HR E L TO W Fin R
TO HR TC E L."

"Some people have more luck than sense. Continue on route till further instructions," Brockett translated.

The adventures which had their climax in the opium joint gave Brockett and Solano plenty of material for discussion as they rolled out on a southwestern train. This time the messengers made no attempt to disguise their course, but went straight to the station, bought their tickets and climbed aboard. Instead of purchasing the red or yellow slips which license you to toss about in the berths of the Pullman, however, they decided to stay in the seats of the day-coach and get what sleep they could, while alternate three-hour watches were agreed on as the best way of fending off any possible trouble. "The man who really wants to get you," remarked Solano, sagely, "has a much better chance in a Pullman than in an ordinary day-coach, and you take ten times as many risks for your extra money."

Before beginning the night watches the youngsters traversed the whole train, passing through the sleepers on their way to the dining car, and satisfied themselves that none of their enemies bad started on the same journey. No German nobleman, big, gruff, and devoted to his kaiser; no cat-like Japanese, no slinking Filipinos, were to be seen from smoker to diner, and, as none of the berths were made up early, there was no possibility of a concealed antagonist crouching behind the green curtains. After supper they returned to their red-plushed perches, and spent three hours discussing the happenings at Chicago, or the adventures yet to come.

Solano fished from some inner pocket a tiny Anglo-Spanish text-book, and urged its importance upon his companion. "You may need to know a few words of the language before very long," he insisted, "and now is as good a time to begin learning as any."

"Why not let me carry the book?" responded Brockett. "Then, if a Mexican starts any conversation, I can simply dig up the book and read him the proper answer."

"Good idea," assented Solano, "except in emergency cases. Suppose a large, thick revolutionist, of the bonehead variety, asks you to give a quick account of yourself, and has a rifle pointed at you while he is asking? And suppose, also, that he gives you, in Spanish, a time limit of two minutes to make good? Are you going to resurrect the book, begin with the sentence, 'The dog of my uncle has bitten the left leg of the cow belonging to my father,' and go down the pages till you find the proper sentence for the exigency?"

Brockett chortled, to the intense annoyance of an elderly lady across the aisle, and seized the book. He immersed himself in its pages till ten o'clock, when it was time for the first watch to begin—a duty which had fallen to Brockett by the flipping of a penny. Closing the book, he leaned back against the plush, resolved to keep his eyes open and give Solano a fair chance for his three-hour nap—and discovered, as he gazed on his companion, that the Cuban had stolen an indefinite space of time upon him and was already sound asleep.

Platinum.

Platinum, one of the most useful of the metals in many ways, was named by the Spaniards on account of its silvery color, plata signifying silver. It was found in the auriferous sands of the river Pinto, in South America, and was unknown in Europe prior to 1741, when Don Antonio Ulloa announced its existence in his narrative of a voyage to Peru. It was not until 1820 that platinum was rendered malleable and ductile by a Dr. William Hyde of Wallaston. Platinum is largely employed in the manufacture of chemical utensils, owing to its immunity to the effects of heat, acid, etc.

TWO WOMEN TESTIFY

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did For Their Health—Their own Statements Follow.

Haliburton, P.E.I.:—"I had a doctor examine me and he said I had falling of the womb, so I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has done me a lot of good. All the bearing-down pains have vanished. I have gained ten pounds in weight, the discharge is all gone, and I feel better than I have for a long time. I think any woman is foolish to suffer as I did for the sake of a few dollars.

"You can use my letter as a testimonial. It may encourage other poor women who suffer as I did to use your Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. Geo. Collicutt, Haliburton, Lot 7, P.E.I.

Read What This Woman Says:

New Moorefield, Ohio.—"I take great pleasure in thanking you for what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. I had bearing down pains, was dizzy and weak, had pains in lower back and could not be upon my feet long enough to get a meal. As long as I laid on my back I would feel better, but when I would get up those bearing down pains would come back, and the doctor said I had female trouble. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was the only medicine that helped me and I have been growing stronger ever since I commenced to take it. I hope it will help other suffering women as it has me. You can use this letter."—Mrs. Cassie Lloyd, New Moorefield, Clark Co., Ohio.

The Question of Introductions.

The question of introducing seems to be a perpetual worry to some people. The following suggestions may be helpful:

The first thing the introducer should remember is to pronounce the names distinctly. A rather distressing occasion that gave a feeling of discomfort and dislike on one side and an agonizing remembrance on the other was where a lady on being introduced to another made a remark concerning a third party which, while not derogatory, might have been somewhat more complimentary. To her dismay the second lady remarked: "Yes, I have noticed that peculiarity in Margaret. She ought to break herself of it. She is my sister, you know."

Of course lady No. 1 did not know, but there existed a coolness forever thereafter. If the names had been distinctly pronounced the incident could not have occurred.

It is an accepted fact that each individual is not to be introduced to all those present where an affair is at all large—only to a few immediately at hand who will, most likely, in turn introduce her to others. It is also an accepted fact that if a guest is departing just as another is arriving they need not be introduced unless there is reason for presuming they are to meet in the future, so an introduction is superfluous.

A young woman is always presented to an older, an unmarried to a married woman, a man to a woman unless it be a distinctive case where some distinguished official high in standing is the guest of honor, when both ladies and gentlemen are presented to him.

A young man is presented to an older one, and men always shake hands, whereas this need not be followed unless desired by two or more women introduced.

A hostess makes her greeting the more cordial by shaking hands with her guests. It seems more hospitable, but it is not at all obligatory. Some tactful remark as to mutual acquaintances or neighborhoods or possibly some taste for "Shakespeare and the musical glasses" helps to break the ice when strangers are introduced. A tactful hostess will take a young man to a group of girls, introduce him to each separately and leave him, knowing they will "do the rest."

Engagement Fetes.

Pink is the proper color for an engagement luncheon. Since every one delights in strewing the path of a bride elect with roses, these flowers make the most suitable decoration for the table. For the rest the arrangements may be simple or elaborate, in accordance with the tastes of the bride and with her means or those of her parents.

She and her family take the initiative in announcing the engagement. Often their friends are asked to call on one or more afternoons—the Thursdays of a month, for instance, when the bride and her mother will be at home. It is usual to serve afternoon tea with cake or sandwiches, or both. These affairs, however, should be simple and informal. The groom's relatives and friends are, of course, asked and should make it a point to come. If the parents of the young man live in the same city as those of the bride they call upon the latter at an early date. They usually give a dinner also or show hospitality in some form to their son's fiancee and her parents. The latter ask them in return.

The friends of the engaged couple give entertainments in their honor, luncheons, theater parties or dinners, as they find convenient.

If the bride elect is a business woman and has no free afternoon in the week she should arrange to be at home on Sunday afternoon to receive her friends. If she has religious scruples on this point, then she should name one or more evenings when they may call.

Her young friends may, if they please, send her a teacup and saucer or some small and inexpensive gift. Wedding presents have become so expensive and are such a tax on the friends of the young couple that all sensible people should oppose the innovation of giving engagement presents in addition.

Father, Mother, Sister, Brother, All Should Use Parisian Sage

Prevents Baldness--Banishes Dandruff—Stops Falling Hair and Itching Scalp

PARISIAN SAGE is a family hair tonic and dressing that will do much good in every home.

The man who uses PARISIAN SAGE if only occasionally will never grow bald. Baldness is caused by dandruff germs which dig down into the the roots of the hair, devour its nourishment and cause the root to die and the hair to fall and thin out.

MONEY BACK DANDRUFF REMOVER

PARISIAN SAGE is a scientific hair remedy that not only kills the dandruff germs, but gives the hair roots just the same nourishment that nature gives it.

PARISIAN SAGE first kills the germs; then nourishes the weakened hair roots and causes a growth of healthy hair.

This same nourishment (PARISIAN SAGE) causes the hair to grow vigorous, which means that the hair becomes full of life and lustre, and grows radiant and beautiful.

Thousands are wasting time, losing hair and growing bald because they are using superficial tonics. While they may clean the scalp and make it feel refreshed, they do not get to the root of the hair where the real destroyer of hair, the pernicious dandruff germs, thrives and multiplies.

Try PARISIAN SAGE for all hair trouble; it means death to the germs; life to the hair. It is pleasant to use and so harmless that it can be used by every member of the family from the oldest to the little tot.

YOU CAN BE ABSOLUTELY SURE OF VALUES

If you carefully read the store advertisements and follow them in your buying.

Merchants advertise certain lines because they know these lines will advertise their stores. Because there is something about certain goods, they are put in conspicuous places and the people are told about them. It may be the exclusiveness or newness of design, it may be an unusual quality, it may be an attractive price.

But there is at least one definite, sure reason why a merchant advertises an article and is willing to stake the reputation of his store upon it.

Therefore, when you see an article advertised in THE REVIEW, depend upon it, that article is good value, as good value as can be obtained in that particular store.

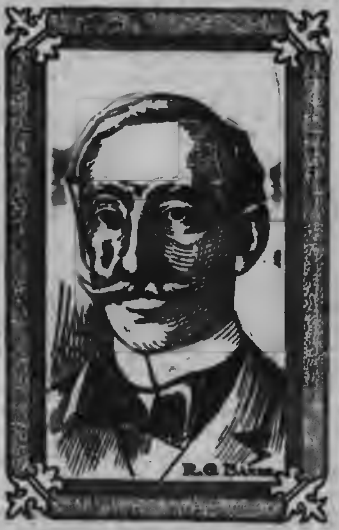
FRIEND OF LATE KING

SIR EDWARD SASSOON DIES FROM AUTO ACCIDENT.

He Was the Second of a Great House Founded by David Sasseon, an Armenian In Business First In Persia and Later In Bombay—Father Founded a Huge Fortune and an Important Family.

After a long illness, the death has taken place of Sir Edward Sassoon, Unionist member for the Hythe Division in the British Parliament, and one of the late King Edward's closest personal friends. Sir Edward, who was only recently predeceased by his cousin, Mr. Arthur Sassoon, met with a serious accident in January last at Cannes, while motoring to the golf links. The car encountered a restive horse, and though the chauffeur took a sharp turn to the left in the hope of avoiding the animal, there was a collision of great violence. The car, after striking the horse, ran into a tree, and, rebounding, fell over a six-foot embankment. Sir Edward received a terrible shaking, and his face was badly cut. Deceased was enormously wealthy. The foundation of his fortune was laid by David Sassoon, who fled to Bombay from Persia, where, during the Armenian troubles, he was in danger of assassination. In Bombay he founded the house of Sassoon, the only important firm not in the hands of Parsees. About 1868, after the death of David Sassoon, his son, the late Sir Albert, then known as Abdallah, came to England in company with his half-brothers Reuben and Arthur. Sir Edward Sassoon was a son of Sir Albert, succeeding to the title in 1895. He was educated at London University. In 1887 he married Aline, daughter of Baron Gustave de Rothschild. She died in February, 1909. He was an honorary major in the Duke of Cambridge's Hussar Yeomanry. Sir Edward resided for two years in China, and gave much study to Oriental problems. He was also an authority on finance and bimetallism, and was much interested in the subject of Imperial telegraphs. He emphasized his connection with the East by the ownership of two residences in India, Garden Reach, Poona, and Sans Souci, at Bombay. He is succeeded in the baronetcy by Mr. Philip Albert Gustave David Sassoon, who was born in 1888. His only daughter is Sybil Rachel, who was born in 1894. Sir Edward Sassoon's fine residence in Park lane, London, at which his death took place, was designed and built by Mr. Barney Barnato. Now it is all a modern mansion should be, but in its original state it showed a want of architectural refinement. At the last election Sir Edward was returned without opposition for Hythe, which he had represented since 1899. His son has been elected at the bye-election to fill the vacant seat.



LATE SIR EDWARD SASSOON, M.P.

Boiled Alive.

In English statutes of the sixteenth century the punishment set down for the crime of murdering by poison was boiling alive, and a girl was actually executed in that ghastly fashion. In 1538 Father Stone of Canterbury suffered the same death. A curious account is in existence which gives the amount paid "for two men who set the kettle and parboiled him" and "to the women that scoured the kettle." The sentence was not always carried out with so much ferocity, for culprits were sometimes hanged before being boiled. In one case it is recorded that a man was first hanged, then boiled and then quartered.

Passed Along.

An old woman was once pouring a tirade into the ear of Charles Lamb more remarkable in length than substance. Observing that the noted essayist was fast lapsing into a state of oblivion, she aroused him by remarking in a loud voice:

"I'm afraid, Mr. Lamb, you are deriving no benefit from my observations."

"Well, madam," he replied, "I cannot say that I am, but perhaps the woman on the other side of me is, for they go in one ear and out the other."

A Dogs' Club.

A new club appealing to lovers of dumb animals is in the course of formation in Mayfair, under the patronage of many well-known people. A novel departure will be the dogs' cloak-room, consisting of premises, with attendants, which will be utilized for the purpose of taking charge of members' dogs when visiting the club. Boarding the animals at the club will be one of the features, and there will be a catering section where dogs can have their meals.

MR. STRATTON ONLY SLIGHTLY ACQUAINTED WITH TRAVERS

Farmers' Bank Investigation Resumed at Toronto With the Peterboro Financier on the Stand—Peter Ryan Again Denies the Receipt of the $3,000 Check.

The Farmers' Bank investigation was resumed at Toronto yesterday, and Commissioner Meredith and Attorney Hodgins renewed in vain their efforts to get any trace of the $3,0.0 check, which W. R. Travers swore at a previous session he had given to Peter Ryan, to secure his assistance in obtaining a charter from the Dominion Government, Mr. Ryan, W.J. Lindsay, J. R. Stratton and Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, all swore yesterday, that they knew nothing of the check, and Mr. Ryan was especially emphatic in his assertion that he had never received it.

Mr. Stratton's testimony was brief and, according to the Toronto News, was as follows—

When Mr. J. R. Stratton was called to the stand, he was asked by Mr. Hodgins if he had held any conversation with Travers prior to the latter's trip to Ottawa.

"I did not," replied Mr. Stratton.

"You know Mr. Ryan. Was his name mentioned."

I know him," replied the witness, "but his name was never mentioned to me by Mr. Travers."

The witness added that he knew Travers very slightly and that their meetings were rare.

The manager of the trust company in Toronto, with which Mr. Stratton is connected, testified at a former session of the investigation that Travers had been introduced to him by Mr. Stratton, and the result of the meeting was that Travers negotiated an $85,000 loan, which enabled him to secure the bank charter.

It would appear from the evidence, that Travers turned his "slight acquaintance" with the Peterboro financier to practical account Exchanges of courtesies between two citizens become high at $ 85,000 a visit. The atmosphere was chilly between the witnesses yesterday, and nothing more than slight acquaintances were acknowledged. Mr. J. Lindsay swore he did not know whether Peter Ryan was black or white and he could not understand why Travers mentioned his name in connection with that of the Toronto registrar.

Dr. Nesbitt repudiated the idea of intimate acquaintance between himself and Mr. Ryan, offering as a reason that while he himself is an Orangeman and a Conservative, Mr. Ryan is a Roman Catholic and a Grit. even though both were registrars.

A Generous Gift.

A valuable collection of Ontario plants has recently been presented to the department of botany of the University of Toronto by Principal William Scott of the Normal School, Toronto. There are about 5,000 sheets in all, thoroughly representative of the flora of certain parts of the province, particularly of the east and central south. This collection embodies the work of many years, done by Principal Scott during the recreation hours of his busy life. As Principal Scott is known to be a careful collector and a discriminating botanist, this latest contribution adds much to the working store of Ontario plants in the herbarium of the university.

THE DEAN OF EDITORS.

J. R. Dougall Has Fought Hard For His Convictions.

So many of our notable Canadians are men who merely make and spend money, and whose proudest contribution to social development is to help achieve a combine, that it is a relief to turn to an eminent Canadian who, though now seventy years of age, has probably never devoted the energies of a single day either to earning his living or to the making of money, says a writer in The Toronto Globe.

"Why, whatever manner of man is this?" it might be asked. "A gentleman of leisure in this strenuous Canada, where the rich men strive all the time to get richer, and the poor men strive all the time to get less poor!"

No—not a gentleman of leisure, but one of the busiest and most systematically hard-working men in the Dominion—John Redpath Dougall, the veteran editor and proprietor of The Montreal Witness, and the doyen of Canadian journalists.

A life of unremitting toil his has been, and still is, but toil devoted not to personal ends or to personal aggrandizement. Toil honestly, sincerely and unwaveringly devoted to a single end, which is to leave the world a little better than he found it.

John Dougall has all his life been a moulder of public opinion. And many a time during his life has he been like a voice crying in the wilderness. His ideas have been laughed at, scoffed at, called narrow-minded, bigoted. Such abuse has seldom ruffled the calm serenity of his mind. He has been content to "fight the good fight" for what he conceived to be the right, and to leave the issue in other hands. Yet I doubt if there is any man in Canada who can look back over his career with more genuine satisfaction at good accomplished, and of triumphs achieved, than Mr. Dougall.

He was one of the lucky individuals born to distinction. Fate made him the heir to a promising estate. It made him the proprietor of what was for long the most largely circulated and most powerful newspaper of a city that has grown by leaps and bounds. It put in his hands business interests accumulated by one of the most astute minds that Canada ever possessed. His father was nothing less than a business genius, and he left to John R. Dougall such opportunities as not one man in ten thousand has to achieve wealth or fame, or both.

But his father also made him the inheritor of a steadfast idealism. The elder Dougall, as soon as he had made the money to do it, founded a newspaper, the avowed purpose of which was to occupy its corner of the world "for God." He made it a good newspaper; kept it in the forefront as regards development and enterprise; made it the first paper in the world to be set up by the linotype machine; made it the first one-cent paper in its city; initiated the now universal practice in Canada of posting bulletins outside the office from hour to hour; led the way, in fact, in journalism within the sphere of influence of his paper.

The younger Dougall, more of a philosopher, but none the less an idealist, has continued this newspaper as an organ of the higher civilization, and into that organ he has put all the best thought and all the best energy of half a century of hard, unremitting labor.

Once his paper was put under the ban of the Roman Catholic Church, and nearly ruined thereby. Another time the whole plant was destroyed by fire—as a result, it has always been believed, of incendiarism. Another time the offices was partly blown up by dynamite. And on another occasion mysterious Black Hand threats were sent Mr. Dougall, with the object of getting him to call off a campaign against certain crooked schemes. Not a single one of these occurrences turned him by as much as a hair's-breadth from his line of action. Nor has he ever allowed expediency to dominate the policy of his paper.

Sea Salmon In Park.

A remarkable fact has just come to light in the capture of a specimen of landlocked salmon in Algonquin Park. The fish was sent to Ottawa to be examined by Prof. Prince, Dominion Commissioner of Fisheries, as many sportsmen at the park contended that it was not a salmon but a hybrid specimen. Prof. Prince pronounces the fish a true salmon and one of the finest he has seen. Its weight was nearly two pounds. The discovery is an important one for sportsmen in the province. At one time sea salmon were plentiful in Lake Ontario, but they have long been practically extinct despite the fact that they were planted in the lake and its tributaries. Since 1908 from 25,000 to 40,000 fry have been planted annually in Algonquin Park waters at the suggestion of Prof. Prince, and the result is now seen for the first time. Prof. Prince is of the opinion that the fish just captured is of the fry of 1909.

Building permits at Victoria, B.C., so far this year have passed the $5,000,000 mark.

RUBE MARQUARD ON HIS SUCCESS ON THE DIAMOND.

(By Rube Marquard.)

My success as a pitcher is due, first, to Manager John McGraw of the Giants, for his faith in me and in giving me a chance when nearly everybody else was calling me a failure, McGraw kept saying I was a pitcher when I sometimes almost doubted it myself, and so it is McGraw who is responsible for me being a member of a championship club.

And, naturally, that club has contributed very largely to my success. The boys behind me—each and every one—have helped me. I consider them the finest, gamest lot of ball players that ever made up a team. You may be sure I appreciate them.

I certainly had a hard time in the big league from the moment I was bought by Manager McGraw for $11,000 from Indianapolis in 1908, until last season, when I finally began winning. People seemed to expect more of me than of anyone else on account of the price paid for me by the club, and when I couldn't win for the Giants as I won for Indianapolis I was panned right and left.

All that only made me the more determined to make good, but it was a long pull. Of course, I was greatly gratified when I finally succeeded; I would hardly have been human if I hadn't.

It was Wilbert Robinson, the coach of the Giant pitchers, who really pushed me into my stride. "Robbie"—the best old boy in the world—took hold of me when I have didn't have much confidence in my ability to get 'em over when runners were on the bases. I would be fearful of losing control, so I would try to pull the ball right across the plate without anything on it. Then the batters would give me a fine lacing.

"Robbie" took that out of me in short order.

"You cut loose all the time, and never mind where it is going," he told me. "Aim for the plate, put your stuff on the ball and let 'er go," he said; and what's why I did.

With him coaching me constantly I soon found that I had control, and my "stuff" at the same time, and then I got confidence. I think "Robbie" is a wonderful adviser for a pitcher, and I owe a great deal to him.

HAS NEW BALL

One thing which contributes much to my work this year, in my judgment, is a new ball I have developthat I call the "turkey trot" This is the slow ball that someone named the "buzzard wing dip" not long ago.

When I first got to going good I was out after strike-out records, but after a game against Boston, when I fanned 14 men in eight innings and wore myself I quit that. They came on and gave me a beating in extra innings, because I was too weak to go through as a result of my play for a record. I now follow Christy Mathewson's system of depending upon my support to a great extent, and I consider that support the most dependable in the league.

The toughest pitcher for me—I mean the one who gives me the hardest fight—is Marty O'Toole, the Pittsburg boy, who came from the same leagues I did. The game at the Polo Grounds this season, when he took me into extra innings, was the hardest and most nerve-racking fight I ever had in my life. Marty gave me the most trouble at the bat, too. I think he is a good pitcher. He has certainly always given me a run for my money.

ONE DOSE WAS ENOUGH.

Too Much Prosperity, He Feared, Might Prove His Undoing.

A lawyer picked his way to the edge of the subway excavation and called down for Michael Finnerty.

"Who's wantin' me?" inquired a large, rawboned voice.

"I am," said the lawyer. "Mr. Finnerty, did you come from Castlebar, County Mayo?"

"I did."

"And was your mother named Mary and your father Owen?"

"They was."

"Then, Mr. Finnerty," said the lawyer, "it is my duty to inform you that your Aunt Kate has died in the old country, leaving you an estate of $20,000 in cash."

There was a pause and a commotion down below.

"Mr. Finnerty," called the lawyer, craning his neck over the trench, "are you coming?"

"In wan minute," said Mr. Finnerty. "I just stopped to lick the foreman!"

For six months Mr. Finnerty, in a high hat and with hard shoes on his feet, lived a life of elegant ease, trying to cure himself of a great thirst. Then he went back to his old job at one seventy-five a day. It was there in the excavation that the lawyer found him the second time.

"Mr. Finnerty," he said, "I've more news for you. It is your Uncle Terence who's dead now in the old country, and he has left you another twenty thousand."

"I don't think I can take it," said Mr. Finnerty, leaning wearily on his pick. "I'm not as strong as I wance was, and I'm doubtin' if I could go through all that ag'in and live!"

CANADA'S PREMIERS.

There Have Been Eight In the Past Forty-Five Years.

Canada's history since Confederation largely groups itself around the eight Parliamentary Premiers who have been the successive men at the Helm of the Ship of State. Not only has the national history focused itself upon them, but they in turn have been determining factors in creating much of that history.

The Premier or Prime Minister, the First Citizen, wields influence, as the head of the political party in power, more potent than that of the King's representative, because he comes in closer contact with the people through their chosen representatives in Parliament, and exercises a legislative and administrative power that touches their life and interests at a hundred points. They become, in a word, experts in the science of politics, and politics, in its higher sense, creates much of the history of a nation.

It is interesting, on this the forty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the Dominion, to review the history of the country as centred in its Premiers. The list, in their order of holding office, is as follows:

Sir John A. Macdonald, Conservative, 1867 to 1873.

Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, Liberal, 1873 to 1878.

Sir John A. Macdonald, Conservative, 1878 to 1891.

Sir J. J. C. Abbott, Conservative, 1891 to 1892.

Sir John S. D. Thompson, Conservative, 1892 to 1894.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Conservative, 1892 to 1896.

Sir Charles Tupper, Bart., Conservative, 1896 — April 27 to July 8.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Liberal, 1896 to 1911.

Right Hon. R. L. Borden, Conservative, 1911.

It is interesting to note that five of the eight are native-born, Quebec giving Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir John Abbott; Nova Scotia giving three in Sir J. S. D. Thompson, Sir Charles Tupper and Mr. Borden. Scotland contributed two in Sir John A. Macdonald and Hon. Alexander Mackenzie; while England claims Sir Mackenzie Bowell as her son.

Of the eight, there are six Conservatives, holding office for twenty-four years, and two Liberals for twenty-one years. Ontario and the West have not yet given Canada a Federal Government leader; the East, Nova Scotia and the Motherland have given and developed the supply.

He who reigned the longest as the uncrowned King of the Commonweath was Sir John A. Macdonald, with nineteen years to his credit, followed closely by Sir Wilfrid Laurier with sixteen years. Thus two filled the high position for 35 years, while it required six short terms to make up the remaining ten years, Sir Charles Tupper being at the foot of the list in length of time, with little more than two months. Only two of the total number—Sir John A. Macdonald and Sir John Thompson—died while in office, and four were defeated while in office, viz., Sir John A. Macdonald (in 1873), Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, Sir Charles Tupper and Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

No one of the eight of Canada's honor roll of Premiers faced a greater task than the first—John A. Macdonald. It fell to his lot to be a pioneer in working out a plan of self-government under the first attempt at Confederation within the British Empire; it became his task to conciliate the hitherto opposing elements in the newly-formed family of provinces, to allay the fears of the timid, to curb the headstrong and to bring to naught the prophecies of failure voiced by a few doubting prophets antecedent to the legislative union. The successors to the first Premier came into the inheritance of a going concern; the young legislator who had won his spurs in the old so-called "union" Parliament of the two Canadian Provinces of Quebec and Upper Canada was called upon to establish the concern. That he performed this task well is a testimony that history will ungrudgingly give.—The Toronto Globe.

Foreign Beans Outclassed.

Car lots of beans have lately been received on the Ontario market from Budapest, Hungary. It was at first thought that this would produce considerable competition against the home grown variety but it is found that they are far from the standard of our own products. The beans were not equal to the samples previously forwarded and were not uniform in size and many were badly discolored, besides which they did not prove satisfactory for cooking purposes. The experiment in importing these beans has proved far from being a success and it is not likely that they will become a serious competitor to the Ontario products and it is very probable that their importation will be discontinued.

Speaker's Chair an Heirloom.

In accordance with the long established practice, the chair occupied by Hon. Charles Marcil, Speaker of the House of Commons during the last term of the Laurier regime, has been sent to the ex-Speaker and will in future adorn his home in Montreal and become a family heirloom. Hon. T. S. Sproule, the present speaker, made use of the chair during the recent session of Parliament but when the House meets again he will occupy a new chair, which arrived in Ottawa recently and was delivered at the House of Commons. This chair, which is of particularly handsome design and workmanship, will at the end of the Present Parliament become the personal property of Speaker Sproule.

A Terrible Burden.

Twins born to Mr. and Mrs. Chas. E. Owen of 395 Westmoreland avenue, Toronto, were christened recently with flowery names. The burden that they will carry through life will be "Pansy Fushia Chrysanthemum" and "Aster Primrose Dahlia." Both babies are hale and hearty.

WORRIES OF THE SUMMERTIME

Health Department Preparing Circulars of Information.

Flies, mosquitoes, and improper sewage disposal in the rural districts — three Summer worries of health authorities, are to receive more attention at the hands of the Provincial Board of Health.

Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, Chief Officer of Health, is having prepared circulars dealing with each one, which will be distributed throughout the province. The question of sewage disposal in the country is a serious one, and a campaign of education will be instituted to make the farmer and the residents of small towns and villages understand the importance of protecting ther water supply. The information to be distributed points out the law and outlines the means by which sewage can be properly disposed of.

The circulars pointing out the way to exterminate the flies and mosquitoes will be printed in great quantities and sent to health officers and physicians all over the province.

THE INDEMNITY

Some Members of Parliament Fined for Absence.

Ottawa, July 117— The accountant of the House of Commons has just concluded payment of sessional indemnities to members of parliament. The great majority of them draw very promptly, but some of the wealthier class delay indefinitely. While there are 221 members, indemnity was paid only to 219 individuals, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir Rodolphe Forget, each representing two seats. While the session lasted 139 days, there were but 75 sitting days. Absence, without deductions is allowed for fifteen days. Fifty members were fine $10 a day for being absent, for varying periods, in excess of the statutory allowance.

MISS SMITH SPOKE ON THE JEWS IN CANADA

At the regular meeting of the W. F. M. S. of St. Andrew's Church, Tuesday afternoon, Miss Martha Smith, of Winnipeg, told of the work being done by the Presbyterian Church in Canada in making Christ, the Messiah, known to the Jews, and in breaking down the prejudice in Gentile minds against this wonderful race

This work was great primarily because our Lord put it first commanding His disciples to preach the Gospel to the Jew first and also to the Gentile but it was great also because of the unique history and character of this people. Their history alone of all nations has been pre-written and is now in course of fulfillment; through them God chose to give to the world His revealed will, and through them the Saviour of all mankind came.

The Jews as a nation have revived and come to life and they are a force to be reckoned with in every country of the world. Never before have they been so willing to examine the claims of Christianity, and it behooves Christian people to show to this despised race the real loving kindness of their Lord and Master.

The headquarters of this Mission are in Toronto, and a year ago a branch was opened in Winnipeg. Bibles, tracts and Scripture portions are freely distributed and hundreds of Jews in Canada have recently read for the first time the New Testament in their own language.

HOW DID THE FARMERS THRIVE UNDER FREE TRADE SYSTEM?

Mr. J. H. Burnham M. P. Discusses the Question in a Communication in the Last Issue of the Weekly Sun.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., champions the cause of protection and the farmers in the following letter which is published in the last issue of the Weekly Sun of Toronto—

To The Editor of The Sun.

"I have read Mr. Waldron and Mr. Drury, on the desirability of having free trade conditions established in Canada, for the benefit of the farmer We had free trade in 1874-8. What did the farmer think of it? Would The Sun, and Messrs. Drury and Waldron recall those conditions? Is free trade working miracles in Britain? Did it not kill agriculture there? Free trade means that we must compete with the cheapest paid labor in the world, with the cheapest conditions of raising or making. Can Canadians do that? Do they wish to do it?

J. H. BURNHAM.

The Sun, in editorially commenting upon the communication to the extent of half a column, repeats the familiar and stereotyped arguments, in an attempt to show that the farmer sells his produce now in a free trade market.

LESSON GIVEN IN DRAINAGE

The Ontario Agricultural College is emphasizing the value of drainage again this summer, for which purpose drainage demonstrations are being held in many parts of the province. On Tuesday, July 23rd, 1912, at the hour of 7 p.m. o'clock, one of these demonstrations will be held on the farm of Mr. W H Locke, Campbellford con. 6, lot 13, Seymour Township.

This meeting should be of special interest as some difficult places to drain are involved. Besides the discussion of the particular problems of Mr. Locke's farm, there will be a demonstration of methods of finding the fall over a ditch determining the grade, digging true to grade, etc. Those of our readers interested in drainage should not miss this meeting.

Anyone wishing information about drainage work should write Prof. W. H Day O.A.C., Guelph.

NO CLOSING FOR BARBER SHOPS

The barber shops of the city will not close for an afternoon and evening of each week, as was at first suggested. The arrangement will remain the same as have hitherto been in force each journeyman barber being given an afternoon and evening, off each week, in turn.

SUFFRAGETTES MAKE THREATS

London, July 17.—England is getting seriously alarmed at the truculent attitude of the Suffragettes, who have passed beyond the window-smashing stage and even beyond mere assaults on Cabinet Ministers. Following the attempted bomb outrage on the home of Secretary McKenna and the supposed plot to fire Lewis Harcourt's residence at Nuneham, come open threats against McKenna and other ministers by male and female Suffragettes. At yesterday's Hyde Park demonstration Mrs. Drummond said:

"We have seriously considered the fall of the Home Secretary. He has to go. We are wondering where we shall send him. I see that explosives have been found in the Home Secretary's office. Perhaps if they had gone off he would have had his settlement and would be of no further trouble to us. Militancy carried on all over the country is carried on by women determined that something tragic shall happen to bring this to an end."

Keir Hardie, the Labor member of Parliament, who also spoke in support of the women's cause said:—

"There will be more than hatpins used, more than epaulettes torn from a man's shoulders." Referring to the outrage on Premier Asquith at the political reception, he said:— "The time has gone by for half-hearted measures. The Cabinet as it is now composed is even more hostile than before to the enfranchisement of women. Therefore greater pressure will have to be applied!"

STRATFORD WILL HAVE RAILWAY

Stratford, July 16.—The City Council and Board of Trade last night expressed complete approval of a petition, which the Stratford Railway Company is circulating, urging the Ontario Cabinet to give assurance that the Legislature will confirm the recently passed amending by-law to the street railway franchise. Hon. Adam Beck's refusal thus far to agree to a confirmation of the changes, because the company would thereby be released from using Hydro-Electric energy, was the cause of the petition.

It was decided by the Council last night to proceed in a body to Toronto, and it is expected that Thursday will be the day selected by Premier Whitney. The determination of the citizens that the railway be not held up is shown in the fact that already one thousand ratepayers have signed the petition.

CADETS GOT AWAY

Forty or more cadets left this morning at 8.20 via G.T.R. for Kingston, all smiling and happy at the thought of six days' training and fun at Barriefield. The boys were in charge of Cadet Instructor C. E. Jamieson, of the Collegiate Institute Staff. Mr J. W. Kelly, of the 57th Regiment, late principal of the King Edward School, also accompanied them.

Kincardine old boys and girls are celebrating old home week.

TRACEY TWIRLS THE PETE'S TO DOUBLE VICTORY WITH DAD STEWART'S SAINTS

One win and then another, was the performance of the White Caps at St. Thomas yesterday, when with Tracey on the firing line in both games, the Rowanites grabbed double honors, each score reading 3—2.

There was joy in town last night when news of the first victory arrived, but great were the rejoicings when it was learned that the cellar champions had taken two.

The Petes were outhit by a quartet of bingles in the first attraction, but through fast fielding and timely singles by Dubbie Shea and Jack White annexed the long end of the score in the tenth.

The second affair brought White again into prominence. In the ninth the Petes were one to the good, but Manager Stewart sent in Kiefel to batter for the pitcher. He made good with a vengeance by clouting out a three bagger. Gurney followed with a long fly to White, who made the catch, and throwing to Trout at the plate, Kiefel went out. Tracey had no trouble in getting the next man.

KNOTTY LEE'S INDIAN HEAVER DENTS McMANUS' RECORD

Ottawa, July 16.—Joe McManus' winning streak was broken to-day when in the Canadian League fixture here with Knotty Lee's Kolts from Hamilton. Bill Garlow, of the latter team, bested him in a pitchers' battle, the final score being 6 to 5. The visitors obtained a big lead early in the game, and although Ottawa used three pinch hitters in the ninth they could tally only one and remained in arrears. The batting of Fisher, the Hamilton catcher, was one of the features of the afternoon, a home run and a double being credited to him, both wallops accounting for runs, the homer being the longest of the season here. Careless pitching and ragged support accounted for McManus' defeat, as well as the inability of the Ottawa batters to hit when hits meant runs.

SPORTING COMMENT

The Brantford Expositor says: Discouraged by lack of support and by former reverses this season, the Brantford lacrosse team went down to defeat before the Eaton team, of Toronto at Agricultural Park Saturday afternoon by the score of 15 4. The game was a listless and uninteresting one, save for an occasional burst of speed, and the one feature was the steady work of the Toronto defence.

This game will in all probability finish the season as far as Brantford is concerned, the club now having a deficit in the neighborhood of a couple of hundred dollars, and the team having no chance whatever of winning its district.

Lacrosse has taken a back seat before the onward march of baseball, and taking the whole situation as regards the game of the gutted stick, it would appear that its obituary must soon be written. Lack of interest in lacrosse, cannot wholly be blamed to the success of the baseball game in Canada. A certain class of people enjoy witnessing players "mix it up," and fight each other on the field, but the majority are for clean sport. The style adopted of late in organized leagues is to a large extent responsible for the lack of interest in the national game, but it may be after a few years have come and gone, a resurrection may come about and lacrosse will boom again, but not for the purpose of supplying patients for willing doctors. There are plenty of sport lovers here in Peterborough who would like to see a revival in lacrosse. Some of these wouldn't thank you for an invitation to witness a baseball game, and it is a fact that there are some of the early day supporters of the old Peterborough lacrosse teams who have not witnessed a ball game, outside of exhibitions put up by the corner lot kids.

Famous Kisses.

The first recorded kiss was the treacherous one given by Jacob to his father Isaac, when the former was masquerading as Esau. It is the first in a series of deceitful kisses recorded in history. There is a famous kiss in the "Beggar's Opera." It was given by Macheath to Jenny Diver, and the unpleasant effect which it produced on him may be judged from the sarcastic remark, "One may know by your kiss that your gin is excellent." Petruchio gave his bride a kiss of enormous calibre. We are told that he "kist her lips with such a clamorous smack that at the parting all the church echoed."

The kiss given by the Duchess of Devonshire to a butcher for his vote has almost a world-wide reputation. The butcher was bold and ingenious enough to demand a kiss as the price of his vote. It was gracefully given, and the recipient became known as the butcher Steele who kissed the duchess. He thus increased his trade and gained historic fame. One would like to know the opinion of a duchess as to the difference in the flavor of a duke's kiss and a butcher's.

Judge Who Pushed a Train.

How he once helped to push a train was described by Judge Wakely at Castlerea Quarter Sessions in an action for damages against a railway company. A solicitor told the old story of an Irish light railway, where the passengers were asked to get out and push. "I actually did that myself," said his honor, amid laughter. "It was on the branch line between Enfield and Edenderry. We had a light engine called 'The Fairy,' and on market days when all the heavy farmers boarded the train 'The Fairy' was not equal to the load. I remember myself getting out on the steep grade near Carbury, and helping to push her up."

John W. Bettenson, a Peel farmer, was instantly killed by lightning.

Importance of Little Belgium.

Belgium is virtually the smallest independent country in the world in point of size and yet stands eighth in a list of the wealth of nations and sixth in the total of her export and import trade. Belgium is the commercial and industrial balance wheel of the trade of the world. With a slightly lower wage scale than prevails elsewhere, even in Germany, Belgium is able to shave prices just sufficiently to act as a check upon bids for international business. A Belgium twenty times as great as it is and preserving the same intensity of industrial life and purpose would dominate the trade of the world.—James Davenport Whelpley in The Century.

The Difficult Persian Tongue.

Of the difficulties in the language of Persia a traveler writes: "The words one uses in a letter are almost entirely different from those used conversationally, and those in an ordinary prose history are again different. Then it is almost impossible to distinguish the tenses and, lastly, the adjective is generally indistinguishable from the substantive, and the link between an adjective and the term which it qualifies is the same as the sign of the possessive. For instance, the text 'This is my beloved son' may be read in the Persian Bible 'This is the son of my beloved' without the slightest violence to the grammar."

Reporters Errors.

The late Lord Tweedmouth was once the victim of a reporter's blunder. Addressing an east end London audience, Lord Tweedmouth, in reviewing the Marquess of Salisbury's foreign policy, quoted Bismark's famous description of the marquess, "A lath painted to look like iron." Perhaps it was Lord Tweedmouth's enunciation that caused the mistake. Anyhow, the reporter wrote that Lord Tweedmouth went on to criticise the foreign policy of the Government, and described the Marquess of Salisbury as a lark painted to look like a lion!

Mr. Chamberlain was the victim on another occasion of a somewhat amusing error of a similar order. He had alluded to the Figaro of Beaumarchais, but the last word was transformed when it appeared in print into "Bon Marche"! When, again, Lord Salisbury quoted Lord Morley's famous phrase, "Manacles and Manitoba," in which he summed up what appeared then to be the Unionist policy for Ireland, the expression came out in print as "Manacles and men at the bar."

Didn't Know.

Here is an election story going the rounds in England. Lady St. Audries arrived late at a meeting her husband, better known, perhaps, as Sir Alexander Acland Hood, was to address, and found a man sitting disconsolately on the doorstep.

"Do you know who is speaking now?" she asked. "Or are you just going in?"

"No," was the weary answer, given with a long, long sigh. "No, I've just come out. Acland Hood is speaking."

"What about?"

The man passed his hand across his brow in a dazed sort of way as he replied:

"I dunno!"

"The Lost Chord."

Sir Arthur Sullivan was at one time greatly worried about what appeared to him to be a bad inconsistency in "The Lost Chord." Sir John Robinson tells the story: "The words are, 'I struck one chord of music like the sound of a great amen.' Now, amen is a word of two syllables, so that there must have been two chords. He did not notice this, he said, until after the song had been sung in public, and he was terribly afraid he would get laughed at for it. But he didn't."

WHO GETS THE MONEY?

The Bookie's Wealth Shows How Much the Gambler Gets.

"It's only fools as backs 'osses," Robert Ridsdale used to say; "the bookie's the wise man as pockets their money." And no one knew better what he was talking about than the famous "penciller," who lived to make £47,000 over St. Giles's Derby, and to drive behind a pair of high-stepping horses past the Doncaster inn in which as a young man, he had played the lowly role of "boots." That he ended his days in a Newmarket hay-loft with only three halfpence in his pocket was his own fault, and not that of the "profession" that had made a rich man of him.

Ridsdale's partner, John Gully, was a man of very different mettle, who knew how to keep the gold that poured into his coffers. A butcher and pugilist in his younger days, who had seen the inside of prison walls, the "Game Chicken" (as he was known to fame for his prowess with his fists) was the "Leviathan" of the bookmaking world long before he reached his forties. Over one race he netted £60,000, he cleared £45,000 when Margrave won the Leger; he invested his riches in broad acres and coal mines, found a seat at Westminster, and when he died, at the age of seventy-nine, left nearly £1,000,000 behind him.

And the same story of easily won wealth is told of dozens of John Gully's fellow bookmakers, many of whom climbed the ladder of riches from its lowest rungs. Joe Bland was a postboy when he made his first modest book, "for silver money"; Bickham was a stableman; Fred Swindell was, it is said, a potman when he pocketed £100 on Charles XII. in the Liverpool Cup—and so on through the long list of the "wise men" who have found the laying of odds such a profitable game.

Davies, whose colossal bookmaking was the wonder of the turf world in the first half of the last century, was a carpenter when Atilla's Derby put £100 into his purse. So rapid was his success that within a few years he had a balance of £138,000 at his bank and was winning or losing thousands of pounds on a race as light-heartedly as if the sovereigns were pence. He dropped £120,000 on two races and cleared £200,000 on four others within the same year; while in spite of the fact that Teddington's Derby win cost him £100,000, he ended the year more than this sum to the good.

And such giants as Gully and Davies have had their successors in more recent days, in men like Mr. Dunn and Mr. Fry, the latter of whom died quite recently at Norwood.

When Mr. Fry's attention was first drawn to the possibilities of bookmaking as a road to fortune, he was a linen-draper at Liverpool, who knew as little of horse-racing as the man in the moon. One day he was asked by a bookmaker, who had got into difficulties, for a loan on the understanding that he should receive a share in the profits of the book.

These came as regularly as clockwork, and so satisfied Mr. Fry that there was money in the business that he put up his shutters and started on his own account with a capital of £800, "which," he says "I never had occasion to supplement." Commencing in a modest way at Ascot, where he lost £9 on the week, success came so quickly that he was soon laying bets in thousands of pounds, and was making more money in a year than his shop would have yielded in a lifetime. On two successive Cambridgeshires he lost £60,000; but he could afford to smile at such misfortune—for his double loss was more than recouped by a solitary Derby.

So enormous was the scale of his transactions that, when he died there was owing to him considerably over £900,000, or more than 1,000 times the capital with which he opened his first book.

Locating One.

"We ought to elect honest men to office."

"Yes, that's right."

"But where shall we find them?"

"Well, my name is in the directory."

For the Purpose of Using.

"In business one should have neither friend nor foe. Every one should be treated alike."

"Why not have a few friends to soak?"

TORONTO BUSINESS MAN KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

R. A. Smith, Prominent Financier, Met Instant Death When Car Ran Into Ditch--Victor H. Ross Had Leg Broken and J. Lorne Campbell Badly Hurt.

Toronto, July 18.—Inaugurated exactly ten years ago, the seventh picnic in connection with the North York Conservative Association was held in ideal weather yesterday at Jackson's Point.

Trains, boats, automobiles and vehicles of all kinds to the number of 2,000 assisted to convey the 25,000 people who attended what several speakers alleged to be the greatest political picnic in the world.

Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, was the chief speaker. In the course of his remarks he said:

"The Conservative policy is a policy of fair protection, fair to the builders of industry, and fair to the employes of labor. With our boundless resources, our expenditures should be generous, with due safeguards that the money is economically and honestly expended."

Hon. R. A. Pyne, M.P.P., Minister of Education, advocated federal aid for agricultural and industrial education.

W. B. Northrup, K.C., M.P., for East Hastings, made a witty and humorous speech on the Newmarket canal question, while the Hon. J. J. Foy, the Attorney-General, confined his remarks to congratulating the North York Conservatives on the success of the picnic.

Hon. W. H. Hearst M.P.P., Minister of Lands and Mines, said: "The present Government did more last session for the temperance cause in the curtailment of the liquor traffic than the Liberals did in twenty years. The people of Ontario, as citizens of a mighty empire, have to keep intact that heritage which is theirs by virtue of their citizenship.

Alex. McCowan, M.P.P.; J. A. Hart, M.P.P.; E. A. Donavan, M.P.P.; H. P. Morphy, M.P.; and Dr. R. F. Preston, M.P.P., also spoke.

Toronto, July 18.—A terrible automobile accident occurred to a party of four Toronto men returning from the Lennox political picnic at Jackson's Point last night.

Mr. R. A. Smith, of the firm of Osler & Hammond, brokers; Mr. Victor H. Ross, financial editor of The Globe; Mr. J. Lorne Campbell, broker, and Mr. C. A. B. Brown, member of the board of education, were hurled out of the car when it upset.

Mr. Smith fell on top of Mr. Ross, and was apparently instantly killed. Mr. Ross sustained a broken leg, and Mr. Campbell was cut up badly about the head as well as hurt internally. Mr. Brown escaped injury.

The late Mr. Smith was one of the most prominent of the younger financiers of the city. He had been a member of the Toronto Stock Exchange since 1896, having joined the firm of Osler & Hammond at that time. He was secretary-treasurer of the Toronto Ferry Co.

NEW INSURANCE LAW GOES INTO EFFECT IN BRITAIN

The Only Serious Opposition to Lloyd-George's Measure Comes From the Doctors, Who Declare They Will Refuse to Attend Patients Under Provisions — Ten Million Persons Have Already Registered.

London, July 18.—So far as can be judged during the three days the new National Insurance Act, compelling working people to insure against sickness and disablement has been in force, and before any payments, except in the case of casual laborers, have fallen due, the measure is working, according to the Government officials, more smoothly than was expected.

The doctors as represented by the British Medical Association are still in revolt against the act, and announce their intention of refusing to attend patients under its provisions.

The workmen and working women have taken up the great reform with alacrity and the Government estimates that of the 13,000,000 persons insurable before the act came into force, upwards of 10,000,000 have already registered with approved societies which have undertaken to administer the act, and another 500,000 have taken out cards at the postoffices.

Before the end of the week, when the first payments fall due for those drawing weekly salaries, the Government believes that practically all those entitled to do so will have become insured.

The only section of the community likely to suffer is that composed of casual workers and old people, both men and women, as some of the big employers have decided to do away with this form of labor. Besides the casual laborers are not likely to derive any benefit from the measure. While they are working and the employers are paying part of the premiums, the casuals will not suffer much, but they will be unable to pay their full dues during the weeks when they are out of work, and will thus lose the benefits of previous payments.

While the Unionist party is making campaign ammunition out of the national insurance act, there are many earnest supporters of it among the individual members of the party, not the least of whom is Waldorf Astor, M.P., who was the chairman of the committee of the House of Commons which worked out the scheme for the treatment of tuberculosis workpeople in sanatoria.

QUEBEC HAS CHURCH QUARRELS

Montreal, July 18.—A great deal of feeling has been engendered here over the great meeting at St. Johns, Que., Tuesday evening, addrssd by Mr. Justice Monet, who denounced Archbishop Bruchesi and Bishop Bernard for decreeing that the College of St. Marie shall not open at St. Johns under conditions already described.

The fact of a thousand French-Canadians, including a good many women, scoffing and jeering the members of the episcopacy is a thing unheard of hitherto in this province, and people are asking what it all means.

Boy Fatally Shot.

Orton Costigan, aged 10 years, third son of Thomas Costigan, was in a boat with some other lads when a loaded gun was placed in the boat. The hammer of the gun struck the side of the boat and went off, killing the young lad instantly.

100 YEARS OLD

Mr. Robert Hope, of Villiers is to-day celebrating his one hundredth birthday. A large number of friends are at his home.

GERMAN PAPERS WATCH BORDEN

London, July 18.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The German and Austrian papers are devoting a great deal of space to the visit of the Canadian Ministers to London, recording their movements and the progress of the naval negotiations.

The London Times, commenting on Premier Borden's speech Tuesday night, and the present naval negotiations, says it is a tremendous step forward that the Dominions have been admitted, since last year to the secrets of the Foreign Office, adding that the present meeting will fall short of expectations unless the Canadian people can be satisfied that the new contribution which they are prepared to make for the security of the Empire will carry a proportionately greater voice in the disposal of national development. Canada has long outgrown the makeshift plan of a cash contribution without control.

The Times calls Churchill's recent proposal that the Dominions patrol the outer seas attractive, when coupled with British upkeep of the fleet in home waters, and says it has reason to think the negotiations are proceeding on these lines.

PREMIER DODGES SUFFRAGETTES

London, July 18.—Premier Asquith is now on his way to Dublin, playing a game of hide-and-seek with the suffragettes. The Prime Minister left his official residence in Downing street yesterday afternoon and later in the day unexpected appeared in Wolverhampton, accompanied by his daughter. There the two entered a motor boat, which since has been lost sight of.

This is all the suffragettes have been permitted to know, and they are not likely to learn anything further of his movements until he arrives in Dublin, where he is due at 9 o'clock this morning. A great demonstration consisting of 2,000 torchbearers and 20 bands, has been prepared to welcome him on his arrival.

Canada Lagging In King's Prize.

Bisley, July 18.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Best scores in the King's prize (first stage) were: Ommundsen 103 and Moore, Hon. Artillery Co., 102. Four made 101 and eleven made 100; Forrest, Battershill and twelve others 99, Blackburn, Maggs and Stoddart and thirty-six others 98. Forster got 95. McPherson 96, Richardson 94 Smith 95, Andrews 96 and Bayles 95. Mortimer, Auld, McDougall got 85. There are 93 others in the shoot-off.

Ommundsen, who belongs to the 4th Royal Scots, gets a bronze medal. He scored 34 at 200 and 500 yards, and 35 at 600 yards.

Italians Injured.

Toronto, July 18.—When a hand-car on which several trackworkers were riding jumped the rails near Port Hope, on the C.N.R. about 6.45 last night, two Italians were seriously injured and some other foreigners more or less badly cut and bruised.

WHEAT OUTLOOK IS NOT GOOD

The Acreage Under Wheat Is Less Than Last Year, But a Slight Increase Is Seen In Other Grains—Winter Killing Has Materially Reduced the Prospective Yield—Cold, Wet Weather Is Blamed.

Ottawa, July 18.—A bulletin on the crops and live stock of Canada was issued by the census and statistics office yesterday. The correspondents of the office report that in the Maritime Provinces and generally throughout eastern Canada the weather of June continued cold and wet, and growth was therefore slow. In the northwest provinces the weather of June was hot and dry and rain was badly needed at the beginning of July. Rains have since fallen, however, and conditions have improved. Prospects for spring sown crops are generally favorable.

Whilst not equal to the exceptionally high figures recorded this time last year the condition of spring sown crops is generally good. The highest figures for spring cereals are recorded in Prince Edward Island and British Columbia.

According to the revised figures obtained at the end of June the total area under wheat this year is 10,047,300 acres, compared with 10,377,159 acres as returned by the census of 1911. The area sown to fall wheat in 1911 was 1,097,990 acres, but winter killing has reduced this area to 781,000 acres. The area sown to oats is estimated at 9,494,600 acres, as compared with 9,233,550 acres in 1911, and to barley 1,449,200 acres as against 1,043,969 acres in 1911.

In the three northwest provinces spring wheat covers 9,029,000 acres as against 8,946,000 acres in 1911, the increase being in Saskatchewan and Alberta. Including fall wheat the total wheat acreage in the three provinces is 9,246,100 as compared with 9,301,283 acres in 1911, the decrease being accounted for by the large area of fall wheat winter killed in Alberta. Oats in the three provinces occupy 5,037,000 acres, and barley 826,100 acres, as compared with last year's census figures of 4,563,203 acres for oats and 761,738 acres for barley.

PREMIER ROBLIN ON RECIPROCITY

Winnipeg, July 18.—Sir Rodmond Roblin said yesterday the reciprocity newspapers of Canada were welcome to all the benefit they could derive from a revival of the reciprocity issue.

"These newspapers seem to think that the people of Canada have changed their minds," said Sir Rodmond. "They will in due course of events discover their mistake. For my part, I am more strongly opposed to reciprocity than I ever was."

Speaking of the action of the United States with regard to the Panama Canal charges, he says:

"The moral of this fact cannot be lost upon the people of Canada. If the United States will treat with contempt, abrogate and defy by legislation, as is proposed, the conditions of a treaty made with the great British Empire, with how much more contempt and indifference would they evade and override the terms of a treaty or arrangement with Canada, if in their interest to do so."

RUSSIAN AMBASSADOR AND WIFE AT NEWPORT.

THE RUSSIAN AMBASSADOR AND MME. BAKHMETEFF

Mr. George Bakhmeteff, the Russian Ambassador, and Mme. Bakhmeteff have become two of the most important factors in the social life of Newport, although the summer embassy at Stone Villa has been occupied by them little more than a week. They have registered at the Casino and the Newport Golf Club for the season. The Ambassador is among those who have given cups as prizes for the golf tournament. They will give a series of small dinner parties in July, and in August they expect to give at least two garden parties, the extensive grounds of the summer embassy furnishing an excellent opportunity for al fresco gatherings.

ATTEMPT WAS MADE TO TAKE LIFE OF PRESIDENT TAFT

A Bomb Was Sent to the White House and Almost Exploded in the Hands of a Secretary—Officials, as usual, Deny the Story.

Special to the Review.

Washington, July 18.—A sensational story of an attempt on the life of President Taft is being vigorously denied by White House officials and Chief Wilkie of the Secret Service.

The story was that a bomb wrapped in a package was received late yesterday at the executive offices and that when opened by Sherman Allen one of the assistant secretaries the fuse lighted, but he noticed it sputtering and extinguished it with his hand. Mr Allen also denies the story.

It has always been the policy of the Secret Service and the White House officials to deny incidents savoring of violence to the President.

CONSTABLE UNDER ARREST AS ACCESSORY TO MURDER

Country Officer Saw Emily Antone Kicked to Death and Refused to Interfere—Frank Bennet, the Alleged Murderer Still at Large.

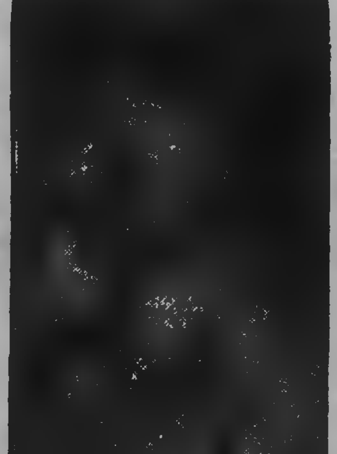
Brantford, July 18.—As the result of an investigation held here by the Chief of Police, as to the death of Emily Antone, who was kicked to death in a Middleport house during the early hours of yesterday morning, a county constable, Jack Armour, Joe Axon, keeper of the house, and Susan Summerhayes, a woman with whom he was living, are under arrest for aiding and abetting the murderer. George Lowery is also detained for assisting the murderer to escape.

To-night the evidence showed that the murdered woman, Emily Antone, had been cohabiting with Jack Bennett, the murderer, but had left him after the local liquor men had instituted proceedings against him for keeping a "blind pig." It appeared that, accompanied by County Constable Jack Armour, the murdered woman had driven in a buggy to Axon's house to spend the night there, and together with others was engaged in a drunken party when Jack Bennett, the murderer, broke into the house. The police had much difficulty in ascertaining what followed, but the story told by Susan Duncan, the murdered woman's sister, is that Bennett began to knock Emily Antone about, and finally felled her to the floor, where he kicked and pounded her despite the efforts of her sister, who called on the men standing around for aid. They refused to help her, but when Bennett had kicked the woman into insensibility, Lowry, who was present, told the murderer he had better make himself scarce. Lowry, it is said, also put the police on a false trail.

The insensible woman was thrown on a bed, and apparently left a one for several hours, and it was not until efforts were made to restore her to consciousness that the terrible fact that she was dead was revealed.

The crime was committed by an Indian named Jack Bennett, for whom a strongly armed posse is scouring the Indian reserve here.

METHODISNS OF CANADA ARE EAGER FOR CHURCH UNION



W. R. TRAVERS.

The star witness in the Farmers' Bank investigation, which was resumed to-day at Ottawa. Mr. Travers was manager of the defunct bank, and is under a six years' sentence for wrecking the institution.

Toronto, July 18.—At the last meeting of the special committee of the Methodist General Conference yesterday the question of the removal of Rev. Dr. Chown from Winnipeg to Vancouver was brought up and the committee expressed approval of the proposal that Dr. Chown decline the position offered him in the coast city and instead devote his time to shaping the educational work which will come before the next general conference. It was decided to hold the 1914 conference in Ottawa, if suitable arrangements can be made with the railways for transportation of the delegates.

The committee approved a report on church union which said in effect:

That the vote taken indicates so decided a preponderance of opinion in favor of union, on the part of Methodist Church, that this general conference special committee is satisfied that the Methodist Church is now prepared to proceed toward the consummation of the union of the three negotiating churches on the basis of union heretofore agreed upon.

That the recent action of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, suggesting co-operation between the three negotiating churches, in several departments of work, pending the accomplishment of organic union, has created a situation unforeseen by the General Conference at its last session. In this emergency this General Conference special committee refers to the general boards and committees of our church the consideration of such temporary arrangements for co-operation as may be found to be feasible.

At the same time this special committee expresses its conviction that such co-operation is more difficult and much less desirable than organic union, which no provisional arrangement ought to be permitted to delay.

That the special committee be authorized in conjunction with the union committees of the other negotiating churches, to provide for the oversight of union congregations not organically connected with any of the three churches.

American Orangemen In Line.

Andrew Weir, a New York delegate, assured the assemblage there were 400,000 stalwart Orangemen in America who were ready to stand beside the men of Ulster foot to foot and financially in order to wipe out the home rule enemy.

Masonic Grand Lodge.

Toronto, July 18.—The Masonic Grand Lodge of Ontario West opened its fifty-seventh annual convention in convocation hall yesterday morning with Grand Master Aubrey White in the chair.

The contributions to those in need during the year amounted to $32,837.50, including $4,515 from the income of the semi-centennial fund. This was one of the largest expenditures for benevolence in the history of this grand lodge and the grand master hoped that the expediture along this line would grow every year.

The general account of the grand treasurer, M.W. Bro. E. T. Malone, shows a bank balance on May 31, 1911, of 5,431; with a revenue of $47,000, of which $38,000 is receipts from lodges, $4,936 interest on investments, and $4,015 paid for matured debentures. This makes a total of $51,268.

Search For Murderer Fails.

Brantford, July 18.—Brantford authorities yesterday scoured the Indian reserve without success in an effort to locate Jack Bennett of the Six Nation tribe, charged with brutally murdering Emily Antone in the Village of Middleport early Tuesday morning.

The scene of the crime was at the home of Joseph Axon, where Bennett called and in the midst of a drinking party beat his victim to death.

BOURASSA'S LATEST FAD IS TO PREACH ANNEXATION

The Versatile Quebec Editor Says People of His Language and Religion Have Nothing to Fear From a Union With the American Nation.

Montreal, July 18.—Henri Bourassa, after being absent many months from Le Devoir, returned yesterday with an article of a very pro-American tendency.

"In the past," Mr. Bourassa writes, "the French-Canadians were tenaciously opposed to being absorbed by the United States. To-day they are no longer afraid of the annexation spectre. They commence to doubt the utility of their efforts against annexation, as they seek in vain any gratitude on the part of their English-speaking compatriots.

Replying to the claim that absorption would mean disaster to the French tongue and the Roman Catholic religion, Mr. Bourassa says: "This absurd argument was used during the reciprocity debate. As for the religion," he asks, "what difference is there, to the advantage of the Roman Catholics, between the constitution and the laws of the English-speaking provinces and the laws of the United States?"

SENATOR O'GORMAN SAYS THE RAILWAYS MADE PROTEST

In Discussion of Panama Canal Tells In the U. S. Senate, Politician Accuses American and Canadian Roads of Having Urged Britain to Insist on Enforcement of Treaty—Shaughnessy Says "No."

PRESIDENT TAFT.

A story from Washington says that an attempt was made to assassinate him by some one who sent a bomb to the White House.

Washington, July 18.—Senator O'Gorman of New York, charged in the Senate yesterday that railroad influence was behind Great Britain's protest in connection with the Panama Canal bill, and he joined with Senator Lodge in declaring that the United States possessed full rights under the British treaty to give free passage to ships of American register.

Both Mr. Lodge and Mr. O'Gorman declared this nation was not bound by the Hay-Pauncefote treaty to give foreign ships all the privileges granted American ships. Mr. Lodge favored a bill to rebate the tolls to American ships, while Senator O'Gorman declared the United States possessed the full right to give American vessels free passage, if desired. Senator Lodge conceded that if the case went to The Hague court the United States will probably lose.

The support yesterday for the provision giving free passage to American ships against which Great Britain has protested, was more emphatic than at any time since the Senate began consideration of the bill. Mr. O'Gorman, Mr. Cummins and others declared that if the United States had to construe the treaty literally in giving the ships of all nations equal treatment, it would by other terms of the treaty, be prevented from defending the canal in case of war.

"I don't think British shipping is greatly interested," said Senator O'Gorman. "I believe the railroads of Canada and the railroads of the United States have been enabled to secure the co-operation of the British office of foreign affairs, to embarrass this Government in the attempt we are now making to secure legislation to keep railroad-controlled ships out of the Panama Canal.

Sir Thomas Denies.

Montreal, July 18.—Sir Thomas Shaughnessy emphatically denies that the C.P.R. used any influence in the Panama Canal matter.

REPORTER SAW BANK PAPERS

Toronto, July 18.—That at least two Toronto newspaper men examined the exhibits in connection with the Farmers' Bank case while they were in charge of Inspector Duncan, was the feature of the evidence given before the Farmers' Bank commission yesterday by Donald A. Yeats, former secretary to Duncan, and now secretary for Chief Cuddy of Calgary. He mentioned J. P. Haverson of The Toronto World, and described another newspaper man whom he did not know personally. At the conclusion of yesterday's session, the commission adjourned to meet in Ottawa this afternoon.

William S. Shand, who enters up the warrants in the detective department, stated when called to the stand that in the Beattie Nesbitt case the information that a warrant had been issued did not reach him until some time later.

Peter Ryan produced his private letter book in order to verify his statement that on Nov. 28, 1906, he was in Ottawa, and that was the only day he was in Ottawa at that period. He did not stay in Ottawa over night, and consequently had no room at the Russell House.

Crown Attorney Corley handed the following statement to the court:

"During the progress of the investigation of this conspiracy charge and toward the end of it the police magistrate made a suggestion in open court that the name of W. H. Hunter be added to the statement as a defendant," he said. "I said to him then that we had gone over a lot of evidence, and we would go over it again. Mr. L. Minehan, the acting crown attorney, was present then, and I told the magistrate that he was willing to add Hunter's name in the indictment to the grand jury. Later, in conversation with Mr. Lynch-Staunton, he asked me whether I would take the responsibility of taking Mr. Hunter's name off the list, but I refused."

Commission then adjourned to meet to-day in Ottawa.

"Blind Tiger" Keeper Fined.

Chatham, July 18.—Martin Egan, a young farmer residing in the local option district near Merlin in Raleigh, was fined $237.64 in the county police court yesterday for keeping a blind tiger in a restricted district.

The license commissioners of West Kent held a special meeting and decided to cut off the license of Georgina Yott of the Park House. Several complaints have been received in reference to the manner in which the house has been managed.

Turks Surrender to Albanians.

Constantinople, July 18.—The news received here yesterday from Albania is serious. The troops have been rebuffed by the Albanians in many directions. Four battalions of infantry were recently surrounded on the river Kruma, near Diakova, in the villayet of Kossovo, by the Albanians, and over 300 troops with three of their officers were forced to surrender. They were disarmed and carried off to the rebel fastnesses.

The remainder of the Turkish troops retreated to the town of Diakova, where they are besieged by the Albanians.

Cochrane's Hudson Bay Trip.

Ottawa, July 18.—Hon. Frank Cochrane, who has been inspecting the G.T.P. terminals at Prince Rupert, is now in Vancouver. He will journey eastward slowly and leave Winnipeg the first week in August to go over the route of the Hudson Bay Railway to Port Nelson.

FARMERS' BANK ENQUIRY INDEFINITELY ADJOURNED

Peter Ryan Had No Room at Ottawa Hotel on the Date Travers Says He Sent the Toronto Man That $3,000 Check.

Special to the Review.

Ottawa, July 18—After a session of an hour the Farmers' Bank enquiry, adjourned sine die this morning. Witnesses from the Russell Hotel testified that Peter Ryan had no room in the hotel, on the date Travers claims to have sent the $3,000 check to his room.

W. S. Calvert, former M.P., for West Middlesex again denied all knowledge of the check.

The Daily Review

THURSDAY, JULY 18, 1912.

MR. BORDEN IN LONDON

In all his public utterances since his arrival in London Premier Borden has not let fall one syllable to which his political opponents can take any exception. The Liberal press that has for months been urging him to define his position on the navy question, have been confounded into silence. His position, either from an Imperial or Canadian standpoint, is impregnable and his arguments for a united Empire are unassailable. Every hope of his supporters has been fulfilled and every carping criticism and conjecture of his opponents has been frustrated. As a public man Mr. Borden, both for ability and patriotism, has vindicated his right to a position in the front rank among the statesmen of the world.

Briefly his position on the navy question is that Canada should as an important part of the Empire bear part of the burden of Imperial defence, and in return should be allowed a voice on the issues of war or peace that may arise in the future. A sound, practical business policy this as all must concede, without regard to party affiliation, and when it is worked out in detail it will be found that Canada in no sense has abandoned its national spirit of independence.

Mr. Borden believes that the present is the time to prepare for the peril which threatens the Empire, and should that fear of a threatened danger ever become a reality, he assured the British people that Canada will respond as earnestly and loyally as the Motherland itself.

STATE INSURANCE

The new insurance law which has just gone into effect in England is involving the Asquith Government in a fresh complexity of difficulties and already Lloyd George, the sponsor of the measure has been assaulted in public by an overzealous opponent of the act. When the state attempts to legislate for the direct benefit of the masses without consulting the beneficiaries the result invariably is trouble, owing to some unaccountable trait in human nature as we find it to-day.

The British Government regarded the insurance law as a beneficent measure that was sure to meet with popular approval and Lloyd George heralded it as one of the greatest political achievements in the history of the country, a desirable development of the law which provides a pension for the indigent aged. And now it seems that the law is more than likely to effect the overthrow of the ministry, in fact it is openly asserted that the House of Lords allowed it to pass without opposition in the hope that this very result would speedily follow.

The bill provides that every workman shall be taxed eight cents a week, although the amount varies slightly according to age and earning capacity, this sum to be deducted from his weekly earnings and for which he is given a government stamp by way of receipt, these stamps affixed to a card becoming the policy of the holder. For each man so insured the employer pays six cents and the Government four cents a week into the insurance fund.

In case a workman falls ill he is paid $2.50 a week for twenty-six weeks if he is unable to work for that length of time and he is entitled to choose his own doctor whose services will be paid for by the Government. When a man becomes permanently unable to work he will draw a pension of $1.25 a week for the rest of his life.

Women who work are required to pay two cents a week less than the men but in case of sickness they will draw only $1.75 weekly. For each new addition to his family the workman receives a bonus of $7.50 and this is doubled in case the mother also is insured. The Government will expend $7,500,000 for the erection of hospitals for consumptives and will contribute $5,000,000 annually for their maintenance.

These are the leading features of the law which is so unpopular in England. The only apparent reason for the general dissatisfaction is the objection the people have to paying a tax imposed upon them without their consent. The same difficulty on a smaller scale has been met with in our own country where employers of large bodies of men in out of the way places, such as lumber and mining districts and railway construction camps have deducted from the men's wages small sums at stated intervals and in return assure them free medical attendance in case of sickness or accident. In such cases there are always those who object to contributing to a fund when the chances are they will never receive any return.

The British workman, however, under the new law stands to get back his money, probably in a short time, and certainly in the more or less distant future. When old age comes he will not be entirely destitute. It is true that the sum allowed him is small but the lower cost of living in his country must be taken into consideration. In sickness he is assured of a steady income and medical care something that in too many cases he could not enjoy under the old order of things.

The constitutional right of the Government to impose such a tax has never been questioned. The state has the power to compel a man to provide for his family, and if through shiftlessness he fails to provide for his own needs he is liable to punishment for his failings. If he threatens to become a public charge by running through his possessions in riotous living the state can interfere in that respect also. Surely then the Government has the same right to compel him to provide against becoming a pauper through sickness or the incapacity of old age.

State insurance is all right in theory and has been the dream of British statesmen for years. If given a fair trial it will no doubt prove satisfactory to those for whose benefit it has been devised. Like the daylight-saving experiments of some municipalities in our own country it may prove a failure because opposed for no other apparent reason than a desire to resent anything in the nature of coercion.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Hetty Green's baptism at the age of 8, looks like a case of repentance, when the dark shades of death are beginning to fall.

Even a New York policeman should know enough to change his uniform or civilian clothes before he starts out to commit a murder.

If the boy will swim give him a chance to do so. To lessen the danger of the pastime, establish a public bath house, where he can do so under proper supervision.

Rudyard Kipling is about due to write another poem on Canada, in view of the popularity of the Canadian ministers in London. Has Poet Laureate Austin retired permanently from the business, seeing that he is never heard from on state occasions.

The press of the country is ringing with congratulations to Lieut. Col. E. W. B. Morrison, editor of the Ottawa Citizen, who has been appointed Quarter Master General of the Canadian Militia to succeed Gen. Macdonald. Gen. Morrison made a fine record as a soldier in the South African war and besides, he is known as one of the ablest editors in Canada.

The English suffragettes are no longer satisfied with the destruction of windows, official uniforms and hats. Nothing but the life blood of the Home Secretary will satisfy them, according to their latest manifesto. And thus the support of the respectable element of society is falling steadily away from them.

The Globe truthfully remarks that owing to the scarcity of labor, Ontario farmers are giving up the dairy business and going extensively into fruit culture. There will always be a market for this fruit in the West, says the Globe, in spite of the competition of the western states. This is the market which the Liberal organ has been striving so strenuously to destroy for lo, these many months, by preaching Reciprocity.

The Toronto World catches the power and light dilemma in that city by both horns, when it suggests that the province take over the plant of the Electric Development Company, and that the city buy out the street railway company and that both concerns be operated in the future, on the public ownership plan. This, according to The World, is the true solution of that difficulty and the only means by which the public can be assured of satisfactory service, either in the matter of light and power or transportation.

MONTREAL, July 17.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the receipts of live stock for the week ended July 13 were 1800 cattle, 700 sheep and lambs, 1600 hogs and 800 calves. The offerings on the market to-day for sale were 700 cattle, 600 sheep and lambs, 800 hogs and 800 calves.

There was no further change in the condition of the market for cattle since Monday, prices being steady under an improved demand from local butchers. A fairly active trade was done, with top quality steers selling at $7.25 to $7.50, good at $6.75 to $7, and fair at $6 to $6.50 per 100 pounds. A few very choice butchers' cows sold as high as $6, but the bulk of the trading was done at $5 to $5.75. Common and inferior sold at $3.50 to $4.50 per 100 pounds. Common grass-fed bulls sold at $3 to $3.50 per 100 pounds.

The market for sheep was weaker, and prices ruled lower, but at the decline the demand was fairly good, and sales were made at $3 to $3.75 per 100 pounds. Lambs met with a fair sale at $7 per 100 pounds. The tone of the market for hogs was stronger, on account of the small supplies coming forward, and sales of selected lots were made at $8.50 to $8.75 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars. Demand for calves was good at prices ranging from $3 to $8 each, as to size and quality.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

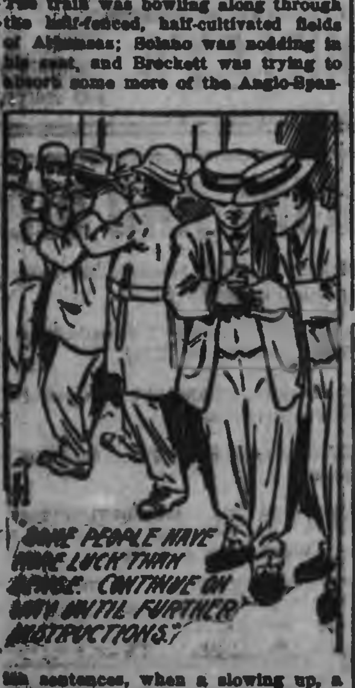
Nothing happened to disturb the travelers through the night, but the alternation of three-hour periods left them in a more or less drowsy, half-dazed condition when morning came. The train was bowling along through the half-fenced, half-cultivated fields of Arkansas; Solano was nodding in his seat, and Brockett was trying to absorb some more of the Anglo-Spanish sentences, when a slowing up, a hissing of slackened steam and a jarring stop announced arrival in the town of Little Rock. Gazing from the windows the boys were finding considerable amusement in the signs which tell of racial segregation—such placards, for example, as those upon a restaurant, "White Side," "Colored Side," and other marks of sharp distinction, when half a dozen long, lean, clay-colored Arkansans came tramping down the aisle.



"SOME PEOPLE HAVE MORE LUCK THAN SENSE. CONTINUE ON WAY UNTIL FURTHER INSTRUCTIONS."

The conductor preceded the group of Little Rock citizens, led them straight to the double seat where Brockett and Solano were reposing, and halted abruptly.

"These young men," said he, "are the only ones aboard who answer the description. Go ahead and make your own inquiries, sheriff—that's all I can do for you."

"You two boys," said the leader of the Arkansans, impressively, "had better speak right out and tell me the truth now, and nothing else. Your only those portions of Texas which made a great general declare that if he had that state and the infernal regions at his disposal he'd live in hell and rent out Texas. Mesquite and prickly brush; jungles bisected here and there with thorny trails; habitations almost as scattered and as seldom visible as in the days when the Comanche and the Lipan rode abroad in the land—that is the Rio Grande border. It is an ideal country for smugglers, cattle-thieves and revolutionists, just as it was once the happy hunting ground of the most pernicious red men.

Still, it doesn't much matter what the section of the land may be, or what the scenery may amount to. If it is in these United States—and there is a patch of fairly level ground discoverable—there will be a ball game in progress any pleasant afternoon, and the crack of the bat will rouse the echoes where once the Indian war-whoop scared the birds. Hence it can hardly be considered startling or even remarkable to find good games in full blast upon the Rio Grande—games which may not be played with big league skill, but which are filled with liveliness and pepper, loud outcries and troubles for the umpire.

The second game of the great series between the Fourth cavalry and the common citizens promised to be the warmest battle seen on the banks of the big river in several moons. While the cavalry had won the first contest 17 to 9 on heavier hitting, the common citizens—war correspondents and camera artists in the main—had been reinforced the night before the second tussle. Two lithe, sinewy youngsters had blown into camp, asserting that they had some small, unimportant business with the commander. As that official had temporary business at San Antonio, the boys had been made welcome and given quarters while awaiting his return. Baseball, of course, had been one of the earliest topics of conversation, and the newcomers showed intense eagerness to break into the game. As anyone outside of army circles was eligible and the common citizens were short-handed, the new arrivals were promptly drafted into service. Brockett was detailed to guard centerfield, while Ramon Solano was listed for third base. Both youngsters, while wild to have at least one day of diversion, were modest and diffident when asked to play, and declared that they didn't want to crowd any other fellows off the team. It was explained, however, that Sanborn, the estimable war correspondent of the New York Whirl, had counted himself out with a charley-horse, while Summers, kodakman of the Chicago Blizzard, had been stung by a scorpion—not seriously, but squarely on the right wrist, disabling him from further baseball doings. That left two vacancies, and the appearance of the boys was a blessing to the common citizens' array.

Brockett and Solano warmed up with real delight when the teams were summoned to the field. They had found friends—a jovial crowd of newspaper men and photographic experts—and the minor officers of the regiment had likewise extended them a warm welcome. The Polo Grounds, as the troopers proudly styled the ball yard, was somewhat humpy in places, and rather diversified with cactus in others, but everybody concerned had seen far worse arenas for the game. Grandstand there was none, but long lines of cracker-boxes, beer cases and brush heaps afforded sitting room, while hundreds of the enthusiastic bugs stood as close to the base lines as they dared. Mexican ranchers, Mexican peons, rurales on short furloughs, "lungers" who had sought that region for their health, and soldiers by the hundred—such was the assembly, and it is doubtful if any ball game ever was played before a more uproarious crowd.

A college man who was directing things for a moving-picture concern went in as pitcher for the common citizens, and seemed fairly capable. He stopped the cavalry hitless for two innings, pop flies and strikeouts quickly disposing of the warriors. The common citizens were equally helpless with the stick. Brockett and Solano, the newcomers, on whom the common citizens were counting for material batting help, failed in the pinch on their first times up. Brockett raised a foul fly to the fat sergeant, who was catching, and Solano grounded to a farrier who was playing short.

In the third inning the troopers began to land on the moving-picture man and two hits were followed by a fumble on the part of a contractors' agent, who was covering second. With

"Good idea, boy. Good idea," chuckled the sheriff. "I'll do it. Do it right away."

And a few hours later, various highly valued documents, papers that would cause tremendous stirrings in the land of the Black Eagle, were en route to Washington. The sheriff, by way of good measure and variety, presented the boys with a set of the photographic duplicates, kept a set himself, and sent still another set to official friends in Chicago. As to the baron: He raved. He called heaven and the infernal regions alike to witness that dire calamities would descend upon the United States, the state of Arkansas, the city of Little Rock, and the hardy sheriff, unless his papers were returned and all duplicates destroyed. Whereupon the sheriff, apparently but little frightened, had the baron photographed while at the height of his oratory, and presented the boys with souvenir copies of the proofs.

Late in the evening, somewhat refreshed by the hospitality of the sheriff, the boys resumed their journey. The sheriff himself escorted them to the train, and with him came Pop Morgan, owner of the bloodhounds baffled by the pepper trick a few short hours before. Mr. Morgan showed no resentment against the youngsters and even insisted on sending a young hound to the home address of each one—"a dawg," as Mr. Morgan stated it, "that'll be a real comfort to yore fambly, an' will be mighty useful when it comes tuh keepin' foreign snakes from traipsin' 'roun' yo' premises." Several of Mr. Morgan's famous bloodhounds were with him and the boys learned, with astonishment, that the dreaded man-trackers were rather small, measly-looking creatures, not large enough or powerful enough to make a good fight against a bull-terrier, and answering in no description the stories or the pictures which pass current in all literature.

"Real bloodhounds," explained Mr. Morgan, grinningly, "has come tuh be nothin' but show dawgs, with long ears that'd git cotched in the brambles in a minnit. Yuh turn a pack of real bloodhounds loose after a man, an' they'd all sit down on their tails an' yell right helpless. Real, genuwine, man-cotchin' dawgs is a wuss mixture than Injun an' nigger—but they can foller, an' they can find."

"They don't look," ventured Solano, "as if they would tear a man to pieces when they caught him."

Mr. Morgan and the sheriff haw-hawed long and loud.

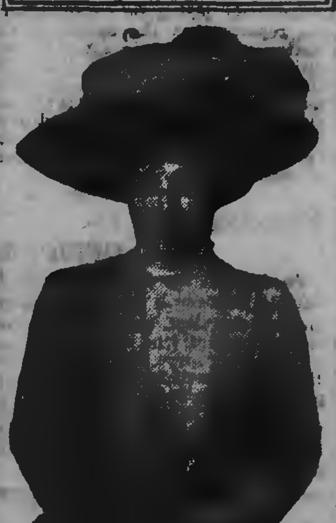
Italia Garibaldi, Granddaughter of Liberator, Talks on Women.



MISS ITALIA GARIBALDI.

A representative of the Garibaldi family, which has done so much for democracy and humanity, Miss Italia Garibaldi, a granddaughter of Italy's liberator, is in this country as a delegate to the Methodist general conference, which met in Minneapolis recently. She does not consider politics a good sphere for women, but says that other fields are wide in which women may do much. In Italy, she says, the women do not stir up so much trouble as in England and America.

"There is a national council of Italian women to which most of the first women in the kingdom belong," she said. "They meet and discuss methods by which women may be helped, but they have no rows. Personally I think women can accomplish good in many ways other than in politics.

"We have some leaders working up the suffragette ideals, but Italian women have not taken to them much as yet."

The present generation of Garibaldis is hardly less gifted than was the famous general. Miss Italia's eldest brother is General Peppino Garibaldi, who made a name for himself in South Africa while fighting on the British side against the Boers. Later on he fought against General Castro in Venezuela, and more recently still he captured the city of Juarez in Mexico, when fighting for President Madero. At present he is on a mission to Paris for Madero, although he is but thirty years of age. A second brother is fighting in Tripoli. A sister is a nurse on a Red Cross ship engaged in bringing wounded Italians from the seat of war. The father of this war loving family is an Italian general who has fought in the armies of France and Greece, while the mother conducts a hospital at Maddalena, on the island of Sardinia.

MANKIND AWAKE.

What Some Men Are Doing For Universal Suffrage.

The Pennsylvania Federation of Labor at its eleventh annual convention, held in Pittsburgh, went on record as indorsing woman suffrage and for the first time in its history instructed its officers to work for an amendment to the constitution allowing women the right to vote.

Kansas is said to be seething with women suffrage sentiment, as evidenced by the organization of clubs all over the state. The Men's League of Lawrence is headed by Chancellor Strong of the state university, and many professors and students are among its members.

In Rhode Island the committee on special legislation has under consideration a woman suffrage bill to amend the constitution by eliminating the word "male."

The Building Trades' Council of Indiana, representing 300 men, indorsed woman suffrage at its last meeting in Indianapolis.

Notes About Women.

Mme. Kaissavow of St. Petersburg died a few days ago, leaving a library containing 18,000 volumes, all written by women. This is said to be the most extensive individual collection of the kind ever formed.

One of the ardent workers for equal suffrage in the national capital is Mrs. Atlee Pomerene, wife of the new senator from Ohio. During her husband's campaign in Ohio she took a great interest in the political changes and is said to be one of the best informed women in Washington.

Ohio will be the scene of general suffrage activity for the next few months or until the time of the special election, which is expected to take place in midsummer. Advocates of equal suffrage throughout the United States are rallying to the support of the women of Ohio in their campaign for the vote, under the leadership of Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton, president of the State Suffrage association. Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois have already arranged to put workers in the field, and many women from states farther west and south stand ready to respond to the first call for assistance.

Adding Insult to Injury.

"Why am I gloomy?" demanded the undesirable suitor whom she had heartlessly ignored. "Isn't it enough to make a man gloomy to be cut by the one he loves best?"

"The idea!" exclaimed the heartless girl. "I didn't even know that you shaved yourself."

Two Sets of Manners.

A girl who wears a soiled, wornout, tumbled dress to the home breakfast table and has the whole family helping her hurry into something decent looking when she hears the man's step on the front stoop is going to make that man pretty generally miserable. The chances are marriage will relieve her of any responsibility she may have felt in keeping up appearances, and the soiled kimono will often extend through most of the day. Runover heels, gaping belt lines, armies of protruding pins, are all so many danger signals in the marriage market.

Good Form In Dress.

Young girls and women who must dress on very little money should realize that she who is most admired by men and women both is the one who dresses simply, but who selects her clothes carefully so that all that she wears corresponds in style and in color.

Self-denial looks good to the average man—from a distance.

are made beautiful by long, silky lashes and well defined, lustrous brows. Eyes, like diamonds, depend on their setting. The beauties of the face are lost is the eye brows are thin and scanty, and the lashes are thing and scanty. Parisian Lash Lustre grows beautiful, soft, silky lashes. It has done so for society women throughout Europe, and it comes here well recommended to do the same for you. Parisian Lash Lustre is not a dye or colorator, but a scientific preparation for beautifying the eye lashes and brows. Our guarantee goes with every box of Parisian Lash Lustre. A two weeks' treatment will bring beauty to your eyes that you have never before possessed. By mail, prepaid, in seal boxes on receipt of price, fifty cents. B. V. A Modern Force in Business

ADVERTISING has established a new order of things in commerce. It has become a mighty power in business progress; a complex yet comprehensible transmitter of many parts for the distribution and selling of merchandise and service.

Its function is fivefold:

To enlighten or educate—to create new wants or to satisfy old ones—to protect and foster legitimate enterprise—to establish a medium of understanding between buyer and seller as a basis for mutual profit and advantage—to prescribe an economical price and the maintenance of a fixed standard of quality.

None know better than the buying public how well these functions have been fulfilled.

Modern advertising has given us an insight into various manufacturing processes. The producer has taken us, the consumers, into his confidence and told us just how his mince meat, his flour, his clothing, etc., is made. We know why certain things should or should not be. Advertising has told us—broadened our understanding and guided our judgment.

Modern advertising has enabled us to unlock the treasure house of the world's divinest melodies through the medium of the player-piano. The motor car has lengthened the business day and brought the fragrant countryside to our door. Men shave in comfort in ten minutes where they used to take twenty. A magic bottle provides us with cold drinks with the weather at 90 degrees or gives us a warm beverage when Jack Frost dips at 40 below.

Modern advertising has elevated the standard of business ethics. It protects the manufacturer from unscrupulous competition and the consumer from base imitation. It conserves trade—extends business—creates good will. It enables the corporation, the manufacturer or private individual on trial to take his case directly to the public, and to secure the public's judgment on his policy or character based purely upon their respective merits.

Modern advertising has opened up new opportunities to the oppressed and poor of far-off lands. It has turned an unceasing tide of immigration to new countries. It has developed nations, and made the name of the New World a promise of better things among the people of the Old.

All this advertising has done and will continue to do. It is the ever-increasing influence for the advancement of mankind—the most potent, indeed, of the many forces influencing human action.

Advice regarding your advertising problems is available through any good advertising agency or the Secretary of the Canadian Press Association, Room 503, Lumsden Building, Toronto. Enquiry involves no obligation on your part—so write if interested.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

THE minds of some persons are like a child's savings bank—any currency goes into them, but the most persistent shaking fails to extract anything therefrom.

When one's self respect gets an unexpected jolt nothing but a month of hard work seems to be able to adjust it again.

Foolishness has so many disguises that it frequently passes for wisdom.

YOU CAN BE ABSOLUTELY SURE OF VALUES

If you carefully read the store advertisements and follow them in your buying.

Merchants advertise certain lines because they know these lines will advertise their stores. Because there is something about certain goods, they are put in conspicuous places and the people are told about them. It may be the exclusiveness or newness of design, it may be an unusual quality, it may be an attractive price.

But there is at least one definite, sure reason why a merchant advertises an article and is willing to stake the reputation of his store upon it.

Therefore, when you see an article advertised in THE REVIEW, depend upon it, that article is good value, as good value as can be obtained in that particular store.

It might Stimulate him to study harder too. And he can't be late for supper, and say he didn't know what time it was. Thus it will teach him to be prompt.

And promptness is something that's good for everyone

Sure, get him a watch. Let it be a boy's watch, such as we have to show you.

A POPULAR SCHOOL

Among the Commercial Schools of the Dominion, the Peterborough Business College, Peterborough, is freely acknowledged to hold the foremost position. It is the largest and most widely attended Business College in Eastern Ontario and is affiliated with the Commercial Educators' Association of Canada. The management of this chain trained last year over two thousand young people and placed them in excellent positions. We have had thirty years' experience; consequently, ambitious young people, who are desirous of securing a business education and taking a good position, would do well to write at once. Hundreds of young people are studying at home preparatory to entering Business College next fall or winter, and they are paying for their course at their own conveniences. 2d

BEST FISHING SEASON OF YEARS SAYS "CAP" CARSON

That the fishing from Lake Couchiching to Rice Lake is this season the best of many years, was the statement made by Captain Carson, of government patrol boat Naiad, when speaking with a Review reporter last night. Captain Carson, through his connection with the waters, can be said to be a good authority.

THE ANNUAL INSPECTION.

The Naiad is docked at Peterborough for the purpose of the annual inspection, an official having come to the city to inspect all the boats plying on these waters

"Cap." remarked that on the previous day he met a party of four Americans at Burleigh, who took out thirty-two bass before eleven o'clock in the morning.

PLENTY OF TOURISTS.

He was enthusiastic, too, in speaking of the summer tourist traffic. Viamede, Burleigh, Buckhorn, Bobcaygeon, and Oak Orchard houses are all well registered, and there are more to come.

Perry Alexander is making an addition to his hotel at Oak Orchard, which will give him more dining room accommodation. The addition is about 24 feet x 54 feet. The fine new hotel at Bobcaygeon is practically completed.

"And you've got excellent fishing right here in your own lake," added the captain, giving the recent capture of a 22 pounder as an example.

Rev. Mr. Rollins was appointed moderator of the vacant charge.

BROTHER OF MRS. W. H. HILL IN LINE OF LARGE FORTUNE

A despatch from Montreal says that shares in a fortune of £5,000,000 or $25,000,000 in round figures await any Montrealers who happen to be descendants of Rev. Dr. Taylor, who was pastor of the United Presbyterian churches of Montreal years ago.

Fortune is believed to be beckoning in particular towards W. M. Taylor, Chief Clerk to the third Vice-President, of the C.P.R. in this city. He is a grandson of the late Dr. Taylor and if everything goes well he will share in the proceeds from the family estate, which will be divided up at the end of the time provided by law. Difficulty has been experienced however, in locating all the heirs. Rev. Dr. Taylor had three sons, the youngest of whom would be about eighty years old if alive now, although it is belived that they have all passed away.

Mrs. W. H. Hill, Bethune street, is a sister of Mr. W. W. Taylor mentioned.

PORTER--CAMPBELL NUPTIALS

At 2.30 this afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Thomas Campbell, Gilmour street, the marriage took place of her only daughter, Susan Margaret, to Mr. George Edwin Porter, Professor of English Literature, Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pa.

The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. W. D. Campbell, was beautifully gowned in a robe of white Duchess satin, Chantilly lace and pearls. The long, tulle veil which was arranged in Juliet style was caught with orange blossoms and the bouquet was of white orchids and lily of the valley.

Her only ornament was the gift of the groom, a ring with diamonds and emeralds set in platinum.

The littel flower girl, Miss Louise Davis, Cleveland, wore a white lace dress over blue silk and carried a basket of roses and lily of the valley.

The wedding march was played by Miss Mabel Clarry and before the ceremony and during the signing of the register, Mr. Norman Joliffe, of New York, sang.

Dr. and Mrs Porter left on the 4.19 train for New York en route to Guatemala, where for the next two months they will be the guests of the American Consul and his wife, Mr. and Mrs Bucklin.

THE GROUNDS FOR APPEAL IN THE CHINAMEN'S CASE

The Chinese card-playing case is not settled yet. An appeal against the decision of Magistrate Dumble to have the convictions quashed has been entered in Division Court and will be heard in September.

The grounds upon which Mr. J. W. Curry, K.C., counsel for the defendants, intends to enter suit and prosecute are as follows:

1. That the conviction was contrary to law and the evidence, and the weight of evidence.

2. That the evidence did not disclose the offence charged in the information, or any other offence.

3. That I was refused an opportunity to prepare and present my defence and to adduce evidence on my own behalf.

4. Upon such further and other grounds as I may be advised to allege.

At a special meeting of the City Council which is called for to-night, Ald. Gordon may recommend that the city secure several sets of grappling irons, the same to be distributed at points between the Quaker Oats plant and Crawford's Grove. Ald. Gordon suggests that the irons be placed at the Quaker Oats plant, Peterborough Locks, Rye's boat house and Crawford's Grove. Death by drowning might be averted through prompt action in using the grappling irons.

POSTIES HAD GOOD SUCCESS WITH MOONLIGHT

A very enjoyable moonlight excursion was held under the auspices of the Letters Carriers, last night, on the steamer "Stoney Lake" There were about 250 people on board. Tucker's orchestra supplied the music for dancing. Although the refreshment booth gave out long before the trip ended, the moonlight as a whole was a great success, and a credit to the committee.

YOUTH WAS SHOT

A report from Campbellford says that a young lad, Vincent Mahoney, was shot in the shouder by a companion, James Daly, when the two boys were playing with an old revolver in a building at the Fair Grounds this week.

The revolver was loaded and difficulty was experienced in cocking it. Daly finally managed to draw the hammer back, but it slipped and the weapon being discharged, the bullet entered the shoulder of Mahoney, who is about twelve years of age.

F. C. Bonneycastle heard the noise of the report, and finding the boys hurried the injured lad to a physician.

The victim at first was mostly concerned as to whether or not he would die, but when told that he would not die, he requested that his mother be not told as she would die.

BOILERS IN GOOD SHAPE

He reports that the boilers of the boats inspected are in excellent condition, with very few exceptions. He finds the passenger boats reduced in number, in this vicinity, viz: Otonabee, Water Lily, Manita and Lintonia. The Bessie Butler carries the "palm," everything being in the best of condition.

EAST CITY RATEPAYER GIVES SOME VIEWS ON GARBAGE COLLECTION

A gentleman from East City called at the Review office this morning to look up an advertisement by a man who advertised that all orders for scavenger work would be promptly attended to.

"Since Mr. Spence came on the scene," said the caller, "I have been unable to have the garbage from my house removed. I spent about five nights of one week looking up a man, and while he came once, he never returned."

He had no fault to find with Mr. Spence. These statements led up to discussion on the system of garbage collection, the East City resident claiming that the better plan was for the Council to invite citizens wishing to have garbage removed to forward their names.

COMPULSION NOT A SUCCESS.

Compulsory measures, in his opinion, were not a success. With the plan as suggested in operation, he held that the moral effect would result in general support by citizens.

The separation of ashes from other garbage, he held, was a mistake; neither did he favor the practice of garbage cans being placed on the streets.

Another point brought out was the wagons used under the local system were not satisfactory.

In support of his arguments he cited the system of garbage collection as he knew it to be in a city of 40,000 in England.

There the wagons were of galvanized iron, with sliding covers, and trouble came to the collector who failed to have this remain open unnecessarily.

The cans for the householders were kept in a shed in the rear of the home. The collector knew its location and after collection each can was treated with disinfectant. The wagon received similar treatment.

MARSHY ISLAND MADE INTO PARK.

For the disposal of garbage the city planned to convert a marshy island into a beautiful park. Gradually the water surrounding this island disappeared as the garbage was dumped. Two or three feet of earth were used for the top and then seeding was commenced. Eventually this waste land became a fine park.

Similar work could be done in Peterborough, he believed.

PEOPLE CAN'T SLEEP FOR NOISE OF WHISTLING

The people in the north end of the city are complaining about the loud and prolonged noise of the whistles, especially that of the Auburn Woollen Company, which for some reason, or no reason, blows at what appears to be every half hour. The chorus of unseemly yells accorded the ears of people trying to snatch a few minutes' sleep after a hot night is going too far, and to say that complaints are many is putting it mildly.

LOOKING AFTER INTERESTS OF THE PETERBORO FAIR

While the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is still some months off the energetic secretary F. J. A. Hall, is already being deluged with correspondence relating to the program for the big annual event.

The prize list is being prepared to be placed in the hands of the printers, and the secretary reports the outlook pointing to a bigger better and more successful show than ever before.

A skilled man will be on hand to supervise the pyrotechnic display in the evening of the Fair, and a classy list of racing, athletic and acrobatic events will be features as usual.

DOUBLE SERVICE FOR PASSENGERS ON NEW LINE

Report Says Two Trains Will Run From Peterboro

It is reported that a double passenger service between Port McNicoll and Peterborough will be in operation before long.

This is in connection with the Georgian Bay and Seaboard line of the C.P.R. The Lindsay-Bethany section is now being used for freight traffic but has not as yet been finally passed so that passenger traffic can commence. The stations, it is learned have been completed.

Just when the freight sheds along the rear front will be commenced is not known. However, it is hoped that this work along with further space for passenger accommodation at the local C.P.R. depot will soon be under way.

Card of Thanks

The family of the late Mortimer Mowry wish to return thanks to many friends for kindness and for floral remembrances. Also to the G. Walter Green Co. for the courtesy of closing the factory on the afternoon of the funeral, in order that fellow-employes might attend the funeral in a body.

SUCCESS THAT MEANT FAILURE

Michael Burke Became Intoxicated and Landed in the Coop

A man answering to the name of Michael Burke, blew into the city last night from Toronto, and proceeded to get drunk. He was so successful that at 2 a.m., he was placed in a police court cell. Not having any breath tablets, the liquor odor was still strong, when he was arraigned before Magistrate Dumble this morning.

He was not fined, His Worship deciding to give him an opportunity to get to work. He claims an abiltiy to do laboring work.

HIS LAWYER PAL

A pal named William Sullivan accompanied him into court and helped to explain who they were and what they would do if given another chance.

WHEN BUYING WAS CHEAPER

What a change has been brought about in the way of commodities during the past twenty-five years. The housewife of a quarter of a century ago was not blessed with many conveniences of the present day. She did not have a telephone with which to exahnge tit-bits of news with her neighbors and far-away friends; neither did she clean her carpets with the aid of a vacuum machine. Then too, the lady of the house, called for fuel or in many more cases went and got it herself so that the meals for her lord and his help could be made ready in time.

Now its a case of turn a button and do fancy work while the victuals are being prepared on the gas or electric stove.

But she was better off in other respects. She could rejoice in a winter's supply of potatoes at from 50 to 75 cents per bag. The best butter could be obtained at 12 cents per pound, and for a special treat, turkey was purchased at 10 cents a pound. Chickens in those days were begging at thirty cents for two.

It was a very easy matter to replenish the larder with the best of the land, and strangers were welcome.

The present day housewife sighs deep and long, and doesn't altogether relish the idea of a Saturday morning trip to the market.

CLUB DANCE BY THE BELMONTS

The Belmont club house never looked prettier than last evening, when about forty couples were present at the regular monthly dance under the club auspices. Most acceptable music was furnished by Howarth's popular orchestra. Dancing commenced around nine o'clock, and was continued until about one in the morning, with an intermission at 12 o'clock for delightful refreshments. The club house as usual was gaily adorned with the colors of the club.

GARDEN PARTY ATTRACTED VERY LARGE CROWD

What proved to be a source of enjoyment was the annual social and garden party as held under the auspices of the Sacred Heart church last night.

The affair took place on the church grounds and met with splendid success, the attendance being very large indeed.

Assisting in the entertainment was the 57th band, under the leadership of Mr. Gliddon.

The receipts amounted to a large sum.

Can't Beat This

A farmer near Oshawa, Mr. James Lindsay, reports a phenomenal happening in his poultry yards. He set a hen with seven goose eggs and much to his mystification she hatched out 10 goslings. He cannot account for it, unless some of the eggs were twins, for there is not a goose around his place.

Stung in the Eye

While Mrs. Thos. Begg, of Durham street, Lindsay, was attending on Monday to her apiary, one of the bees stung her just beneath the right eye. She called to her husband and relapsed almost immediately into unconsciousness. A physician was called in the nick of time as Mrs. Begg was in a very serious condition, but yesterday she showed a decided improvement.

Young Musicians

Master Everett Finlay, 10 years old, of Norwood, passed with honors, his first year's piano work at the examinations of the Toronto Conservatory of Music. Also Miss Sadie Greenbank, 11 years old, has been very successful in passing with honors her second year's course in piano. Both pupils show great talent in taking such a high standing and both so very young. Their teacher, Miss Lillian Tate, Peterborough, is very much pleased with their success

Frank Holland, of Hamilton, got 30 days' hard labor for assaulting a street car conductor.

PETES FAILED TO GET HOME; BARTHOLD TOOK THE MOUND

The Petes dropped one to the London Tecumsehs yesterday, being shut out, while the other fellows gathered four runs, despite the fact that Manager Bowerman was missing. It is reported that the ex-Giant has quit his job in London.

The Petes had four misplays and only five hits, while London played errorless ball and clouted Johnny Barthold's delivery for ten safeties.

Nicholls, who worked at third base for the Bowermanites here, and was released, has been signed by Manager Rowan.

The Caps play in London again today.

LAKEFIELD MAN PLAYS GOOD BALL

Had Only Two Hits Recorded Against Him.

Carter, the High School student at Lakefield, who in a game in the town league the other day, struck out ten men and allowed only two hits, is about due for a job in one of the larger leagues. It is from such players as those at Lakefield that the ranks of the professional players are recruited.

OTTAWA CLUB MAKING MONEY

Ottawa, July 18.—The Ottawa Baseball Club, at the end of this week, hope to show a total of $12,000 taken in at the gate. This means that the city received $1,200 as their share of the gates, and, under their arrangement, this will be their rent for the exhibition grounds for the season. This is a great showing for the first year of organized ball in Ottawa.

Taking all the expenses, including the purchase of players and the initial expense of training, preparing the grounds, etc., the club are now practically even on the game, with half the season still to go. There are clubs in the A class who would like to be in this financial position.

DOLAN TO STAY WITH SENATORS

Dolan, the big first sacker of the Ottawa Club, has decided to stick with the team to the end of the season. Dolan had the offer of a good job in Wilmington, his home town, and thought of giving up baseball. Manager Louie Cook, however, persuaded the hard-hitting first baseman to stay.—Ottawa Journal.

A post-mortem will be held on the remains of Mrs. A. Devlin, late of Hamilton. It is alleged that she had been assaulted.

BREEZES FROM THE DIAMOND

Up in Guelph on Friday last they used old worn out balls, like sponges, and there were no others for the umpire to order in play. When Guelph only had 500 people on Saturday it is not surprising that they are trying to keep down expenses. The team, however, ought to be put off the baseball map.

Baker whom the Petes beat in the last series here with Brantford, has been suspended by Manager Kane for careless work.

Big Bill Schaeffer has been doing a lot of good work for the Guelph Maple Leafs.

Tracey may have been just good enough to lose when with St. Thomas last year, but he was just good enough to win two games from the Saints.

"Nemo" Nasher left yesterday afternoon to join the York Club of the Tri State League. Tully and Derr expect to land berths shortly.

London is scheduled for two games in Peterborough on Civic Holiday, August 12th.

The Ottawa papers admit that Big Chief Garlow outpitched Rube McManus in that 6—5 victory for Hamilton.

Of that double win for the Petes in St. Thomas, the Times has the following—

Joe Tracey, one time Saint, worked in both games for the visitors and handed up a good brand of ball. In the first game, eleven bingles were garnered of his delivery, but he succeeded in keeping them well scattered, while in the second, fast fielding saved him, and only five hits were registered against him for the seven innings. He certainly used his head in the fifth innings of the second game, when Molyneaux was safe on Rowan's error, Gurney doubled and after Graney had fouled out, he purposely passed Stewart to get Wright. All that Eddie could do was to hit a long fly to Swarts in left.

Things looked rosy fro the Saints in the seventh innings of the second game. Kiefel pinch-hitting for Molyneaux, tripled to centre field and Gurney drove a long fly to right field. Kiefel raced for the plate, but White made a beautiful peg to the plate and "Silent" was called out on an exceedingly close decision.

The Petes didn't convince anyone that they have any license to be down at the bottom of the standing. By staying there they are robbing London of what rightly belongs to Bowerman's crew.

Trout is one of the nicest catchers that has worked here this year. He is an excellent hitter also.

Trout fooled Kopp in the second inning of the first game. Kopp was on second and Tracey threw quite wide of the plate. Trout made as if the ball had gotten away from him and dropped it. Kopp sprinted for third, but he was nailed by ten feet.

Swarts, in left garden for the Petes saved the game for the visitors on a couple of occasions, pulling off hair-raising catches. In the tenth innings of the first game, with Wilde on first Powers was sent in to bat for Clements. He hit one to left centre that looked good for a home run, but Swarts got under it after a great run and pulled it down.

The Petes got all the breaks in the luck in both games and nearly every close decision was theirs.

TROPICAL MYSTERIES.

Equatorial Zone Possesses Some Riddles That Remain to Be Solved.

When the white man settles in the country of the black he brings to the latter, amongst other things, all the advantages of modern science and civilization. He throws high-speed railways across desert tracks and makes electric trams run through well-paved streets where formerly stood a cluster of mud huts. And yet there are secrets of science known to the so-called "ignorant" natives that no amount of money will persuade them to divulge to the white conqueror. There are means of communication that dwarf the telephone and there are drugs that a chemist would pay untold gold to be made familiar with.

Any doctor who has lived amongst black tribes will bear witness that the medicine man is not the empty sham he is sometimes supposed to be. He may have a lot of nonsensical remedies, but he has also one or two mysterious but highly effective cures, while he has any number of wonderful poisons; and it is to these, rather than to his healing powers, that he owes the extreme fear and reverence with which he is regarded by the natives.

For instance, they are experts at handling all kinds of vegetable products, and can produce poisons which will drive the victim raving mad, and others that destroy the brain power and cause idiocy. Some poisons will cause temporary paralysis; and the awe inspired in the native by such an exhibition of power can well be imagined. But the preparation of these drugs remains a secret the white man has never been able to discover or buy.

Different native tribes have different secrets, and some, of course, have none. The natives of Borneo have one solitary secret which, though, it is not of much practical value, is yet of immense scientific interest. It consists of reducing a human skull to a small orange, while preserving the contour with absolute accuracy, together with all the recognizable features. Even the hair is retained. And although a native will sometimes sell to a white man a skull that has been so treated, no amount of money will induce him to sell the secret of the process.

There are several well-known mysteries that have been witnessed by most travelers in tropical countries. One of these is the unscrutable power of communication over immense distances. Innumerable instances have been recorded in the newspapers of events of importance being known in the native villages hours before any known physical means of sending the news could have been employed.

For example, during the Boer war the blacks, wavering as to which side, if any, they should take, were invariably acquainted with the important events of the war long before the official news reached them. The first time this mysterious power was commented upon in the English press was at the time of Gordon's death and the fall of Khartoum which was known in the bazaars of Cairo on the very day it happened, although Cairo is some eight hundred miles from Khartoum.

Now the black will gladly sell his news to the European. But the means by which the news is obtained remains the native's priceless possession.

India, too, is the home of innumerable mysteries. The Indian conjuror is proverbial. But no European scientist or illusionist has been able to suggest even a plausible theory of how the half-naked native can enter an enclosure he has never seen before in his life and produce, from a little earth and a few stones, a mango tree in full bloom.

Kind Providence seems to have created a certain sort of people to cushion the shock produced by those of the dynamic sort.

A Simple Way to Drape a Striped Taffeta

Maison Lelong

Exclusive Copyright, 1912, New York Herald Company.

SPRING fashions have at last been sifted down to pannier dresses, draperies and short tunics, and it is probable that the American woman will accept and wear all three styles in modified form if they are sufficiently becoming to her. In the pannier gowns everything in a skirt that is draped is called "pannier," though most of them resemble little the original Louis XV. or XVI. styles.

There is always a pretty way of arranging new styles so they are suitable to each environment where they may be worn. If plenty of gowns may be acquired each season much more may be risked in the way of extreme style dressing than otherwise. To be stylishly and becomingly dressed are quite two separate points of view, and a woman who would be both must be a serious thinker and of excellent judgment.

And just here enough cannot be said as to the honest criticism reflected by mirrors. Not one little dresser mirror, but (in default of a triplicate mirror, for these are not within the means of everybody) a couple of decorative wall mirrors—that may be had for a reasonable price—placed opposite to each other, so that a full length view of the figure may be seen from all sides, and mistakes of dressing, often quite simple, may be corrected. For from these views people judge you, and as you wish to be seen, best or worst, is for you to decide.

Some of the more conservative dresses, with a slight touch only of drapery, will probably be the most popular models and have the most success—those that are draped so as not to distort the waist or skirt line—for there is nothing more feminine and captivating than a drapery composed of long, simple lines. The tunics also, both short and long, are becoming to most figures if cut across at a becoming proportion to the wearer's height. The dresses slashed up at the hem are not at all unconventional if a drop skirt matching in color of silk or chiffon is worn underneath.

There is a nice distinction between trimming a dress and overloading it, which must always be kept in mind when choosing a style this season, for some trimming has become necessary.

As the season advances the number of draped and pannier effects in dresses increases, so that these late Paris models with the season's style mark will be of interest to chronicle. The front and back of a changeable blue and black covered taffeta dress is here pictured, having a back skirt panel that is draped around at one side and finished with a shirring. There is a graceful waist draping, together with a touch of lace at the neck and of embroidery on the yoke and belt. The waist drops below the belt at the back in a fringed ruffle outline; the armhole is slightly enlarged. As it is a gown suitable for both in and out of doors, it has a double advantage.

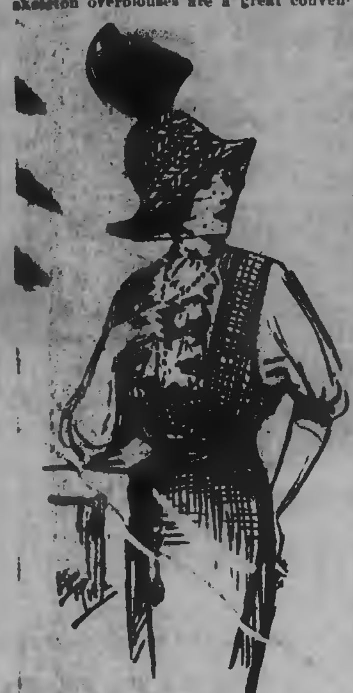
Another gown is of blue taffeta, piped with black satin, with the front panel oddly turned back and buttoned, and the skirt drapery pleated under the side edges. A slashed and shaped hem is bordered with a wide ruching. This ruching, in narrower width, outlines the yoke and covers the arm seam. There is a pretty detail in the black satin sash arrangement and the sleeve finish.

The third dress, on the most simple lines, is draped in the same movement both on waist and skirt. The model was of pale yellow satin trimmed with antique embroidery in gold and mauve tones. It is an especially good model for a woman inclined to stoutness, as the waist drapery may be swathed about the figure to give tapering lines, and the skirt drapery is so slight and placed so near the skirt hem that it does not take away from the woman's height.

Of the three hats shown, all are typical of the summer hats—low and flat, the single trimming plumes or aigrette or [illegible] placing making the style. One of Italian straw is faced with pale rose pink satin bordered with black velvet and feathers.

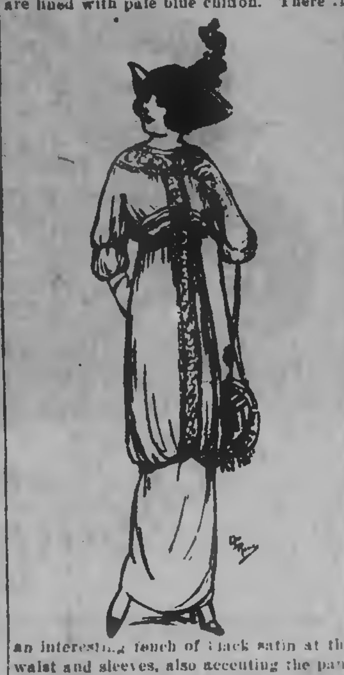
The Jumper That May Be Worn Over a Lingerie Waist.

IF there is enough material left from the spring tailored suit to make a jumper, here is an attractive design. Such skeleton overblouses are a great convenience during the spring and summer season to slip over the lingerie waist when a one piece frock effect is desired or if the day is too cool to wear the usual shirt waist without a coat.



Some of the Pannier Dresses Are Easy to Make.

THIS gown is for afternoon wear and is of fine prune color cotton voile with a good quality of imitation filet lace dyed to match. These filet bands are lined with pale blue chiffon. There is an interesting touch of black satin at the waist and sleeves, also accenting the pannier puff.



The dull black straw hat is trimmed by a single bunch of flowers arranged in the new supple spray.

Many women are using the silver mesh bag frames for velvet bags of the fashion sketched here.

A Very Simple Pannier Dress of Contrasting Materials

ENTIRELY [illegible] woman is this conservative pannier gown. It is because of the contrasting colors being placed vertically and in pleasing proportions. The black supple chiffon taffeta is draped ever so slightly at the side by three plaits taken in the material and caught in under the very wide back panel breadth. This panel is caught under in a puff, on a level with the other puffs made by the [illegible] At the top it is gathered into the belt.

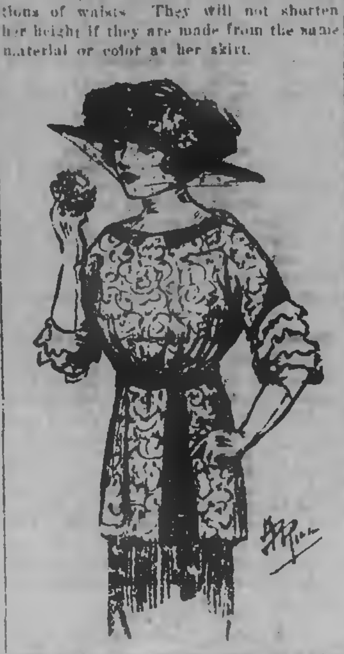
The New Tunic Blouse Is Both Smart and Practical.

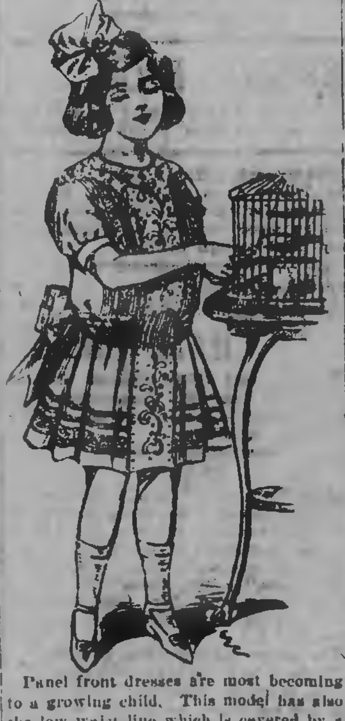
THIS pretty [illegible] is one of the many lovely models of this new style, for they are to be found in the shops in all prices, styles and materials. Nor need the stout woman hesitate to add any of these to her season's collections of waists. They will not shorten her height if they are made from the same material or color as her skirt.



These bodices may be made from [illegible]

When the Mother Has Time to Make a Lingerie Dress.

THERE is no handwork that shows to so much advantage as that put into a lingerie dress. It represents both luxury and daintiness, especially in a little girl's clothes.



Panel front dresses are most becoming to a growing child. This model has also the low waist line which is covered by a sash. The front shows a pretty and simple embroidered design, such as may be obtained in any pattern department. Some of these designs are a little difficult to arrange to cover the panel artistically, but all that is needed generally is to cut the motifs apart. A little patience in fitting these pieces together on the panel before stamping will give satisfactory results. The embroidery is a combination of English eyelet and relief. These frocks are prettiest when made of handkerchief linen batiste, the tucks very fine and hand run alternated with Valenciennes lace insertion.

How Pleats Are Shown on Some Imported Dresses.

IMPORTED spring gowns have shown us three kinds of plaits—the little fine, round, fluted plaits, the narrow pressed flat one of half inch depth and the old fashioned accordion styles.

This model, of pale tan taffeta, shows the narrow pressed plait, quaintly placed in flounces across the back. The waist seams are defined by a wide banding. The waist itself is white, but trimmed with touches of a darker blue velvet, used also on the skirt. The bolero coat is of the skirt material. There is a slight tendency toward fulness in the sleeves of both waist and skirt. It is a really smart model for a slight figure of any height.

Dainty and Washable Frock for the Little Sister.

LITTLE girls' dresses seldom look well with much trimming, but here is an exception that proves the rule. This little frock, so simple in construction that it may be made by the home dressmaker, may be made of several combinations of materials.

If for every day wear, plain chambray combined with plaid gingham is both pretty and serviceable. For the buttons the old homely china variety takes on a new look if sewed on with thread the color of the dress.

A little more elaborate frock would be smart if made of linen and [illegible], and for dancing school plain and [illegible] silk, voile and Valenciennes [illegible] the fragility that makes a [illegible] dainty and charming. The [illegible] may be made higher or lower as may be most becoming to the [illegible].

Crystal buttons may [illegible] colors, and on all such [illegible] a change from the usual [illegible] used. The simulated buttonholes [illegible] made from narrow bias bands or [illegible] braid.

MOTOR BOAT CAUGHT FIRE

Three People and an Infant Had Thrilling Experience.

Picton, Ont., July 18 — One woman, two men and a child had a thrilling escape from being burned to death or drowned when the motor boat owned by Miles Miller, of Napanee, a graduate this year of the Royal Military College, caught fire near Thompson's Point last night.

Mr. and Mrs Kidd and baby, of Napanee, and Miles Miller were the occupants of the boat when it left Thompson's Point for the family cottage in the cove. Suddenly the engine back-fired, at once a mass of flames leaped forth, and the craft was ablaze in an instant.

Seizing the cushions with which the boat was fitted, the four people jumped into the bay. The steamer Jessie Bain, Captain W. F. Bristow, which was near, immediately hove to, and her hose was played on the burning boat, and after a great deal of work the flames were quenched. A skiff meantime put out from the Miller cottage and rescued the people from the water. When the fire was extinguished the boat was towed ashore, burned to the water's edge. Mr. Miller's loss is estimated at $1,500.

A Queer Insect.

The "walking sticks," "walking leaves," etc., are among the most curious forms of insects inhabiting tropical America. They belong to the great family of phasmidaes and are as odd specimens of animated nature as one could well imagine. The type of the family is an elongated creature with a cylindrical brown body, looking exactly like a small limb or twig with the bark on. Some of the branches of this numerous family live in the torrid portions of Africa, where they attain enormous sizes. Vane, the great traveler, said he had seen them so large that "they had the general appearance of great, animated clubs moving up and down the branches and trunks of the gigantic tropical trees."

GRAND TRUNK NOTES

A pleasing tribute to the physical condition of the Grand Trunk system has been paid by no less a person than Hon. Francis Cochrane, Minister of Railways, in a recent Winnipeg interview with regard to the grain situation when he said: "It is unlikely that any blockade such as occurred last year will happen again. The railways have been making a determined effort to avoid such a misfortune and I am inclined to think that they have accomplished a great deal. The Grand Trunk particularly is in fine shape."

Fifteen new stations have been placed under construction during the past two months along the lines of the Grand Trunk Pacific, five of which have been completed. These are: Victoria Plains, Delburne, Wakaw, Totzke, Grenville, Emora, Cudworth, Lucerne, Alpiand, Geikis, Yellowhead, Edgeley, Edenwold and York Lake. Of those already under construction Hinton, Watrous, Henry House and Zehner have been completed.

Hon. Francis Cochrane, Minister of Railways has given his approval to route maps on the Grand Trunk Pacific as follows: Revision between Calgary and Coutts, and revision of the Cut Knife branch.

During the past week 1,750 passengers for Ontario and Western Canada have passed through the Grand Trunk's Bonaventure station in seven special trains, five of which came from Quebec and two from Halifax.

Effective.

At a "first night" in a Paris theatre recently one of the scenes showed a funeral procession crossing the stage. As she was about to leave the wings and pass across the stage one of the "mourners," a girl, thought of something funny and her face became wreathed in smiles and she giggled happily.

The stage manager was furious.

"Take a franc off that girl's salary!"

The startled "mourner," just making her entrance, burst into tears of dismay and sobbed lamentably all the way across the stage. The critics said it was a triumph of realism.

A new lightship will be placed at the mouth of the Fraser River by the Dominion Government.

IS A GIANT FOR WORK

SIR JOSEPH WARD ROSE FROM ERRAND BOY TO PREMIER.

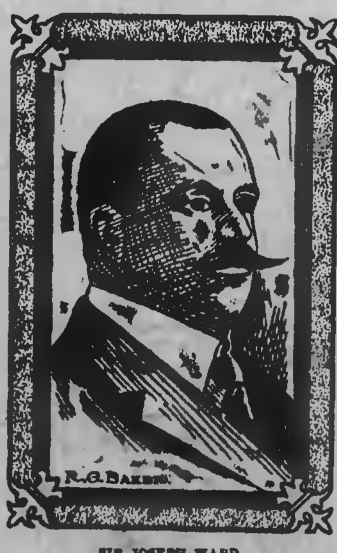
The Strong Man of New Zealand Tried Many Lines of Activity Before Finally He Went Into Business and When at Twenty-Five He Entered Parliament His Wide Experience Sent Him to the Top.

A cockly little sea boat lies far out from shore, and a tough muscular man sits fishing, hauling in huge cod as fast as line can be baited. Suddenly a huge dark form is seen advancing with a menacing rush towards the frail boat.

"Black Jack!" is the cry raised from the craft, and one of the boatmen, in a panic to put out for home, nearly topples the whole party into the water. Now "Black Jack" is a ferocious shark which has brought disaster to more than one fishing party, and there was good ground for alarm.

"Get out your oars, pull steadily for the shore and leave Black Jack to me," said the fisherman, who promptly began to sling out his best codfish in the direction of the shark. The monster swallowed his tit-bits with eagerness, and the feeding operation lasted until the boatmen were able to pull the little craft into shallow water where they were safe.

The man who thus codded the man-eater was Sir Joseph Ward, Prime Minister of New Zealand, and the resource of the manoeuvre was characteristic of the man. He got home smiling where others would have perished. His life story is largely the history of latter-day New Zealand. From a Cinderella of Colonies she has become one of the fairest jewels in the Imperial crown, and he has risen from the gutter to hold for long years a position of highest honor in the councils of the Empire.



SIR JOSEPH WARD.

Born in Australia, of English parents, in 1857, he went at an early age to New Zealand, where from errand boy he rose to the rank of telegraph messenger—his first official association with the state which he was destined to rule. Then, like Edison, not satisfied with merely carrying telegraph messages, he must learn to send them. He had qualified as a telegraph operator in six months, and his restless inquiring mind impelled him to make himself master of as many details of the entire postoffice as he was able to reach. Three years in a business house followed, then railway work, then commission trading—all in search of an education, and finally at 21 he became mayor of Campbelltown.

For five years he held this office, and then they told him that he must enter Parliament. He shrank from the idea, and the charming lady who had by this time become his wife thought with him, that the time was not ripe. "Joseph is too young," she said.

But the electors did not think so, and it is possible that though he is now temporarily in retirement, they may presently not think him too old for further service. He entered the New Zealand Parliament some thirty years ago and has never since left it.

In public life he has been the means of bringing prodigious confusion upon the prophets. The errand boy of other days blossomed into Colonial Secretary, Postmaster-General, Minister of Post and Telegraphs, Minister of Railways, and Minister for Public Health, for the Tourist Department and of Industries and Commerce. Quite a considerable share of Empire-running is comprehended by that little list.

It was an irony that Sir Joseph, so successful as a public man, should meet with reverses in private life. A company of which he is the head went wrong financially, through his having to leave its affairs to other hands, and give himself to the state. He threw up his portfolio, went into the business himself, and though he was not personally responsible for a farthing, paid off the whole of the company's debts with interest to date.

Sermon of Three Hours and a Half.

Charles II. was wont in his humorous way to say of his chaplain, Dr. Barrow, that he was the most unfair preacher in England because he exhausted every subject and left no room for others to come after him. It was indeed too much the doctor's way. When he got hold of a topic he never knew how to leave anything unsaid about it. One of his best discourses, that on the duty and reward of bounty to the poor, actually took up three and a half hours in delivering.

Feeding Great Britain.

A fleet of 250 refrigerator ships is engaged in carrying fresh meat to the British islands.

Peter Tuton, a Hamilton Italian, accidentally shot himself in the abdomen.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Wm. Dunstan, 24 Rose avenue, Toronto, a carpenter, was instantly killed yesterday when an elevator caught him and crushed his head between the shafting and the floor.

Captain J. E. Bernier has completed his plans for his expedition to the north in search of gold, diamonds and other valuable commodities. He will sail from Quebec next week.

Ten thousand guests attended the royal garden party at Windsor yesterday. Hon. R. L. Borden received special honors, taking tea with King George and Queen Mary in the royal tent.

The Duke of Connaught and Princess Patricia left Winnipeg yesterday after spending eight days there. An automobile procession two miles long followed the royal party to the station.

The cadet camp at Barriefield opened yesterday and there is a strong representation of the youth of the country from Port Hope to Cornwall and from Ottawa, Renfrew and Pembroke.

It is understood that Premier Borden is endeavoring to bring about the release of John Dillon, who was sentenced to life imprisonment for the attempted dynamiting of the Welland Canal.

Recent burglaries in Galt have been traced to two small boys, Frank Welch and George Cook, under 12, who have confessed guilt and restored most of the swag. They have been handed over to the care of the Children's aid.

Talented Musician Suffers Thirty Years Before Discovery.

It is the world's way. In the depths of misery, making a bare living for his little family by playing the piano in cheap saloons, by copying music and by substituting at the drums in orchestras, a great musician has just been discovered in Paris. The Colonne Orchestra, of which Gabriel Pierne is leader, is now playing this man's compositions, and all Paris is enthusiastic over them. The name of this genius is Ernest Fanelli. He is 53 years old and trouble has scratched deep lines in his face.

In Fanelli's Tableaux Symphoniques, written in 1883, are found all those subtle and delicate harmonies which are used now. The instrumentation is a marvel. Here and there are highly colored touches and the most picturesque harmonies. The composer has been leading an obscure and wretched existence all these years. In the evenings he played the piano in saloons; occasionally he subbed for some friend at the tympani in the orchestra at the Opera Comique. In the daytime—life is hard for poor folk!—he copied music. Then came the discovery and the playing of the Tableaux at a recent concert.

"Tears came into our eyes almost from the first bars," says M. Pierne, the leader, in describing the scene. "Never before have we of the orchestra felt such emotion. To think that such a man could remain for 30 years ignored, penniless, unhappy! There he was before us, with his head bowed. When the work was finished an enthusiastic ovation burst forth. Fanelli shrank, then slowly recovered, his body shaken by deep sobs. He came toward me and fell into my arms. We hugged each other!

"'Thank you, M. Pierne,' he said. 'I am sorry for only one thing, that Henriette could not come. She would have been so happy. But she had to work. She is my daughter. Here is my wife. I beg your pardon. Good day, M. Pierne, and a good appetite!'

"I learned the next day that Fanelli had not lunched. He had not a cent."

To-day all Paris is applauding the brilliant compositions of this master who so marvelously anticipated the music of the modern school. But think of those 30 years! It is the way of the world.

The town of Mitchell is to have a cold storage plant.

PREMIER ASQUITH ATTACKED BY DUBLIN SUFFRAGETTES

Woman Almost Sets Fire to the Theatre in Which Meeting Was Held—Hatchet Thrown at the Premier Hits Mr. Redmond.

Dublin, July 19.—The British Prime Minister received a vociferously popular welcome here last night On his arrival he was met by Augustin Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, the National leaders and the mayors of Dublin, Cork and other cities. A torchlight procession, with forty bands and thousands of lights, escorted the carriage to a hotel amid a sustained roar of welcome, the Premier constantly standing in his carriage and bowing his acknowledgements and Mrs. Asquith scattering flowers among the crowd.

Suffragettes chartered small boats at Kingstown, about seven miles from Dublin, with a view of making a demonstration on the arrival of the Premier's boat, but were prevented from doing so by the vigilance of the authorities. A serious affair, seemingly of suffragette origin, occurred, however, at the Dublin Theatre, where Mr. Asquith will speak to-day. During an entertainment a blazing chair, apparently oil-soaked, was thrown from a box into the orchestra. The curtain of the box caught on fire and the audience was thrown into a panic. Attendants extinguished the flames and order was restored. A woman who occupied the box made her escape from the theatre.

It developed later that a second woman was in the box and aided in the incendiarism. In the confusion one of the women got away, but the other was arrested. She will be examined by a magistrate to-day. She is said to be an English suffragette.

Another outrage occurred while the procession was passing Princess street. A woman threw a hatchet at the Premier's carriage.

On the arrival of the carriage at the hotel, Premier Asquith and Mrs. Asquith, John E. Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalists, and the Lord Mayor of Dublin proceeded to an elaborately decorated balcony, where Mr. Redmond publicly welcomed the Prime Minister. Great crowds gathered in the street, gave the Premier an ovation.

Mr. Asquith in a brief speech, said that this was the first time the chief Minister of the crown had visited Ireland since the act of union, and it was beyond his power adequately to thank the people for their magnificent and memorable welcome. He came on a mission of peace between artificially estranged peoples. They would not forget Grattan and Parnell now that they were entering to the fruits of the labors of these men.

The Premier said that he was the ambassador of a treaty of perpetual peace between Ireland and Great Britain, and he assured the Irish people in behalf of the Liberal party and British democracy, that they meant to bring their cause to a speedy issue.

The procession then reformed and the party drove to the vice-regal lodge, where they will be guests during their stay in Dublin.

The woman arrested at the theatre gave the name of Gladys Evans. She said she came from England. It is reported that a supply of petrol was found in the box.

According to latest reports, the hatchet struck Mr. Redmond on the head, inflicting a slight wound. It was a heavy weapon, but was not thrown with much force, otherwise it must have caused serious injury to the Nationalist leader.

Hon. Mr. McKenna Attacked.

London, July 19.—Another Minister, the Rt. Hon. Reginald McKenna, Secretary for Home Affairs, was the victim of unpleasant suffragette attentions at a public ceremony at Caerlson, Monmouthshire, yesterday. A woman burst through the spectators and seized Mr. McKenna by the shoulders and shook him vigorously before the onlookers realized what had happened. The woman was then roughly ejected.

Only last month the Home Secretary was attacked by a suffragette in the presence of the King and Queen at Llandaff, South Wales.

AUSTRALIA WILL FOLLOW THE LEAD OF CANADIANS

Antipodal Colony Is Keenly Interested in Rt. Hon. Mr. Borden's Mission and as Soon as Squadron Warrants It Will Enter Into Defence Policy —Anxious About Canada's Pacific Fleet.

Sydney, Australia, July 19.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Hon. R. L. Borden's declarations are being watched here with interest. The general feeling in Australia seems to point to readiness to claim a seat at the Imperial Council directly Australia's share in the practical defence of the Empire attains a magnitude which would warrant the claim. Meanwhile Australia is steadily proceeding on agreed lines and building up an efficient squadron.

Many Australians are anxious to hear whether Canada intends to develop a western squadron seriously with a view to the co-operation of all dominions washed by the Pacific.

The Herald recently observed: "One of the most hopeful signs of the times is the success with which Churchill has grouped the whole nation, indeed, whole Empire, behind his naval policy."

Party Press Divided.

London, July 19.—Speaking generally, the Liberal press thinks Mr. Borden's declaration that the overseas dominions shall have participation in the Imperial foreign policy and naval control as a condition of their contribution towards the navy will take a long time to work out. The Unionist press take the view that it must be done at no distant date.

There will no doubt be difficulty in giving practical effect to an ideal incontestably sound but the thing has been done. At no distant date we will be wise to address ourselves to the question before it is too late.

Will Keep Mum.

London, July 19.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—On their return from the Windsor garden party, Premier Borden and colleagues held a conference to consider recent naval negotiations with the view of definite action.

Yesterday morning, Hon. Mr. Borden had a lengthy talk with Sir William White, formerly naval constructor of the Government, and Lord Brassey.

No statement will be made until the Ministers return to Canada.

YOUNG SCHWARTZ COMMITS SUICIDE

New York, July 19.—The body of Nathan Schwartz, whose father informed the police that his son was the slayer of fourteen-year-old Julie Connors, was found yesterday morning on the fourth floor of a tenement house on Christie street. Schwartz had committed suicide by inhaling gas.

Written in lead pencil on his collar were the words: "I am guilty and insane, caused by the beautiful make-up of women, which has made me passionate."

Jealousy is the one tribute a woman pays to a man's vanity.

Ever notice that the most glaring faults are those of others!

FOUR TRENTON MEN ARRESTED

Belleville, July 19.—Patrick Reilly, John Collins, James Douglas and Robert Sparles, all young men, were arrested at Trenton and brought to the county jail here. They are accused of breaking into a G.T.R. car and stealing a number of pairs of boots. Charles Miles, who is considered a material witness for the crown, is also being held in custody.

Russo-Japanese Alliance.

St. Petersburg, July 19.—The Novoe Vremya, commenting editorially on the proposed visit of the Japanese statesman, Prince Katsura, who will arrive here July 21, says that the visit evidently is connected with the formation of a closer alliance between Russia and Japan for the defence of their interests in Asia, especially in Manchuria and Mongolia.

HUNDREDS OF MEN FIGHT LIQUID FIRE

Special to the Review.

New Straitsville, Ohio, July 19.—Hundreds of men batttled for hours last night to dam a torrent of liquid fire flowing down the hillside as a result of lightning striking and igniting three tanks of crude oil situated at the top of the hill. They succeeded in diverting the burning oil's course into a creek and saved the town.

CONSPIRATOR CONFESSES

New York, July 19.—"The trail leads where I thought it did," remarked District Attorney Whitman yesterday. This was just after he had heard the statement of "Jack" Rose, the friend of Police Lieut. Charles Becker, and the man who hired the grey automobile in which the slayers of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, drove to the spot where their victim met his fate early last Tuesday morning. Little by little the involved skein of motives and personalities behind the killing is being unravelled and it now seems probable that other important arrests would follow speedily.

Rose's surrender and his confession that he was the man who hired the "murder car," although declaring that he was not in it at the time of the shooting, were the big events of the day in the pursuit of the band who shot down the man who had accused members of the police force with being in partnership with the gamblers.

Other developments of interest and significance were not lacking, however. Mayor Gaynor took a personal hand in the investigation, sending for Lieut. Becker, against whom Rosenthal's first specific charges were made, and three other policemen. He was closeted for a long time with them in company with Police Commissioner Waldo. The outcome of the consultation was not made known, but the mayor took occasion to give out a letter he sent yesterday to the commissioner asking that Becker and the other officers be brought before him.

District Attorney Whitman had his say in a letter which he wrote to Commissioner Waldo yesterday, relating to the commissioner's request for an immediate and complete investigation of allegations of partnership between policemen and gamblers.

"The newspapers have printed my autographic statement to the effect that I do not charge the police department with the murder of Rosenthal. The insinuation that I am moved by a desire for publicity in attacking the large body of policemen on account of the wrongdoing of a few is untrue, unfair, and seems to me to be an attempt to turn public attention away from the vital point that Herman Rosenthal charged that he had been forced into partnership with a police lieutenant and that other gamblers were in a similar position."

HAVE NO USE FOR HOME RULE BILL

London, July 19.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A feature of the proceedings of the Imperial Grand Orange Council, resumed at Glasgow yesterday, was the emphatic denunciation of Irish home rule from the colonies. The proceedings opened with the reading of a letter from the Earl of Erne, imperial grand master, in which his lordship declared if home rule ever came into force, Orange institutions would be the first singled out for attack by the enemies of Protestantism. It was of vital importance that they proclaim to the world that their body was not confined to the limits of the three kingdoms, but was a force to be reckoned with wherever the British flag was unfurled.

Resolutions were received condemning home rule as a measure calculated to irreparable injury to British supremacy.

Col. Scott said thousands were being attached yearly to the Orange banner. No loyal subject of the crown could stand idly by while old Ireland, an integral part of the Empire from time immemorial, was being ruthlessly torn from her moorings. No loyal Protestant of the United States could view with equanimity the passing of the control of Irish affairs into the hands of enemies of the faith. They warned the Premier in the gravest manner possible that Ulster in resisting this bill would have the united moral and material support of every Orange jurisdicition of the world.

The next triennial conference will be held in Winnipeg.

SECOND SUICIDE ATTEMPT FAILED

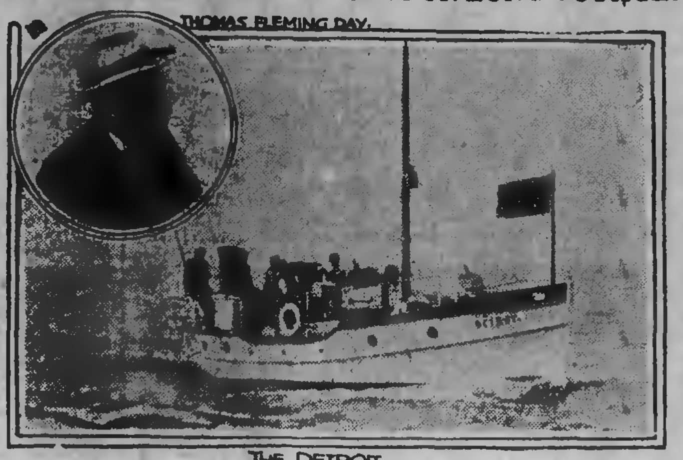
Hamilton, July 19.—To be run over by the locomotive and six cars of an express train and escape untouched, was the experience of Mrs. James Jeffries, the wife of a Hamilton switchman, yesterday morning. Mrs. Jeffries attempted suicide by throwing herself in front of the Buffalo express shortly after ten o'clock. When bystanders rushed to the place where the woman, had disappeared beneath the locomotive, they were amazed to see her pick herself up, dust off her skirts and walk away, apparently unhurt. She was taken to the police station, where she stated that once before she had tried to end her life. On the former occasion she had taken poison, but had survived the effects of the dose.

Mr. Jeffries, the woman's husband, witnessed the affair from his post a block away but did not know that the principal part in the little drama had been taken by his wife, until he was told by the police. No reason is alleged for the woman's desire to take her life. She is probably mentally deranged.

French Torpedo Boat Lost?

Toulon, France, July 19.—It is rumored that the French torpedo boat destroyer Cavalier, participating in the manoeuvres off Corsica, has been cut in two in a collision and the majority of the crew drowned. The naval authorities declare that they have no news on the subject.

LITTLE MOTORBOAT STARTS ON LONG VOYAGE.



THE DETROIT.

The motorboat Detroit has begun its long voyage across the Atlantic, having started from the New Rochelle Yacht Club, on Long Island Sound, on Sunday, July 14. Thomas Fleming Day will command the power yacht, which is only thirty-five feet in length, and will have the assistance of an able crew of three, consisting of Charles C. Earle, Jr., of Boston, a Harvard graduate, who is to act as first officer; W. Newstead, chief engineer, and Walter H. Moreton, assistant engineer, both of Detroit.

GUNPOWDER FOUND IN ROOMS OF ENGLISH SUFFRAGETTES

Dublin Police Arrest Eight Women Who Dogged Premier Asquith From London to the Irish City—Believed That They Had Planned Serious Outrages

Special to the Review.

Dublin, July 19.—Eight English women have been taken into custody in connection with the outrages perpetrated last night on the arrival of Mr. Asquith, by Suffragettes who have been dogging his steps since he left England. They are charged with complicity in the attempt made to burn the Dublin theatre where Mr. Asquith is to speak to-night.

The police found quantities of gun powder and other inflammable material in the rooms occupied by the arrested Suffragettes. It is believed that serious outrages were contemplated.

PREMIER BORDEN MEETS THE KING AND QUEEN AT WINDSOR

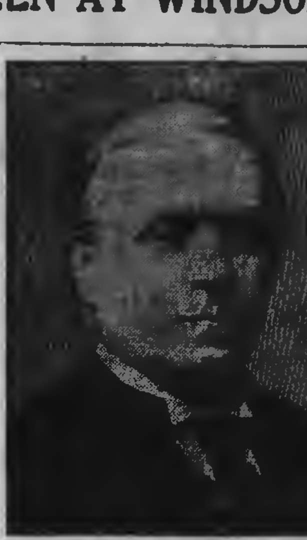
London, July 19.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The King and Queen, accompanied by several members of the royal family, gave a monster garden party on the east lawn at Windsor yesterday afternoon. Among the 10,000 invited guests were peers, peeresses, members of Parliament, representatives of the church, army and navy and many of the learned societies. Canadians were much in evidence, among those present, in addition to Ministers, being Lord Strathcona, Sir Joseph Pope, J. J. Carrick, M.P., and Hamar Greenwood, M.P.

Mis Majesty had scarcely taken his seat in the Indian tent, after a procession of the royal household through the grounds, when he enquired for Hon. R. L. Borden, who hadn't, however, arrived.

It has transpired that the Premier was on a motor trip, in company with Hon. Mr. Pelletier and Hon. Mr. Doherty. After a slight delay Hon. Mr. Borden was ushered into His Majesty's presence, accompanied by the Colonial Secretary, Hon. Lewis Harcourt. They chatted for some time and partook of refreshments.

Mrs. Borden is still confined to her room, but it is expected she will be able to be present at the state ball at Buckingham Palace to-night.

Lord Strathcona was present as a member of the Royal Society. Sir Charles Fitzpatrick was also there, accompanied by his daughter, who was presented to their Majesties, as was also Cameron Stanton, Deputy Minister of Marine and Fisheries.



PREMIER ASQUITH.

Victim of another assault at the hands of suffragettes. A hatchet was thrown at him, but missed its mark and struck John Redmond, who was riding in a carriage with the Premier.

JUDGE MONET WELCOMES CRITICS

Montreal, July 19.—Judge Monet, who attacked the Archbishop of Montreal and the Bishop of St. Hyacinthe for interdicting the priests of St. Marie Mannoir College at a meeting at St. Johns, has issued a reply to Mr. Henri Bourassa and other writers in the French press, who criticized his attitude.

He declares that as he criticized others, he has no objection to others criticizing him, but that he puts the facts before the public; and these facts have not been contradicted. No amount of personal criticism will shake these facts.

Million Hotel Near Brockville.

Brockville, July 19.—In a very short time George C. Boldt, the New York millionaire, will start on the foundation of a $1,000,000 hotel and club house on the island golf course on Wellesley Islands.

Seventh Arrest Made.

Hamilton, July 19.—Detectives Sayers and Blakley last night made the seventh arrest in connection with the outrage committed on a young woman at the head of Ottawa street, on the mountain, last Friday night. Of the seven who are now prisonerse, four are juveniles, the arrest made last night making one of this number. It was reported that the members of the gang who were at liberty had left the city and the arrest came as a complete surprise. The boy arrested is but 15 years old, and is the son of a prominent business man of this city.

Ottawa, July 19.—Henceforth the Railway Commission will allow no one to be employed in the service of the railways on engine or train service unless he has first passed a satisfactory indoor eye and ear test.

Theatres of Shakespeare's Time.

London still possesses two buildings where plays of Shakespeare were produced in the poet's lifetime. In the hall of Gray's Inn "A Comedy of Errors" was performed in 1594 as part of the grand night revels, when the audience was so numerous that there was no room for the players until some of the guests had withdrawn in disgust. And in the Middle Temple hall, opened by Queen Elizabeth in person in 1576, "Twelfth Night" was played in 1602, also as part of the revels for which the inns of court were so famous that old dictionaries defined revels as "noisy pastimes used at inns of court."

BOURASSA IS STILL RAMPANT

Montreal, July 19.—Henri Bourassa continued his pro-annexation articles yesterday.

Assuming that Germany were victorious over England, and if the United States overran Canada, he goes on:

"Let us ask the simple question, if Canada were annexed to the United States, and if Quebec became a state in the American Union, which of the rights, privileges, customs, laws, codes or charters which exist to-day in this province, would be abrogated, lessened or modified in the least degree?"

Mr. Bourassa reiterates that French-Canadians are called upon to make extraordinary sacrifices on behalf of the empire, while the only reward is a long series of humiliations.

Personally, Mr. Bourassa says that he is more British and less American than the majority of his English and French-Canadian compatriots.

Youthful Travelers.

Montreal, July 19.—Two tiny tots, George and Helen Wooley, aged 4 and 11, who arrived yesterday morning on the Royal George, traveled alone from Bristol and are bound for Toronto. Arrived at the wharf, Helen gravely instructed her brother to wait until she purchased the tickets; then, in a confidential tone to everyone in general: "Children are so troublesome, you know."

Aftermath of Glorious Twelfth.

Chatham, July 19.—The magistrate yesterday dismissed a complaint brought by the father of Frank Johnson of Wallaceburg, who was hit over the head with an ice pick by the proprietor of the Tecumseh Hotel during a 12th of July row. The bench held that both parties were to blame.

WILL TAKE OVER GRAIN ELEVATORS

Winnipeg, July 19.—The Grain Growers' of Western Canada have decided to take over the Manitoba Government elevators system, and secure control of the Fort William terminal elevators, if they can. This was decided after an animated two days' debate on the situation.

This is the climax of a four years' campaign on the part of the grain producers of the three prairie provinces and it is expected to be the entering wedge that will place all elevators in the west at the head of the lakes, and at Montreal under their control. A delegation will wait on the Manitoba and Dominion Governments at once.

Premier Roblin: "The Government has refused much larger offers, at least 25 per cent: more than what they are willing to accept from the grain-growers. This conclusion was reached from the standpoint that the elevators were bought for the fares and, therefore, it was the duty of the Government to place them at their disposal at cost."

HAMILTON POLICE HAD NEW PLAN TO CATCH MASHERS

Hamilton, July 19.—Hamilton is nothing if not original in its methods. When the police undertook to stamp out the mashing nuisance in the parks and on the streets, they impressed into the public service an innocent young man, whom they tricked out in female attire and sent him out to inveigle the young men of the city into violations of the law. His victims were many and the coffers of the city were filled to overflowing with the fines which were imposed.

But the stool pigeon for the police came to grief at last. His identity was revealed and the trick exposed. He was standing on a street corner one night, arrayed in male attire, and an officer ordered him to move on, not recognizing the adjunct to the police force in the garb which nature intended he should wear. The stool pigeon, presuming upon his semi-official position, refused to do so, and was ignominously landed in a cell

After the arrest, at the police court next morning, Magistrate Jelf, on learning who he was, advised the young man to mind his own business and leave the police to earn their own salaries. Then he fined the stool pigeon $5 for disorderly conduct, and a promising official career has been thus rudely cut short.

THOSE FACTORY WHISTLES

When a city becomes ambitious to shed the mantle of a country village one of the most noticeable improvements to be inaugurated is to put a stop to the indiscriminate blowing of whistles either by railway trains or factories. Thanks to the civic spirit of Ald. Gordon, the first mentioned nuisance has been abated in Peterboro, but the sonorous blasts of the factory horn is still permitted.

An article in yesterday's Review, voices the complaints of the residents of the north end of the city with regard to the nerve-racking noise made by neighboring factories and which for no apparent cause, disturbs the early morning slumbers of the victims. There is no real object accomplished by all this babel of sound. The plea that it is necessary to warn the employees of the approaching hours of labor, is without force, in a community where everyone can keep his own time, and the sentiment of the residents of the section referred to, is that of all citizens, who are within ear shot of a factory.

The aldermen took one step in the right direction when they put a stop to the whistling of trains within the corporate limits, but the end of the road has not yet been reached. It is well to remember that Peterboro is a city and not a mere lumber town, to the inhabitants of which the blast of a whistle is nothing more than a peremptory call to arms.

A POLITICAL IDEALIST

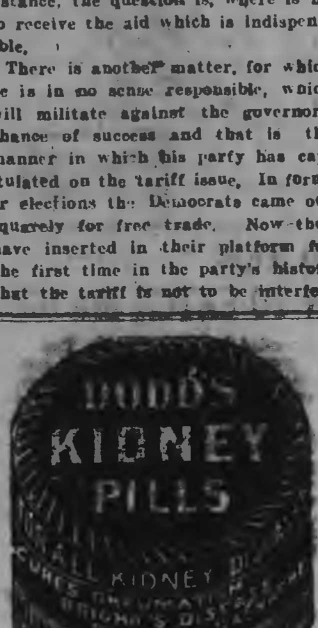
A famous French officer who witnessed the charge of the Light Brigade at Balaklava, gave utterance to the remark that has become a matter of history—"Magnificent but it is not war." By the same process of reasoning, the conclusion may be reached that the attitude assumed by Governor Wilson in his campaign for the presidency, may be that of an idealist, but it is not politics.

The scholarly Governor of New Jersey announces that he will accept no tainted money to aid him in his fight, and that he will insist that the widest publicity be given to every contribution both as to source and amount. As well might a clergyman lay down the same conditions, with regard to the donations received recieved from the members of his congregation and if he did so, the result can be easily imagined.

Governor Wilson is a youth so far as public life is concerned, and he has yet to learn that it will take money and barrels of it to finance the highly ambitious undertaking in which he is now involved. He stands for an educational campaign and as an educationist of long experience, he should know that the people cannot be instructed along any lines without considerable expenditure. No one doubts the honesty of his purpose but it would be regrettable if the services of so clean and able a man should be lost to his country, by reason of Quixotic opinions on the question of campaign methods.

He would rather be right than be president. He will not accept any financial aid from a person or corporation whose business has been fostered and whose wealth has been increased under the high tariff, to which Mr. Wilson so strongly objects. Cutting off this source of assistance, the question is, where is he to receive the aid which is indispensable.

There is another matter, for which he is in no sense responsible, which will militate against the governor's chance of success and that is the manner in which his party has capitulated on the tariff issue. In former elections the Democrats came out squarely for free trade. Now they have inserted in their platform for the first time in the party's history that the tariff is not to be interfered with in any manner calculated to injure the established industries of the country.



As Don Quixote took a tilt at the windmill so does Governor Wilson meditate an onslaught upon the tariff wall. The shock will be as severe and the recoil as sudden. Mr. Wilson is so far in advance of his party both on the main issue and the preparation for the charge that only a fraction of his friends will follow him through all his vagaries.

KEEP UP THE FIGHT

All the agitation by press and people in favor of a municipal bath house has come to naught and the season is slipping away so rapidly that nothing is likely to be done in the matter this year. It is understood that the offer of the Y.M.C.A. to supervise such an establishment, in the early stage of its existence at least, is still open. In that case the safety of the patrons would be assured and instructions given in the art of swimming until the youth of the city would be as secure in the water as on dry land.

If anything is desired by the public at the hands of the City Council there is nothing like hammering away at the matter until the aldermen yield by reason of the importunity of the petitioners. The growth of the city was not a question of a few days and it requires time to accomplish anything in the line of civic improvements but it is a good plan to keep the ball in constant motion. One thing, however, is certain and that is that before this time next year there will be a well equipped bath house on the river and that it will be one of the most popular resorts in the city.

If the Council cannot see its way to yield to the popular demand, the object in view will be attained by popular subscription and no one need be surprised if the members of the Y.M.C.A. are the prime movers. If some such organization would take the initiative no serious difficulty would be met with in collecting a sum sufficient for the purpose. An estimate of the cost would be the first essential and then the rest would be easy. There are plenty of Peterborough citizens public-spirited and generous enough to agree to make up the balance, providing a certain amount could be raised from other sources. It is really no stupendous task which confronts the supporters of the movement. All that is required is concerted action with a responsible individual or society in the lead.

A gentleman of influence in the community stated yesterday that the sum of $500 would suffice for the purpose and while he thought that it was drawing too near the cold weather season for immediate results he favored the idea of keeping up the agitation so that no time might be lost next year.

NOTE AND COMMENT

What is a city like Peterborough without a municipal bath house?

The Methodists are evidently willing to meet the Presbyterian brethren more than half way on the question of organic union.

The new five dollar notes now in circulation may be works of art, but they are just as elusive as the old style of currency.

If you can't attend the Toronto Exhibition don't worry. Peterborough is goidg to have some Fair of its own this fall.

Mr. Rowell drew a crowd of 800 at Belleville. The Conservatives of North York entertained a crowd of 25,000 at their picnic the other day. The inference is obvious.

That portion of the Laurier navy known as the Niobe is still on the dry dock at Halifax and it will cost half a million dollars to restore her formidable fighting powers.

It now transpires that the series of burglaries that so alarmed the good people of Galt were committed by two boys under the age of 12. Another dangerous case of dime novels.

That boy of yours will probably swim in secret places along the river bank until the time of ice and snow, fearing nothing but the eagle eye of the policeman. Agitate for a public bath house and let the little fellow enjoy himself in peace.

The public has long since ceased to take Henri Bourassa seriously and on that account his open espousal of the annexation spectre fails to attract more than a passing notice. Still like the mosquito, which while it can do no serious harm, is a source of discomfort, the versatile Henri is an element of annoyance in any party or community.

Humor and Philosophy

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

SOME men are so kind and considerate that they never permit work to interfere with their pleasures.

There's a subtle difference between disinterestedness and not being interested that comes out strong in the long run.

A good cook generally wants her mistress to feel the same contempt for leftovers that she does.

A pliant conscience is the most comfortable possession that a man can have.

A stiff neck is the sort most likely to be broken.

Some people are so shortsighted that they concern themselves with a fly at the end of their nose while an elephant is bearing down upon them.

The Old Favorites.

Where are the songs of long ago?
Will some strong, husky men
Go to the place where they have strayed
And bring them back again?
I weary of the ragtime rot
That rattles down the keys
And want a different brand, although
I am not hard to please.

We used to twitter tuneful lays
About the babbling brook,
About the girl who was so sweet
You took another look.
Now nature doesn't have in song
A leg on which to stand.
In place of daisies in the dell
We have the hothouse brand.

The lady, Sadie, shady type
Is now the proper tune—
The lovey, dovey, mushy sort,
You hear it with a spoon.
The honey, money, funny kind
The modern ear assails.
The Daisy, Mary, hazy brand
Of buncombe never fails.

Give us the songs of long ago
Of green and shady dells,
Of bashful swains beneath the moon
Beside the village belles,
Of old folks in the cabin home,
Of happy girls and boys,
Of grandma in the easy chair
And such sweet, simple joys.

Man and Object.

Two persons go out of the room and, after agreeing together as to what they shall represent, come back again and sit down side by side in front of the company. One of the two takes the part of some well known person, and the other represents an object which is closely connected with that person. For instance, George Washington and the hatchet or Roosevelt and the big stick, the king of England and his crown, etc.

After the two take their seats the other players in turn ask each of them a question, to which both the man and the object must answer only "Yes" or "No" until the right person and the right article have been guessed. The first player may perhaps ask the man, "Are you alive?" The man will answer "Yes" or "No" according to the character he represents. Then the object may be asked, "Are you made of wood?" "No." Then the second player in order asks a question of each, and so on along the line until all have had a turn at questioning or until the person and object have been rightly guessed.

The world's astronomers are now much interested in the planet Jupiter. This planet is the largest in our system, but is said by the scientists to be an infant in swaddling clothes so far as development is concerned. In volume Jupiter is 1,279 times greater than our own globe. But we are now full grown and, as some astronomers declare, on the downhill side of life. In other words, our little earth is in middle age and will soon be growing old. Great Jupiter, the king of the heavens as far as our planetary system is concerned, is not yet fit for life. From the latest observations of Jupiter it is supposed to be in the act of building, of solidifying. One astronomer says: "I have not the slightest doubt that we are assisting at the creation of a world. Under our dazzled eyes a new world is being created in the infinity, and in Jupiter we hail the world of the future."—Chicago News.

A Baseball Romance

Nothing happened to disturb the travelers through the night, but the alternation of three-hour periods left them in a more or less drowsy, half-dazed condition when morning came. The train was bowling along through the half-fenced, half-cultivated fields of Arkansas; Solano was nodding in his seat, and Brockett was trying to absorb some more of the Anglo-Spanish sentences, when a slowing up, a sizzling of slackened steam and a jarring stop announced arrival in the town of Little Rock. Gazing from the windows the boys were finding considerable amusement in the signs which told of racial segregation—such placards, for example, as those upon a restaurant, "White Side," "Colored Side," and other marks of sharp distinction, when half a dozen long, lean, clay-colored Arkansans came tramping down the aisle.

The conductor preceded the group of Little Rock citizens, led them straight to the double seat where Brockett and Solano were reposing, and halted abruptly.

"These young men," said he, "are the only ones aboard who answer the description. Go ahead and make your own inquiries, sheriff—that's all I can do for you."

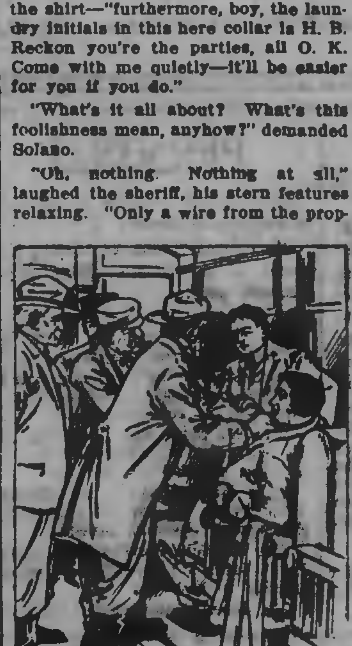
"You two boys," said the leader of the Arkansans, impressively, "had better speak right out and tell me the truth, now, and nothing else. Your names are Harry Brockett and Ramon Solano, ain't they?"

"Not exactly," parried Brockett. "My name is Thomas Jackson and my friend's name is Henry Hawkins."

"I don't believe you, young feller," dissented the sheriff, sternly. "There's nobody else on this train answers the description I've got here, and, furthermore—" with one quick clutch he twined his fingers in Brockett's collar, unbuttoned it, and jerked it from the shirt—"furthermore, boy, the laundry initials in this here collar is H. B. Reckon you're the parties, all O. K. Come with me quietly—it'll be easier for you if you do."

"What's it all about? What's this foolishness mean, anyhow?" demanded Solano.

"Oh, nothing. Nothing at all," laughed the sheriff, his stern features relaxing. "Only a wire from the proper authorities in Chicago to arrest and hold you two boys on complaint of some German feller—Baron Zollern, that's the name. Charge, stealing valuable papers. Will you come over to the lockup nice and quiet, boys, or must we carry you?"



COME WITH ME QUIETLY—IT'LL BE EASIER FOR YOU IF YOU DO."

CHAPTER XXII.

"Yes, young fellers," the sheriff continued, "you stand accused of gettin' some mighty valuable documents from the German gentleman. He'll be down by the next train to identify you, and, in the meanwhile, I'd jest better take charge of any papers or letters you two may be carryin'. Of course, I ain't sayin' he's right and you're wrong. That's to be shown at the bearin' before the proper authorities. Anyway, I'll see if you are totin' anything like what he claims was taken from him."

The sheriff thrust an inquistive hand into the front of Brockett's shirt, and at the same identical moment that section of the car seemed filled with life, animation and agitated doings. Brockett, as the sheriff bent forward, drove his knee savagely upward, and the sheriff, with a yowl of anguish and surprise, fell back, doubling up and going to the floor. His falling body completely blocked the aisle so far as his deputies were concerned, and there was really no reason why Solano should reach across the intervening space to smite one of the worthy Arkansans upon the nose. He did, however, and the deputy, falling upon his chief, made the progress of the constabulary doubly difficult. Before they could get the tangle cleared, both boys were out of the car, and were dashing up a little runway which slopes downward to the Little Rock station. They were two good city blocks away and not losing any ground when the frantic sheriff and his men tumbled from the car, and a few minutes later they vanished into a jungly network of vines and shrubbery beside the river.

The sheriff sighted the disappearing figures and trained a long blue revolver on the fast-receding Brockett. He might not have hit his target at that distance and he might only have fired in the air to frighten the quarry into surrender. However this might be, he never delivered the bullet. A small, stocky boy, intensely Irish of general feature, stumbled against the gallant sheriff at this juncture, and for the second time in two minutes the valorous official sought the sod. Rising, he aimed a well-meant kick at the youngster, who was perhaps ten feet away as the boot whizzed and then, realizing that the mishap was purely accidental, paid no further attention to the newest disturber.

"Git after 'em!" he bellowed. "Hurry along there! What are ye all, anyhow? Hookworm cases? Git a move on!" And the deputies plunged pantingly in the mad pursuit of two active young men who had a start of at least a thousand feet and every incentive to exert themselves to the utmost.

* * *

Brockett and Solano, their journey once more interrupted, lost no time in lamentations or vain objections. The circumstances were hardly suitable. They struck out through the Arkansas hills, making remarkably good time, and doing all their complaining inwardly. Baron Zollern and the epithets most appropriate to that noble German could wait, but the sheriff of Little Rock was hardly likely to do much waiting. After hustling along through the underbrush for perhaps twenty minutes, the sounds of pursuit died away to a far-off murmur, and the fugitives took breathing space, though still pushing doggedly ahead.

Clear of Little Rock's outskirts, the boys made sharp detours around several farm houses, and even dodged sundry negro cabins. Coming up to a white, rather attractive house a little farther on, they were about to skulk by under cover of a hedge, when Solano suddenly halted.

"We need something—at least, I think we'll need it awfully soon," exclaimed the Cuban, "and I think we can get it at this house. Come right along—no time to lose, but this is something we've really got to have."

A pleasant-faced old lady answered Solano's knock, and the Cuban, with the utmost politeness, apologized for the intrusion. "We would not have disturbed you," he continued, "but for the fact that we are quite a ways from a store, and we really must have some pepper. Could you favor us with a little pepper—red, if possible? We are camping out on the river-bank, and pepper is one of the things you simply can't do without when you are cooking in the woods."

The old lady, beaming upon the good-looking, gentlemanly youngsters, hastened to present them with a liberal quantity of fiery cayenne, and then urged them to sit down and rest awhile. With polite excuses Solano explained the necessity of a quick return to the imaginary camp, and they trotted off, Solano exultant, Brockett deeply mystified.

"What on earth is the pepper for, Ramon?" he demanded.

"Dogs," replied Solano. "If I know anything about these people they'll have hounds on our track at any moment. Long ago, when Cuban slaves hid in the canebrake, they used to stop the hounds with a little pepper, used at the right time and place, and the stories I had heard came back to me."

And even as the Cuban spoke the howl of a hound came down the wind—then another, and then the chorus of a pack!

Labor Fatalities Decrease.

Ottawa, July 18.—According to the industrial accident record of the Department of Labor, 62 persons were killed and 249 injured during the month of June in the course of their employment.

A comparison with the records of the previous month and of June, 1911, shows that there were twenty-eight fewer fatalities than in May and thirty less than in June, 1911.

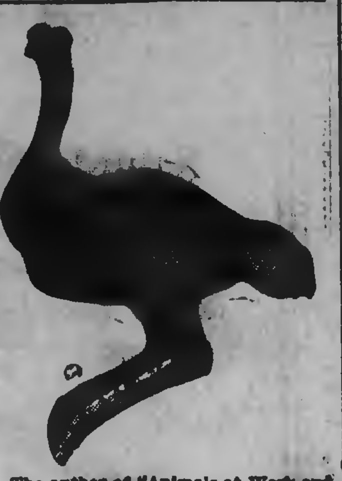
For the Children

The Funny Antics of Young Animals at Play.



The author of "Animals at Work and Play" says the faculty of amusement comes early to playful young creatures.

In the zoo the bear cubs tussle with each other, and the polar bears wrestle while standing in their pool three feet deep or try to see how long one can hold another under the water. The graceful but grotesque gnu in performing his antics cuts up the ground of his yard with his sharp hoofs. He runs about his inclosure with great rapidity, turning sharply and digging the earth at each quick turn as he wheels about. Monkeys are, of course, the master players at the zoo. How the ostrich dances about with wings spread and head swinging in a laughable way is shown in the accompanying picture.

There seems to be an inborn desire for active movement in most creatures, and by such motions they get healthful exercise as well as amusement. Advanced thinkers on hygiene tell us that the most recreative exercise for human beings may be had in play. This active movement when mind and muscle are both engaged, brings to both body and mind greater benefit than can be had from any other form of recreation. Nature long ago taught her humbler creatures this, but we have been slow to learn the lesson.—St. Nicholas.

The Game of Buzz.

The old game of buzz has been almost forgotten, but it is well worth recalling because of its fun. The more the players the greater the fun. The way to play it is as follows: The players sit in a circle and begin to count in turn, but when the number 7 or any number in which the figure 7 or any multiple of 7 is reached they say "Buzz," instead of whatever the number may be. For instance, supposing the players have counted up to 12, the next player will say "13," and the next "Buzz," because 14 is a multiple of 7 (twice 7). The next player would then say "15," and the next "16," and the next would say "Buzz" because the figure 7 occurs in the number 17. If one of the players forgets to say "Buzz" at the proper time he is out. The game then starts over again with the remaining players, and so it continues until there is only one person remaining. If great care is taken the numbers can be counted up to 70, which, according to the rules before mentioned, would be called buzz. The numbers would then be carried on as buzz 1, buzz 2, etc., up to 79, but it is seldom that this stage is reached.

Conundrums.

How does Sarah Bernhardt take her medicine? In cider (inside her).

Why is a very plain child a wonderful one? She is an extra-ordinary person.

Why is an orange like a church steeple? Because we have a peel from it.

Why are weary persons like auto wheels? Because they are tired.

In what does a lawyer resemble a woodcock? In the length of his bill.

What word will, if you take away the first letter, make you sick? Music.

Why should a ship's officer never put his chronometer under his pillow? Because he should never sleep upon his watch.

Clothing and Costume.

The words "clothing" and "costume" should not be used as if their meaning were the same. "Clothing" is what is used for protection, and "costume" is the clothing or the garments worn to meet the demands of fashion or of special occasions. In other words, "clothing" is a general term, "costume" a specific one.

Wishes.

Four leaf clover in the grass,
Tell me, do you bring to pass
All the wishes good and true
Little children ask of you?

Do your magic leaflets hold
Secrets fairies must have told?
I have wishes, one, two, three.
Will you grant them all to me?

First of all I want to know
Where the first spring flowers grow,
"Pilgrim buds" that, pink and shy,
Hide away when I pass by.

My next wish, O clover dear,
Grant to me when summer's here,
Then I want so much to know
Where the berries thickly grow.

My last wish, the best of all,
To go nutting in the fall
And find walnuts crisp and brown
That come gayly tumbling down!

Now my wishes for the year
I have told you, clover dear.
Please to grant them one and all
In the springtime, summer, fall.

Women in Baseball.

Mrs. Charles H. Havenor is the second woman to enter the field of baseball owners. As her husband's heir she inherited the Milwaukee American Association Baseball club. Mrs. Havenor has just been elected president and treasurer of the club by the directors, and she declares that she will devote her time and energies to making it a success. The St. Louis Cardinals is the only other baseball club in the world owned by a woman. She is said to have been the first woman in the baseball field.—New York Sun.

Women Can't Use This Bridge.

Women are forbidden to use the new bridge over the Rhine at Lustenau connecting Germany and Austria. Austria at first opposed the bridge under any circumstances, but finally consented to it on the condition that it should be used only by men, because women are such proficient smugglers.

CADETS AT BARRIEFIELD

Kingston, July 19.—The cadet camp at Barriefield, ushered in with fine weather, was fairly well settled, by Wednesday night. The boys began to train. Thursday morning under their instructors.

The Capital cadets, of Ottawa, the first to arrive, compose the largest unit in camp, being an established battalion. They are a fine body of boys. Lieut.-Col. W A R Badger is the officer commanding, with Maj. M Fellows, Capts. W V B Riddell and J Horwitz, and a number of other officers assisting. There are five companies, with a number of Jewish boys in the battalion. Scoutmaster Thomas, of Ottawa, is acting as quartermaster. Mr. Thomas has seen a good deal of active service, being through the South African war, the Zulu rebellion, and has served in the South African constabulary. He is very much interested in and is popular with the boys.

The Peterboro high school has a creditable turnout in camp. Lieut. C. E. Jamieson is in command, assisted by Lieuts C. A. Henry, of the 45th Regiment, and Lieut. Kelly of the 57th Regiment of Peterboro. Mr. Kelly is the new history master for the local Collegiate Institute. The sergeant-major is Henry Portsmouth

The Trenton boys, by many are said to present the best appearance of any corps in camp. The uniform is khaki, with red shoulder straps.

A DEAR JAG

A man named Robinson from Port Hope being intoxicated at the G.T.R. station here on July 12th morning, kicked up a row and used very bad language. The Chief took him in charge and instead of celebrating in Peterborough he did penance in the cooler, and that evening was assessed $30 and costs by R. J. Doak, J.P. He got the money together next day and is no doubt now a wiser if not a poorer man.—Millbrook Reporter.

MEN ARRESTED HERE ACQUITTED OF THEFT CHARGE IN BARRIE

Barrie Advance.—On the night of July 9th or very early on the morning of the 10th Mr. W J Gicks, proprietor of the Railroad House, Allandale, lost $200, which he claims someone stole from a bedroom in the hotel. On July 10th, two boarders, Stanley Cooper, a married man aged 24 and James Steinburg, single, aged 18, disappeared. Suspicion naturally fell upon them, and P. C. Sweeney was sent to Peterborough to bring them back on Thursday. Cooper, when arrested, had $3 in the toe of a boot he was wearing, while Steinberg had $2 tucked away in a shoe in a valise. Altogether they had only $8.60 between them, and it began to puzzle the officer where they had put the balance of the money, if they had taken it.

Yesterday they appeared before P. M. Radenhurst, with Crown Attorney Cotter prosecuting. They pleaded not guilty and after hearing the evidence of four or five people connected with the hotel and the two men, the magistrate acquitted them. Crown Attorney Cotter said suspicion pointed strongly to them as the guilty parties, but as the evidence was purely circumstantial, they were given the benefit of the doubt. The men claim Cordova Mines as their home, and they had been working for an Allandale carpenter.

Martin Lura, a Galician cobbler shot his wife at Edmonton because of jealousy. She may die.

PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE HAS NEW LOCATION FOR BRIDGE

Ald. Buller Would Have One With Approaches at Rink Street and Property of Peterboro Lumber Co.—By-law Authorizing Sewer Work Passed—Life Saving Appliances for the City—No More Floods on Aylmer Street.

At the special meeting of the City Council, last night, a by-law was passed authorizing the construction of sewers on Brock, Bethune, Concession and Dalhousie streets as recommended by the Board of Health.

TO MAKE A CLEAN-UP

The Board of Health also recommended that a man be stationed at the dumping grounds, at the foot of Charlotte street so that attempts at placing deleterious matter there could be stopped. The Board further asked that the market square be cleaned regularly. Ald. Buller suggested the remedy and on motion, he was given power to act.

CORNER NEWS STAND

The small wares vendor, whose stand is at the mouth of the laneway west of the Times building, sent a largely signed petition, asking that he be given permission to have a stand at the corner of Hunter and George street.

This stand would be similar to those to be seen in Toronto. The man in question is a cripple. He would sell newspapers and staple articles.

Council did not receive the application very favorably, although Ald. Duncan supported.

It was pointed out by His Worship the Mayor, that a merchant might object to the stand being placed outside his place of business. The merchant paid the taxes and he was the man who should get the business.

The Finance Committee will take up the question. Ald. Brown said he was questioned by a merchant, who intimated that more than one party was operating under one peddler's license.

Council held it was up to this merchant to communicate with the police.

The fact of the peanut and pop corn vender, a foreigner, having been doing business, at a stationary stand was also remarked upon. The by-law says he must keep moving.

LIFE SAVING APPLIANCES

Ald. Gordon recommended that grappling irons and life belts be placed at points along the waterway. Belts cost $5.50 each.

NOT A BAD IDEA

Ald. Johnston thought that all boats, large and small, plying on the Otonabee, should contain life saving appliances. Council however has no power to enforce such regulations.

DANGEROUS FOR PEDESTRIANS

Ald. Graham reported that on Sunday evening, a lady fell on Maria st. and was injured. The board walk will be repaired, to do service till the sidewalk gang arrive in that district.

Attention will also be given to Munroe Ave., and the corner of Reid and Dalhousie streets.

NEW SITE FOR BRIDGE

The People's candidate moved that the Mayor with Ald. Gordon and Anderson be a committee to look into the question of a bridge from the McDonald estate to the property of the Peterboro Lumber Co. Rink st. must be defined, soundings and other work done and a right of way secured from the Peterboro Lumber Co.

Mayor Bradburn pointed out that the cost of the necessary swing and maintenance would be considerable.

Ald. Buller however held that, at this point was best for the city. It was a better proposition than the one suggested from Dalhousie street and on which the engineer is now working.

Ald. Brown seconded and the scheme will receive the attention of the committee named.

Ald. Brown said a section of the road and sidewalk west of Williams street on Sherbrooke street, was "dippy." Ald. Buller replied that this work was on the list.

The city engineer will report on the question of placing a relieving pipe on London street at the corner of Aylmer as moved for by Ald. Johnston and Gordon.

This pipe would assist in carrying off the water should there be repetition of the flood which caused inconvenience and damage at this point last spring.

Ald. Buller's Board of Works report was adopted.

THREE YOUTHS FINED FOR USING NET IN FISHING

Police Officer Found Net Under Clothes While Boys Were Swimming.

For fishing with a net in violation of the Act, three juveniles giving their names as Ellis Armstrong, Leonard Quinlan, and Wm. Thompson, were each fined $6.10 this morning. The net which was confiscated was produced in court, it being found by the police constable lying under Armstrong's clothes on the river bank, at the old Rogers dam. The boys were in bathing attire at the time and attempted to escape when the officer hove in view. They refused to come out and get their clothes. Armstrong sent home and secured some fresh apparel.

The latter is a cousin of Jesse Airriess who is wanted by the police, and against whom there is a $50 outstanding fine.

A friend in court came to the financial rescue of the trio and paid the fines.

BACK TO LINDSAY

The blackest white man I have seen was the opinion of Magistrate Dumble or a man named Charles Sherben arrested by Detective Pinchin, for sleeping and riding in C.P.R. box cars. His skin was swarthier than an Italian, and he scarcely spoke louder than a whisper. To chief Thompson he said he came from Lindsay.

"I think he had better go back there" said His Worship, and he was ordered by Chief Thompson to report to Chief Chilton on his arrival.

EARLY CLOSING

Charged with a breach of the by-law, calling for store closing, N. Sukloff, proprietor of a Jewish clothing store was allowed to go with a warning.

D. O'Connell represented the defendant.

Sukloff admitted that a man was in his store after seven o'clock, but owing to the party having left town no evidence could be submitted.

Mr. Sukloff promised to be more careful in future.

OSBORNE MADE BAD START AND INDIANS BEAT HIM

Home Run With Three on Gave London Big Lead —Beard Hit for the Circuit—Manager Rowan to Get Shortstop Brant—Caps Play in Hamilton To-day.

London, July 18. — London again walloped Peterborough to-day in the second game of the series. Fox's home run with three on the paths in the initial round, putting the victory out of reach of the visitors before the battle was well started. A four-sack swat, a double by Gilhooley, three passes and a wild pitch were merged for five runs in that session alone. Fitzpatrick took up the hurling for the Tecumsehs at the commencement, but was knocked from the box in five innings, Reitzman succeeding him.

Albert V. Garrett, manager of the Niagara University team, will be engaged to take charge of the London Club. First Baseman Powell, who had some differences with the club will rejoin the team, and Brant, a shortstop will be sold to Peterborough, Manager Rowan being anxious to secure him.

BAN JOHNSON ON THE AMERICAN LEAGUE RACE

"The baseball race for this year's American league pennant is not over yet by a great deal; in fact the real race is only just about to start." Such was the quick sizing up of the situation by Ban Johnson, president of the league, on his flying trip to this city in company with Charles Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox.

The finishes in the Johnson organization every year have been such as to make it almost impossible to pick the winner until the last game has been played.

This year, according to the ruler of American league destinies, the race is going to be closer than ever.

"Boston is undoubtedly the surprise of the season," said President Ban. "The Red Sox have been playing not only clever but consistent ball. Also have they accomplished what no other American league team has done this year, namely, to keep right on winning. The other likely contenders for the 1912 flag—Washington, Philadelphia, and Chicago—have all hit the fence at some time or another, but have all come back in good shape.

"I am not saying that there is any reason for Boston to slip up now, but I do say that the present standing of the teams is such as to make it anybody's race.

"The Red Sox have shown remarkable hitting and fielding qualities, while their pitchers have stood up against the very best in the country, and I mean what I say.

"The Athletics of Philadelphia are not two-time world's champions for nothing and yet Boston has come out on top.

"I am justly proud of Connie Mack's team, and I am looking for it to come strong in the second half of the schedule. Washington and Chicago are also putting up a magnificent fight, and as all four teams are now going their best, it appears very much as though either one could win out."

The unfortunate incident connected with the Detroit club is much regretted by the American league chief.

"It was unfortunate in a way, but may prove of benefit to the club.

"Detroit has always been a big factor in American league pennant fights, and had the Tigers been up in front this year there would have been an interesting contest between two western and three eastern clubs."

Looking into the future Mr. Johnston predicted that there would be at least six clubs fighting for first place.

"No, I am not going to say which club. St. Louis and New York both started bad. Cleveland also failed to keep up. Now the Naps are working better together, and both the Browns and Yankees are building up for next year."

Even knowing beforehand what the answer would be to his query, the writer could not refrain from asking the American league leader's views on the National league struggle.

A hearty chuckle and a slap on the shoulder came with the following:

"I will tell you that at the end of the season—it makes very little difference to us. We will be as ready to meet New York again as we would be to clash with Pittsburg or the Cubs."

The coming week will show whether or not Connie Mack will be able to make good on three world's championships in a row.

Three more games are scheduled with Cleveland to-day and to-morrow, after which the White Elephants will play six games in four days with Detroit. The Athletics are banking on a strong wind-up now that Bender, Coombs and Plank are at their best and with Carl Brown to fall back upon.

Here at home the Yanks will continue with St. Louis until Wednesday, when they will take on the Naps. In the meantime the Giants will finish up in St. Louis before switching to Pittsburg, changing off with Brooklyn.

EASTERN FEATHERWEIGHT TO THE FRONT.

"PATSY" KLINE.

"Patsy" Kline, the Eastern featherweight, is forging to the front in great shape. His recent victory over "Young" Wagner stamps him as a boy worthy of consideration for championship honors. There is a move on to match him with "Johnny" Kilbane, the conqueror of Attell.

Orton Costigan, a 16-year-old Preston boy, was killed when a gun went off accidently in a boat.

A FAIR QUEEN.

The image in the dry goods store,
The lady who beguiles
As in the window case she stands
And shows the latest styles,
Looks very pretty to the eye—
Grace is with her a knack—
But give me one of lesser charms
Who at me will talk back.

I like to see her standing there,
So modest and demure.
Her smile would melt a stony heart.
Of that you may be sure.
But what are smiles of frozen wax,
Although a work of art,
Compared to those of flesh and blood
And lips that close and part?

The lady is a fairy queen.
I see her standing there,
And I admire her winning ways
And how she curls her hair,
But she is safe from any harm,
As far as I can see.
I wouldn't steal her if I could
And take her home with me.

Proud beauty, though I must admit
You are a girl of class,
Without a single throb of heart
Your window I can pass.
With no suggestion of regret
On you I turn my back.
You lack—it is a fatal lack—
The gift of talking back.

Too Expert.

Mr. Grahame-White tells a story of a Frenchman whose sweetheart went off on a long holiday. During her absence, of course, the poor Frenchman was very sad, but when she came back he seemed even sadder.

"What's the matter with you?" a friend asked.

"I'm worried about my sweetheart," muttered the Frenchman. "You see, since her return she kisses so much better than she used to!"

WIRELESS MESSAGES.

Method by Which They Are Transmitted Through the Air.

The means by which wireless messages are transmitted are not generally understood. It is impossible to go into details, but a few suggestions are offered which may satisfy those not inclined to deeper study.

As is known, light and heat move in waves whose lengths can be measured. Thus the sun gives out in every direction light in a series of undulating waves, which may not only be measured, but deflected, polarised and so on. Some idea of this may be gained from the well known fact that when a stone is thrown into a smooth pool of water a series of circular waves extends in all directions. If any floating objects come within these waves they are oscillated.

It was the lamented Professor Hertz who discovered that electricity, like light and heat, also moves in waves which may be measured. Just precisely how these waves pass through the atmosphere is not wholly understood, but it is believed that they have some relation to the ether of space, which is omnipresent and which is believed to constitute all matter under different negative electrical conditions. In wireless telegraphy a series of Hertzian waves is set up by powerful electrical dynamos or batteries, and these are discharged from the top of a high mast or pole. These waves extend in all directions, and—unless their force is expended by distance—excite certain effects in the receivers of wireless telegraphy instruments within the zone, just as the waves disturb chips on a pond. Messages are sent and received somewhat on the plan of the ordinary Morse code by wires, in that electrical impulses are regulated so as to spell words according to a code.

In recent years many kinds of receivers have been used, and the process is now simpler than formerly, but any successful transmission of waves depends a good deal on the state of the atmosphere, electrical storms being disadvantageous. Also when many wireless outfits are working in the same zone much confusion results and often messages are transmitted with great difficulty and sometimes not at all.

To Marconi belongs the credit of making a practical success of the discoveries of others, but to Hertz belongs the credit of making the system possible.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

THE TAYLOR FORTUNE

The Montreal Star has the following to say regarding the Taylor fortune, a reference to which was made in yesterday's issue of the Review:

"For the past few days detectives in Montreal have been busy hunting up any who might be heirs of the late Dr. Taylor, and Mr. W. M. Taylor, of the C.P.R., has been definitely established as a descendant. Chief of Detectives Carpenter has been interested in the case, and it is believed that no stone has been left unturned to find the heirs.

News of the fortune first came to Montreal through a letter, addressed to Mayor Lavallee, from Adison Terrace, Grieff, Scotland, the writer explaining that Rev. Dr. Taylor was his grand uncle and that the original family estate is now about to be divided. The writer was of the opinion that Peter Taylor, of Vanderherst, was the real claimant for the fortune, apart from other heirs turning up. The claim of Mr. W. M. Taylor, of Montreal, however, will now have to be considered.

DR. TAYLOR PROMINENT FIGURE.

Mr Taylor, when seen in his office this morning, said he could not make any announcement until it had been established beyond a doubt, that he was one of the beneficiaries. He admitted that he was a member of the family, but there would be scores of Taylors claiming the fortune, and until the matter was finally settled he could not say anything for publication. He said this money was left in trust about a hundred years ago, and it was just now maturing.

Rev. Dr. Taylor is among the most prominent names in the Presbyterian history of Montreal, and the present Taylor Church is named after him. He was at one time pastor of the old Erskine church when it was on Lagauchetiere street. He died about thirty-four years ago. During his life time the Taylor estate was kept in trust.

In the letter to the mayor from Scotland, Robert Taylor gives the following information:

"The late Rev. Dr. had three sons. One was a doctor, and the youngest son, James, was connected with the banking business, and should James be alive, he would be about eighty years of age. Should the sons be deceased, there will be some grandchildren to represent my grand uncle I am sure they will be able to assist in establishing our claim to this great fortune of over five million pounds."

Mr. W. M. Taylor has written to Scotland in connection with the matter.

LIGHT HOUSE KEEPER HAD NARROW ESCAPE

The Lindsay Post says:—William Neddo, light-house keeper, narrowly escaped drowning last evening in the Scugog River, about 8.30 o'clock. Neddo was returning after his work of lighting the lamps, when the accident happened. He was in a skiff in tow of the Government tug, Harcourt, which also had a scow in tow. The skiff, being the nearer to the Harcourt.

When near Mr. John Carew's mill, Mr. Neddo cut loose from the Harcourt and endeavored to get out of the path of the scow, but did not succeed and the scow went right over him and Mr. Neddo came up after the scow had passed. He swam a short distance but went down again, and would have drowned had it not been for the prompt action of an employee of the Baker Lumber Co., named Powles, who secured a punt and went to Mr. Neddo's assistance, grasping him by the hair. Mr. Neddo is none the worse for his experience and to-day is around as usual.

WERE AT CHURCH ONLY TWO HOURS AHEAD OF TIME

Some interesting stories come from Orillia, where Daylight Saving was given a trial and then abandoned.

One boarding house lady said—"I think I should have gone crazy had it continued. Some men were to go to work at six, others at seven. We had to get up before five o'clock and prepare two breakfasts. Hardly had we cleared off the last when the first ones were returning at eleven o'clock for dinner, then the rest at twelve. That was two dinner times. Same at supper time, we had no time for rest at all."

The Catholic Church held services on Sunday at the old hour, but the Anglican church changed to the new time. The Methodist and Presbyterian Churches, did not change at first but did afterwards.

An amusing story is told of one family where the lady moved the hand of the clock forward one hour and went to bed. Her husband came home late and moved the clock on an hour also. On Sunday morning they went to Church where service was at the old time. They were, therefore, two hours ahead of time.

The hotels, too had trouble in catering to local boarders and guests who had to use standard time because trains used it.

WHERE ARE YOU THINKING OF SPENDING YOUR VACATION ?

Some Useful Hints on How to Prepare for Your Annual Holiday and The Different Kinds of Places in Which You May Find Amusement.

Nowadays there is no known escape from the problem of where to spend those two weeks' holidays. You are possessed of a mad desire to pack into twenty-four hours, sufficient good times and health to last you for another year. For months ahead, you have been debating where to go, what to do, and more important than either, wondering if your pocket book will be thick enough to last out.

Your vacation approaches and the problem is not settled. It is the same every summer, and is but another argument against prevalent methods of holidaying.

What you want to do next summer is to decide not to anticipate your vacation. Don't let your mind dwell upon it. Your outing will be more enjoyable. Then when the day arrives, pack your suit case; do it coolly, calmly and without perspiring. Hie off on the next boat or train to the first place that strikes you as being a good spot. If the place you stayed at last summer was all right why not try it again? Depend upon it you will have a good time. You will avoid the mental worry, the indecision and often the anguish of modern methods of preparing for a holiday.

A last word of advice—it is not a bad idea to sometimes spend a holiday at home.

Speaking of holidays it must be borne in mind that every person has his or her own visions or ideal of a perfect outing. The man who likes to be lazy under a spreading tree on the bank of the proverbial babbling brook, will not harmonize with the man who likes the outdoor social swing, inseparably associated with a gay summer resort. Music may have its charms and he may like to see sport at any time, but a rest is a rest, and no frivolties for him. Give him a fishing pole and a shaded stream on the river bank and he is content to squat for hours, whether it is biting day or not for the fishes. Or a good book and some fragrant pipe tobacco and Paradise will lose some of its attractions.

Or again, the tired city dweller may have visions of a blissful existence down on the farm. He has read of the odors of the sweet-mown hay, the delights of driving the cows to pasture, in fact of the lazy life that can be tasted there.

So Mr. City-Dweller goes to the country. For a few days all goes well. The folks treat him nicely and make him welcome. But some way he feels like an outsider. He gets an inkling that he is in the way. Oh no, the farm's no place for a man with nothing to do. Everybody works on the farm, and a city man with his delightful ignorance of farming is not the most entertaining kind of a mortal.

SYNDICATE MAY BUILD BIG HOTEL IN PETERBORO

Montreal, July 19.—A gentleman from the West passing through here, made the announcement to some friends that an effort was being made to form a syndicate to build first class hotels in Brockville, Kingston and Peterborough, respectively. He outlined the scheme and believed from the experience with the Quinte at Belleville that these hotels could be made successful.

One of the difficulties in the way seemed to be a proper site at Kingston, and two had been suggested with a further hint that Kingston might grant a site, fixing the assessment and water rates for a number of years.

The three hotels will be owned by the same people and the methods of management will be identical.

FARMERS TO BE INSTRUCTED IN BEST BUSINESS METHODS

Those who have followed the work of Dr. James W. Robertson, on behalf of agriculture, are aware of his confidence in the value of illustration or demonstration in the teaching of better methods of farming. During his recent tours of European countries Dr. Robertson has become further convinced of the good influence upon the community of well managed farms. The Committee on Lands of the Commission of Conservation, of which Dr. Robertson is chairman, has introduced a new system of Illustration Farms throughout Canada with a view to demonstrating the locally great advantages of a proper system.

This work was undertaken because the agricultural survey conducted by the Commission for the past two years on one hundred average farms in each of the provinces, showed unmistakably that the farmers were not getting from their land all that they should. The illustration farms, situated in every province of Canada, are not the property of the Commission. The plan is to select an average farm in a given locality whose owner agrees to be guided by the advice of the agricultural experts provided by the Commission and make it an illustration centre for the neighborhood where the surrounding farmers can meet and receive practical instruction. In this way it is hoped that the farmers can be led to see that they can produce larger crops with the means within their grasp.

During the past session of Parliament Dr. Robertson laid this matter before the Select Standing Committee on Agriculture and Colonization of the House of Commons. In his address he pointed out that arrangements are being made whereby the illustration farms will receive visits two or three times a year from two of the best experts on farming in the whole country. The visits will be made for investigation, for counsel, for advice, for making plans, all within the means and the desire of the farmer himself. The object of this work is to bring about better farming, better business and better living. A large issue of Dr. Robertson's address has been printed for free distribution by the Publication Branch, Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

FRIENDS CONGRATULATE ROBERT HOPE ON HIS ATTAINMENT OF 100 YEARS

Rarely is it the lot of man to weather the vicissitudes of this life, and live to celebrate his hundredth birthday, retaining the activity of a much younger man, and the possession of every power and faculty. Yet the hamlet of Villiers, in Otonabee township, can point with pride to Mr. Robert Hope, who yesterday became a centenarian, and who is now the connecting link between Otonabee of the years gone by, and the present day.

HE LIVED WELL.

This grand old man, as he most truthfully can be termed, is one of the marvellous examples of what an active early life, simple living, and good habits will do. Mr. Hope's life, up to the time of his retirement from active work, was by no means a bed of roses, or blessed with the luxuries of modern days. It was a period of hard, unremitting toil, instituted by necessity and the wholesome ambition to become comfortably fixed for later years. In this he was eminently successful, prospering greatly, and possessing now 200 acres of the finest and richest land in Otonabee.

In the life of Robert Hope there is material enough to write for hours and then much would be left untold.

He was the son of John Hope, of Vendrum, England, who emigrated to Canada in 1815, at the close of the war between Canada and the U.S. His father landed in the United States and lived there five years, coming north into Canada in 1821, settling on Lot 20, concession 3, of Otonabee.

A SON OF ENGLAND.

Robert Hope was born in 1812 in Northumberland County, England, just one hundred years ago yesterday. He lived under the parental roof until twenty-one years of age, leaving it to learn the trade of millwright and carpenter, at which he labored the major portion of his life.

In 1846 he purchased fifty acres of land, on Lot 18, concession 3, Otonabee, retiring from his trade at the age of fifty, taking up agricultural life. Later he bought one hundred and fifty acres more land, upon which he has resided ever since.

Such in brief is the sketch of his life. But into those years have been crammed experiences and incidents which make splendid stories. Up till recently Mr. Hope delighted to recall events of the past, relating them with a facility and readiness that appeared really wonderful. He would tell of houses which he had helped to construct, of places he had worked, of people, long deceased, whom he had known, and in fact, innumerable instructive and absorbingly interesting events.

Up till four years ago Mr. Hope liked to walk up the road to the blacksmith shop every morning. There he would test his strength to see if he was failing. It was his habit to lift the big anvil, weighing about one hundred pounds, in itself a good lift for many younger man. The old man was able to lift it, until one morning he found it too much, and since then he has given up the custom. It was a sore disappointment to him to be forced to give up the practice, and he expressed the opinion at the time that he feared he must be failing.

HE NEVER MARRIED

Mr. Hope was never married, although when in a confidential mood he will tell you that he once had a love affair. A woman came to visit him a little while ago and Mr. Hope is said to have told her that he came near being her father. The visitor's mother appears to have been the centenarian's youthful sweetheart, but the affair never developed into a marriage contract. The old saying therefore holds good with Mr. Hope, that "'tis better to have loved and lost, than never to have loved at all."

Mr. Hope has always had regular habits. His only form of mild indulgence is his beloved pipe. He rises at seven o'clock every morning, and retires early in the evening. His time is spent quietly during the day, poking around the house and farm, and taking a keen interest in whatever is going on.

Mr. Hope is a staunch and life-long Conservative. At the last election, he was driven to the polls, stepped out of the rig and marked his ballot and for days after that folks remarked how cheerful and extraordinary spry he looked. He said himself that he felt better and was exceedingly proud of his ability to still go to the polls.

About seventy-five to one hundred friends and relatives of Mr. Hope gathered at Mr. and Mrs. James Dickson's place with whom Mr. Hope lives yesterday afternoon. Everybody was given a supper, such as only can be served on the farm. All of the older farmers of Otonabee were present to congratulate the popular and honored centenarian, and extend their heartiest greetings.

Mr. Hope was greatly touched by the evidences of friendship that everywhere greeted him.

THEY MADE SPEECHES

Speeches were made by some of the old timers, boyhood friends of Mr. Hope, who spoke reminiscently of their experiences in the days of long ago.

A PRESENTATION

Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., took occasion during a congratulating address to present the aged marvel, with a handsomely mounted and striking portrait of Mr. Hope, as he looks to-day. The picture is remarkably true and Mr. Hope was more than delighted with the gift.

Ald. A. G. Gillespie, Squire Breckenbridge, John Lancaster, Samuel Armstrong, Frank Birdsall and others all extended hearty congratulations to Mr. Hope, referring to his honored and respected character and wishing him the very happiest returns of the day.

Through the kindness and courtesy of Ald Gillespie, who placed his auto at the disposal of the press, the Review is indebted for the opportunity of being present at the birthday celebration.

QUEEN'S PET NAME.

How Her Majesty Became Known as "Lu."

Many royalties have pet names, though they are never called by them except by members of the royal family, says a "Tatler" writer. Her Majesty when quite a little girl was called "Lu," and Queen Mary has in her possession a beautiful picture book given her by the late Empress Frederick, in which the words, "To dear Lu," are inscribed on the first page above the Empress' signature. Her Majesty's nurse used to sing a lullaby song to her royal charge about a little girl named "Lulu," a name which greatly pleased the baby princess, and which she insisted on calling herself by when learning to talk. The Queen was always called "Lu" by the members of the royal family until she was 10 or 12, when the pet name fell into disuse, partly owing to the fact that Her Majesty's mother, the Duchess of Teck, did not like it, and considered, rightly no doubt, that it was much more suitable for the princess to be called by her own name.

For some little time Her Majesty was called Mary, but subsequently became of course known as the Princess May. King George was known in his younger days as Albert. This was not a pet name, but His Majesty was so called at the desire of Queen Victoria, who at one time wished that His Majesty should be known as Prince Albert. The late King, however deemed it wiser that the prince should be called by the name of George; it was not, however, until the death of the Duke of Clarence that it was definitely decided that the then heir to the throne should be called by the name by which the monarch is now known. Albert is, of course, one of His Majesty's names. The Prince of Wales, though frequently spoken of as Prince Eddy, has never been so called by any member of the royal family. Both King George and Queen Mary have always disliked the contracted name, and so also did King Edward and Queen Alexandra.

When Mr. Hansell first came as tutor to the royal children he was instructed by King George not to allow any boys with whom Prince Edward might come in contact to call the prince "Eddy," and the royal children were never allowed to do so. It may be noted, by the way, that none of the children of the royal family have ever been called "baby" after a year old. From their very earliest years they have all either been called by their own names or by some pet name, but never "baby." The royal princes after the age of four were styled "Sir" by their attendants, and the Princess Mary has been addressed as "Madam" or "Your Royal Highness" by her maids since she left the nursery. The Princess Mary is sometimes called "Bessy" by her brothers. Queen Elizabeth was her favorite character in English history, and the frequency with which the princess would refer to the admirable characteristics of her heroine led to her being styled "Bessy" by her brothers.

No royalty has been called so persistently by her pet name as has the Queen of Norway, who for years has been known as "Harry" among her immediate relatives. The origin of the name is doubtful. The story is that the Queen, who was a very swift runner when she was a little girl, once expressed a wish to a visitor at Sandringham that she had been called "Harry." "Why so?" asked the visitor. "Because," replied the princess, "I would have been a boy then and could wear boys' clothes which are much easier to run in," and ever since the princess has been called "Harry" by her relatives. Whether the story is true or not, the pet name has clung to Her Majesty since she was quite a girl, and she is usually addressed by King George's children as "Aunt Harry." The Queen of Norway does not object to the name at all as did the Duchess of Argyll to the pet name of "Connie," which sobriquet was bestowed on Her Royal Highness several years ago by some members of the royal family

A Historic Jewel.

An emerald, which was once the talisman of the Mogul emperors, and which, with the Koh-i-Noor diamond, formed part of the loot carried to Persia by Nadir Shah, the conqueror of Delhi, is being exhibited in the show-rooms of a Bond street jeweler. This historic gem is the most precious piece brought from the east by M. Jacques Cartier, who went out to the Durbar for the purpose of studying and collecting Oriental jewels. The emerald weighs 78 carats, and is of a fine deepsea color. It is in the form of a flat oval, slightly over an inch in length and a quarter of an inch in thickness. About the edge is the following inscription in Persian: "He who possesses this charm shall enjoy the special protection of God."

Quaint Signposts.

In the neighborhood of Warmbrunn, in the Silesian Mountains, there are to be found some very curious signposts. One seen by a writer in The Wide World represents a farm laborer sharpening his scythe, on which is inscribed in the old Silesian dialect, "To Giers village, one hour." The signpost is well carved and painted in natural colors, so that it appears very lifelike. Another signpost in the same district represents a schoolboy carrying a slate bearing the name of the nearest village, toward which the boy is pointing.

Just for Recreation.

During the coal strike many miners were idle, and the city authorities, taking advantage of the fact, had a lot of work done putting in sewers, paving streets and laying wires underground. An old Irishman by the name of Mike Dooley had been employed in the mines, but took a temporary job digging ditches in the streets. One morning his friend Pat Hooligan saw Mike at work and exclaimed:

"Hello, Mike! What in the devil are you doing there?"

Mike leaned on his pick, looked up and said smilingly:

"Oh, I thought I would work while I was idle."

Cows Tried For Murder.

Old documents of the middle ages tell us of numerous cases where animals were put on trial for serious offences charged against them. For example, in 1370 three cows were tried for having killed a boy. The whole herd were arrested as accomplices. All were discharged but the guilty three, these being condemned to be executed. The sentence was pronounced by the Duke of Burgundy —Our Dumb Animals.

Good Luck For Turtles at Least.

The Chinese have a peculiar custom with regard to turtles, which they consider as very good joss. Almost any day one can see these creatures, some of them of huge size, being carried on board the river steamers, not to be taken to Canton for culinary purposes, but to be dumped into the sea and restored to liberty and freedom. Good luck is thought to follow.

WHERE ARE THEY?

What Have Become of the Common Things of 25 Years Ago.

Well, what's become of the moustache cup, for instance? Those china affairs made specially so gentlemen would not soil their lip adornments on their coffee. It seems only yesterday that Aunt Lizzie was sending them to all her best beaux for birthday presents. And the knitted mufflers around the necks? And oh, yes—what's become of the big mitts we used to wear with strings attached around our necks?

What's become of the mud scrapers on the doorsteps and the mats with the large "Welcome" on them that used to greet us all wherever we opened the door? What's become of all the red and white barred stockings all the little girls used to wear? What's become of the hand-painted neckties, the whatnots that used to adorn the parlor corner, the fringe on the parlor furniture, the old plush piano stool with the fringe on it, and the iron animals in the front garden?

Then, there are the plush picture frames, the worsted mats for the lamp, made with a spool and four pins; strange glass canes that hung up in the parlor with colored water inside. What's become of them? What, too, of the big glass marbles with the little silver lamb inside that was the last word in knicknacks in every well-conducted home? Also the stuffed doves under the round glass case that used to stand just at the side of the door, and the everlasting flowers. And what's become of the knitted wristlets you used to see along any main street, and what's become of the old hand-knitted stockings for men, the sealskin collars on the coats—the sealskin collars that never had a lining—and last, the case on the mantelpiece with the wax figures?

What has become of the Austin sisters, the human flies, who used to walk on the ceiling? What's become of Zip, the mathematical marvel; Jack O'Brien and his six-day lady bike riders; the pug dog, the author of "White Wings, They Never Grow Weary," the seven Sutherland sisters, and the wooden ship in the bottle, that no self-respecting bar could be without? For that matter, what's become of the raw egg eating champion, the pie eating champion, the oyster opening champion?

Mother's canned preserves with the red sealing wax on top—are there any more anywhere? The old wooden wardrobe in the bedroom, and the six-day go-as-you-please races; the white bone-handled table knives and homemade bread; the little candy hearts with mottoes and mushy sayings on them, and the sheaves of wheat and colored pampas grass in the best room—where?

Don't you remember the butter dish in the shape of the hen sitting on eggs and the milk pitcher built in the shape of a cow? You never see them now. And how about those elegant tidies the girls used to move around so they would always not be back of our heads when we sat on the chairs and sofas?

Did you ever see the alligator cuspidor? It was a weird-looking apparatus, and maybe you're lucky to forget it. But they used to be almost everywhere that the gentle habit was practiced. You reached out a foot and stepped on the 'gator cuspidor. Promptly it gaped cavernously. Then you expectorated. You removed your foot and the jaws closed. It was truly a wonderful thing. It raised that particular habit to the dignity of a ceremony, although many kept on preferring a knothole to the 'gator cuspidor.

Bustles, "split curls," frizzes, can be accounted for on the grounds of changing fashion, and what's become of the hair tongs, and what on earth has become of the natural hair? Where's the bolivar sandwich, which was made of a piece of cocoanut candy between two brown cookies, with scalloped edges? And the lozenges with the printed jokes?

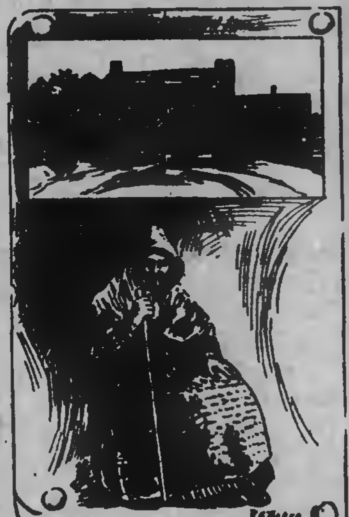
OLD TAVERN PASSES

BUTCHERS' ARMS IN TORONTO IS TORN DOWN.

Celebrated Road House Was the Rendezvous of a Notorious Crew Called the "Brooks' Bush Gang" and Was Famous In Criminal Annals—It Was Also a Centre for Cocking Mains.

The rendezvous forty years ago of the notorious "Brooks' Bush" gang of highway robbers and murderers, one of the oldest and most historic landmarks in eastern Toronto, "The Butchers' Arms," passed out of existence quite recently. The old tavern was built in 1845, sixty-seven years ago, by Thomas Smith and sold by him a few years later to William Vine, whose widow lived there until she died, two years ago. The property is now known as 583 Broadview avenue, and the old tavern has been torn down to make way for modern residences.

The history of "The Butchers' Arms" is told in The Toronto Globe by Mr. John Playter of Danforth avenue, whose great-grandfather, Captain John Playter, a United Empire Loyalist, settled in York (now Toronto) in 1796.



THE BUTCHER'S ARMS.
MRS. WILLIAM VINU.
(From "Robertson's Landmarks.")

Mr. Playter clearly remembers the murder of a member of Parliament named Hogan by the "Brooks' Bush Gang," who threw Hogan from the Don bridge on Queen street east. "That was before Toronto had either street cars or straps," said Mr. Playter. "Broadview avenue was known as Mill road, and was in the township of York at the time, coming into the city of Toronto about fifteen years later in 1884. The gang was composed of a low class of men and women, and they were called the 'Brooks' Bush Gang' because they camped in the bush owned by Mr. Brooks near the thoroughfare now known as Simpson avenue."

Mr. Playter said William Vine was not associated with them in any way, and he would have been better pleased if they had never frequented his tavern. Cockfighting was not prohibited in those days, and many a "main" was staged in the pit across the road from the tavern, with the sporting fraternity of the city in attendance. The Butchers' Arms was also the rendezvous of the owners of race horses which ran at the old Kingston road track (now Queen street east).

Mrs. Vine was about ninety years of age at the time of her death, some two years ago, and the only son living is now in Rochester, N.Y.

He Slipped Away.

One of the best golf players in the British House of Commons is Dr. McNamara, M.P. In the Parliamentary handicap a few years ago he was one of a group discussing the chances of the various players. One rather fancied Mr. Soames, M.P., as the ultimate winner.

"Oh, he's no good!" said another.

"Excuse me," was the reply, "he's already found his way into the last eight."

"Yes," retorted the other; "but what awful rotters he has had to meet!"

At this point Dr. McNamara silently took his departure. He had that day been beaten by Mr. Soames.

Woodpeckers Busy.

Woodpeckers have begun to give trouble again to British postoffice engineers. They peck holes in telephone and telegraph poles, so that instead of lasting the normal life of a creosoted pole they snap or decay prematurely. There are various theories to explain the woodpecker's misguided behavior, but the usual one is that the "humming" of the wires makes the birds think that there are insects there. A casing of wire is placed over some of the poles where the woodpeckers are most numerous.

A Churchill Mot.

It is to Mr. Winston Churchill that we owe the wittiest summing up of a Parliamentary candidate: "He is asked to stand, he wants to sit, and he is expected to lie."

Mr. Churchill is also credited with the conundrum: "What is the difference between a candidate and an M.P.?" To which he supplied the answer: "One stands for a place and the other sits for it."

Medland Hall.

Medland Hall, Stepney, a London relief organization instituted in a small way in 1891 by a few young clerks in an Australian merchant's office, has sheltered 3,000,000 homeless men in its twenty-one years of existence, at a total cost of $130,000.

Parkhill voters, by a vote of 368 to 10 decided to raise $25,000 for a waterworks system.

True Simplicity.

I'd like to live the simple life,
All free from toil and care,
The kind that any one can live
Who is a millionaire;
No furnaces to fix at night
Before I go to sleep;
No pail of ashes to remove;
No kitchen steps to sweep.

No batch of bills to bother with—
Those bills that always vex;
I'd simply turn them over to
The man who writes the checks—
And if I wanted anything
From diamonds to advice
I wouldn't have to figure round
And ask about the price.

When I went forth to see the world,
Experience to gain,
I wouldn't hit the smoking car;
I'd take a special train.
And when I stopped a taxicab
Would whizz me up the street
To where they served in latest style
Expensive things to eat.

That would be simple life enough,
I'm sure, for any man.
In Pierpont Morgan's placid steps
To follow I would plan.
That is the kind of life I would Endeavor to annex.
This thing of chasing for the rent
Is really too complex.

A Judge Recalled

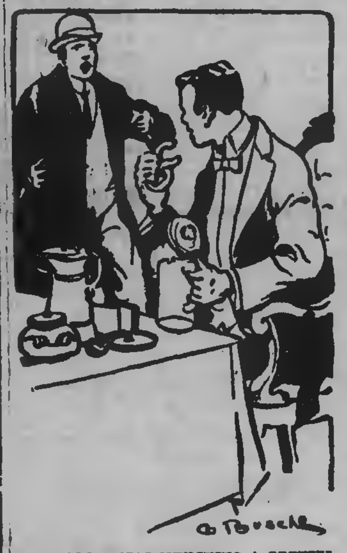
The Result of a Friendly Suit in Court

By E. A. MITCHEL

George Jernegan, a student of medicine at a southern university, having reached that stage of his studies (anatomy) wherein he needed to dissect human bodies in order to see for himself the muscles, arteries, bones and other parts that constitute the machine, man, found to his discomfiture that the university authorities were unable to provide him with a subject. Not willing that his career as a sawbones should be nipped in the bud on this account, he resorted to a method which was once much in vogue among medical students, but which is now considered to be obsolete—he robbed a grave.

A young man named Blackiston had distinguished himself as a law student. It was considered that the day would come when he would make a second Daniel Webster. But, whether he studied too hard or his precociousness meant a disordered brain, he went the way of most prodigies—he broke down. One day he was found with his head on a pile of lawbooks unconscious. Docters were called in who prescribed all sorts of treatment, from hot water at the feet to a bath in ice water, without restoring the patient. He remained in a comatose condition for many days, the action of the heart apparently growing weaker each day till at last the physicians in attendance could not detect even a flutter. So he was pronounced dead, was buried, and the legal world regretted that the profession had lost a coming shining light.

Now, Jernegan was looking for a subject about the time that Blackiston was buried. The night after the funeral the former went to the cemetery, dug up the corpse and, putting it in a gunny bag, carried it to the dissecting room. Fearing that if left as it was it would be recognized, he concluded to cut it up before morning; but, being tired with the work he had done, he went to a saloon near by with a small pitcher and returned with it full of beer, besides pretzels. These he placed on a table beside the corpse and, noticing that his tobacco pouch was empty, went out again for tobacco. When he returned this second time and entered the dissecting room he was paralyzed with astonishment. The corpse was munching a pretzel and was just reaching out for the pitcher of beer.



THE CORPSE WAS MUNCHING A PRETZEL.

So long was the draft (a man who has been several hours under cold ground certainly needs all the stimulant he can get) that Jernegan, fearing there would be none left for himself, called a halt. The corpse paid no attention to the interruption, continuing to drink till the last drop was exhausted, then got back on the dissecting table and closed his eyes. Jernegan to determine the fact of life or death pricked the corpse's cheek with the point of a knife, knowing that if the subject was dead no blood would flow. A red drop stood on the cheek. The subject opened his eyes and, seeing a man standing over him, asked where he was.

Jernegan told him that he was supposed to be dead, had been buried, resurrected and had he not revived would soon have been cut up in a dissecting room.

The vigor of Blackiston's mind seemed to have been at least in a measure restored and went right on in the vein that had been interrupted by his stroke or whatever it was.

"You're a body snatcher," he said.

"Lucky for you that I am. If I hadn't resurrected you you'd have died a horrible death."

"That may be, but I wonder if I have not cause for an action against you?"

"Action for what?"

"I'm not sure whether it would come under the law against body snatching, trespass or disturbing my repose."

"Disturbing your repose! Well, I like that!"

"There is another point of law involved. A certificate of my death has doubtless been made out by the doctors, and in the eye of the law I'm a dead man."

"You came very near being a dead man in the eye of the medical profession."

"The case interests me. I am sensible of the obligation I am under to you for saving my life, but you wouldn't mind my bringing a friendly suit against you to try this singular case, would you?"

"Not a bit, if you'll pay all the costs."

"I'll do that."

Mr. Blackiston got down from the dissecting table and tried to walk, but failed. He sat down and asked Jernegan if he would kindly call a carriage. When it arrived Jernegan attended him to his home.

Blackiston sued Jernegan for trespassing upon his grave. The case excited so much attention among the members of the legal profession that the bar association volunteered to furnish counsel for Jernegan's defense and retained their most brilliant member for the purpose. Blackiston conducted his own case.

"Your honor," he said in his opening remarks, "I shall proceed to show by competent witnesses that the defendant did with malice aforethought invade and trespass upon my grave, interfere with my repose, feloniously steal my body, place it in a bag and carry it to a dissecting room. He then and there was making preparations to take apart my members for the purpose of study when I returned to consciousness. This suit is brought with a desire to learn the legal status of a corpse. It is a principle of common law that there are no property rights in a dead body. No one owns it but itself. That it has legal rights has been established in the case of the estate of Swiback versus Oppenheim, wherein it was decided that the body of Swiback was a part of his estate, in which he had the same interest as in his real estate."

"Your honor," replied counsel for defense, "this being a friendly suit to establish a principle we admit without the fact being established by witnesses that the defendant did remove the body of the plaintiff from its grave, but we claim that the plaintiff, being legally dead, has no standing in this court."

"I propose," said Blackiston, "to try the case on that very issue. I therefore admit that in the eyes of the law I am dead. Nevertheless in a sense a corpse is a living person. It being the duty of the state under the law to protect the repose of the dead, it follows that the dead have rights. Therefore when a corpse is feloniously invaded in its own domicile, the grave, it must have a legal standing with the state to protect itself. If it has a legal standing against the state it must have such standing in court against an individual."

"There is no question," replied counsel for the defendant, "that the plaintiff is legally dead, nor is there any question that he is really living. Nevertheless I am considering him as a corpse resurrected, returned to life and with the right to establish his former legal identity. Since we are endeavoring to establish a principle of law let us admit that Blackiston has established such legal identity. In that case I think he would stand before the court as a resurrected living corpse, which, as was held in the case of Brickabat versus Cobbleston"—

At this point the court interrupted the learned counsel to say that the brain wear and tear of the case were so exhausting that he would adjourn the court for one hour for refreshment, recommending phosphoric foods calculated to restore the enormous cellular waste. When the court convened again his honor remarked:

"In order to proceed with this trial it must be admitted that the plaintiff has a standing in this court, and so the court holds."

"Very well," said Blackiston. "My standing before this court as a corpse having been admitted, I demand damages against the plaintiff for invading the six feet of ground in which I as a dead man had an inalienable right."

"Your honor," quickly interposed counsel for the defense, "the plaintiff cannot claim damages, though his standing in court and the trespass is admitted, for since there is no property right in a corpse the law does not give a right to recover in a court for a violation of sepulture. If we admit that the plaintiff suing as a corpse has cause for action against a man for stealing himself—a corpse—the present action falls to the ground and can only be brought again as an action of one dead body against another, for which there is no law of the land that can compel an answer."

Blackiston now arose and delivered an argument that has since been considered a wonder by every member of the bar who heard it. But unfortunately the reporters, who were not skilled in legal lore and could not digest the arguments, had been sinking to slumber, and when the phenomenon arose to speak the last journalist had gone to sleep.

When the summing up had been concluded the judge announced that he would take a week to consider the case and would hand down a decision at the end of that period.

When the day came for him to read his decision the courtroom was crowded to overflowing. The judge looked ten years older than before the trial. He began to speak in a feeble voice, but gained strength as he proceeded. The lawyers and spectators listened patiently though eagerly till the gist of the opinion came in the last few words. "There is nothing in the constitution to enable a dead man to bring an action in a living court."

A mighty shout of "Recall him! Recall the stupid blunderer!" arose. And straightway those adverse to the opinion proceeded to unseat the judge.

The movement was successful, but the poor man died on the very day he was unbenched.

The "Doc" Needed Air.

A terrible automobile accident occurred at the square the other evening. For further particulars see the papers. We only tell what we know about it. The man who had been injured was a millionaire several times over. The first physician to arrive at the spot was a young chap, just out of college. When the victim opened his eyes he looked directly into the face of the young medic.

"Doc," he gasped, "I'll give you $1,000 if you'll save my life!"

Then the policeman butted in. "Stand back," he warned the crowd—"stand back an' give the doctor air!"

The doctor was the man that needed it.—Exchange.

PREMIER ASQUITH SAYS HOME RULE BILL IS CERTAIN

British Prime Minister Declares That the Upper House Cannot Do Anything to Over-ride the Decision of the People—It Will Be the First Step In a Complete Reorganization of the Empire.

Dublin, July 20.—Premier Asquith again, last night, was the recipient of another ovation at the hands of Dublinites. Both inside and outside the Theatre Royal, where he made an address, Mr. Asquith, who was accompanied by his wife, was greeted by enormous crowds who repeated the welcome they gave him Thursday night.

John Redmond, the leader of the Nationalists, in introducing the Premier to his auditors, said that such a reception never hitherto had been accorded to any Cabinet Minister and never again would be until Mr. Asquith came to Dublin attending the King to open an Irish Parliament.

Mr. Asquith's speech was interrupted at times by male and female suffragettes, several of whom were violently ejected from the theatre. The speech was a warm defence of the Irish cause. It characterized opposition to home rule as merely obstructive and chaotic, but powerless to wreck the home rule bill, which the Premier said would be sent to the House of Lords before Christmas. Then, he added, with patience and discipline, the end was in sight because it was no longer possible for the House of Lords to override the decision of the people.

The triumph of Ireland's cause, Mr. Asquith declared, would be the first step in an Imperial reorganization of which home rule was the one and only solution. Expressing his disbelief in the possibility of a civil war in Ulster County, the Premier repeated his previous statement that the Government stood ready sympathetically to consider proposals to strengthen the safeguards in that county.

While the meeting was proceeding extraordinary scenes were witnessed outside the theatre. Suffragettes, who attempted to make a demonstration, were set upon by the populace, who tried to throw them in the River Liffey. The police interfered for their protection and in holding back the crowds frequently urged the incensed men to "be Irishmen."

The suffragettes were thoroughly frightened by the onslaught of the crowd, and were glad to seek refuge in street cars or in the lobby of the general postoffice.

RUSSIA AND JAPAN BURY THE HATCHET

St. Petersburg, July 20.—The signature is impending of pact establishing a defensive alliance between Russia and Japan. This momentous development would seem to be connected with the approaching trip to Russia of the Japanese statesman, Prince Katsura, but his visit is a mere coincidence. The actual agreement was fully concluded a fortnight ago and likely will be signed for Japan by Baron Motono, the Japanese ambassador to Russia, who was its negotiator and prime mover.

The agreement consists of two parts, one dealing with the delimitation of the spheres of influence of Russia and Japan in Mongolia and Manchuria, which is similar in scope and character to the Anglo-Russian accord of August 31, 1907, regarding Persia, etc. The second part deals with the duty of the two powers for a joint defence in case either power is attacked.

The commencement of the present Russo-Japanese approchement dates back to the days of Foreign Minister Iswolsky. It is a matter of common knowledge that Japanese diplomacy unremittingly has urged upon Russia the immense value that would follow such close co-operation as now at length has been established, especially since Great Britain and Russia drew together and made it feasible and logical.

Amplifies Treaty of Portsmouth.

London, July 20.—The Daily Telegraph's Pekin correspondent asserts that the new Russo-Japanese agreement is an amplification and consolidation of the treaty of Portsmouth between Russia and Japan. According to the correspondent articles 3 to 8 will be virtually expunged and restated in a form confirming to Japan her Liaotung peninsular lease, allowing both signatories greater military freedom in their respective spheres, precluding neutral nations engaging in Manchurian development and sanctioning the building of a new strategic railway.

Two Men Shot In New York.

New York, July 20.—As two men passed the corner of 116th street and First avenue, early yesterday morning, several men leaped at them from a door way. Ten shots were fired, and one of the passers fell. His companion ran.

When policemen came, the shooters had disappeared. The injured man, Vincent Galdi, was taken to the Harlem Hospital. Hardly had he reached the operating room, when Joseph Russ, his friend and neighbor, staggered into the building. He had a bullet wound in his abdomen.

The same gang which shot Galdi had come upon Russ a block or two away and fired upon him also. Both of the injured men will die.

TWO TORONTO MEN ARE GIVEN MEDALS

Toronto, July 20.—Two citizens of Toronto were honored by the King of Italy last night. Claude Macdonell, M.P. for South Toronto, was the medium through which King Victor Emmanuel manifested his approval of heroism displayed during the volcanic eruptions in Italy in December, 1908. On the last day of that year the British steamship Ophir, homeward bound from Australia to Glasgow, put into Regio. Davey was third cook on the vessel; Stoneman a second-class quarter-deckman.

At Messina the crew rescued 750 people, 150 of whom were badly injured. They were taken aboard the ship and carried to Naples. On the journey the crew cared for and relieved many of the sufferers.

Although all was confusion in Italy at this time, the King did not lose sight of this bravery. Some time later he ordered a commemorative medal to be struck for each member of the crew. The ones for Stoneham and Davey were given to the British Ambassador at Rome, who turned them over to the Board of Trade in London. It was then discovered that the two sailors had left for Canada. The medals were forwarded to the Canadian Government. At length it was found that the intended recipients were living in Toronto. The Minister of Militia asked Claude Macdonell to present one medal to Mr. Davey and requested Sir Edward Osler to do the honors in making the presentation to Mr. Stoneham, as they are members for the respective ridings in which the two men reside. On account of the death of R. A. Smith, Sir Edmund asked Mr. Macdonell to do his share also.

"In the name of the King of Italy and his subjects, more particularly those around us, I take great pleasure in presenting you with this silver medal, in recognition of your heroic services in that dreadful disaster. I feel sure that I can say that if ever you wish to come into this club, you can do so knowing that you are among true friends," said Mr. Macdonell in making the presentations.

The speaker gave a synopsis of the catastrophe and the part taken by the men. He drew attention to the fact that Mr. Stoneman, who is cook at the Merchants' Hotel, Jordan street, is now married.

SUFFRAGETTES IN COURT AT DUBLIN

Dublin, July 20.—Mary Leigh, Gladys Evans, Lizzie Baker and Mary Coffer appeared in the police court yesterday on the charge of throwing a hatchet at Prime Minister Asquith, of attempting to set fire to a theatre, and with having in their possession inflammables for illegal purposes. All the accused were committed for trial.

The police testified that a canister which apparenty contained gunpowder, had been exploded in the theatre. They had found on Gladys Evans a bag of gunpowder, a portion of the theatre carpet saturated with petrol, and a basket full of lighters. Three bottles of benzine and a tin of gunpowder also had been discovered by the police authorities, and their testimony brought out the fact that many lives had been endangered by the fire.

The Leigh woman admitted hurling the hatchet at Mr. Asquith's carriage.

Mrs. Leigh has long been a leader in violent acts adopted by militant suffragettes.

As far back as July, 1908, she was arrested for breaking windows in a suffragette demonstration in London. At that time, on being sentenced to two months' imprisonment at hard labor, she told the court that "the next time we come out you can expect bombs."

A year later Mrs. Leigh was again sentenced to two months' hard labor at Birmingham, and on being released, brought suit for damages against the Government for forcible feeding while in prison. The woman is described by the police as "the most troublesome suffragette" they had to deal with.

Summer-resorting is now one of the most popular of out-door games.

PROMISED IMMUNITY

New York, July 20.—The murder plot that brought Herman Rosenthal to his death that the gambler might tell no tales against his kind or grafting policemen is to-day being hourly brought closer to the "police system."

William Shapiro, part owner of the "murder car," is giving the public prosecutor information bit by bit that strengthens the belief that the slaying of Rosenthal did not spring from the enmity of the gamblers' clique. Shapiro admits that when his motor car was engaged he was told that police men had knowledge of what was going to happen, and that nobody was in any danger.

"Bald Jack" Rose, gambler, and a friend of Police Lieut. Becker, who surrendered himself to the police, has given the name of a gambler and a gunfighter who was in the car the night that Rosenthal was shot down in front of the Hotel Metropole. His name is Schapps, and detectives are scouring the town for him.

What "Bald Jack" Rose told Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty makes the police official quite anxious to know more about "Bridgie" Webber, poolroom keeper and friend of Rosenthal. Rose said when he left the murder car uptown he dropped in on Webber, but later it appears that Webber turned up at the Hotel Metropole just before Rosenthal was shot, and shook hands with the gambler. Later Webber was seen at the hotel after the shooting.

Police Lieut. Becker has been told to remain at police headquarters, and no one was more surprised at the unexpected appearance of "Bald Jack" Rose at headquarters yesterday than Becker, the head of the so-called "strong arm" squad which has been engaged in looking after gambling houses.

STATEMENT MONDAY?

Winston Churchill Has a Conference With Mr. Borden.

London, July 20.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—It is understood Premier Borden's interview with Winston Churchill yesterday was of special importance in view of the lengthy conference of the Canadian Ministers, lasting well on to midnight. It is generally thought that information will be submitted for the guidance of the First Lord of the Admiralty in making his statement in the Commons on Monday.

The proposals of the Canadian Ministers, while not likely to be specified, will be embodied in the general plan outlined by Mr. Churchill.

It is rumored that Premier Borden does not find conditions the same as when the resolution was voted by the Conservatives in Parliament tendering the equivalent of two Dreadnoughts. Otherwise he would be prepared to renew the offer made two or three years ago. What he and his colleagues now propose is not to make emergency offer, but to formulate proposals that shall serve as a basis of a permanent naval defence policy in the interests of Canada and the Empire.

STRATFORD'S PLEA IS TURNED DOWN

Toronto, July 20.—Sir James Whitney and Hon. Adam Beck gave a line of straight talk yesterday afternoon on their Hydro-electric power policy.

Mayor Brown of Stratford and Geo. Torrance, M.P.P., North Perth, headed a civic deputation to ask that the Mackensie interests should be given power to supply privileges, which the agreement with the commission precludes.

Mayor Brown stated that the town was securing the street railway franchise, but the Mackenzie interests wished to make it a condition that the power to run the cars be taken from their company.

Hon. Adam Beck said that the agreement made by the commission was made in good faith, and it would not be right to begin breaking such agreement.

Mayor Brown said that the Government would be holding up the city.

Hon. Adam Beck said this was not correct, as the commission was working on a cost basis.

Mayor Brown said it was by reason of such restrictions that Stratford was dying by inches.

Sir James Whitney remarked that if that were the case it could keep on doing so.

While giving no encouragement to the deputation, Sir James agreed to send them a formal decision at an early date.

VANCOUVER BLOCK WAS BURNED OUT

Damage to the extent of half a million dollars was done, but no loss of life is reported.

NEW YORK GUN MEN CHARGE $2.000 FOR KILLING A MAN

Special To The Review.

New York, July 20—District Attorney Whitman, has gleaned enough information to convince him that Jack Rose, at the suggestion, or with the knowledge of the police, hired Jack Zeelig's gang to make away with Rosenthal. The market rate imposed by east side gunmen for killing men, is said to be $2,000 per victim.

Lieut. Becker has been deposed as head of the "Strong Arm" squad, having charge of enforcing the law against gamblers.

LUNATIC KILLS BARTENDER AND WOUNDS ANOTHER MAN

John Sheppard, a Scotsman, Who Was About to Sail for Home, Goes Insane and Shoots Up the Bar In the Turkish Bath Hotel—Proprietor's Son Is Wounded In the Affray.

Montreal, July 20.—John Sheppard, a plasterer of Chicago, in a sudden fit of insane rage yesterday afternoon, shot and killed Fred. McKenna, bartender at the Turkish Bath Hotel, and seriously wounded Dr. R. S. Devlin, son of the proprietor. Sheppard at the time was accompanied by his wife and three children.

After the shooting the man calmed down and went to the hotel clerk, telling him what he had done. He then awaited the arrival of the police and since his arrest has shown little concern as to his own fate but repeatedly asks for news from the Royal Victoria Hospital where Dr. Devlin lies with a bullet through his right shoulder.

Sheppard is a Scotchman by birth but has passed a number of years in Chicago. Some time ago, according to his wife, he sustained a fall from a scaffold resulting in concussion of the brain. He received $1,500 damages and decided to return to Scotland. Since his accident he has been subject to fits of insanity.

Sheppard with his wife and their three children only arrived here on Thursday and had been staying at the St. Lawrence Hall. They were to have sailed yesterday.

While drinking ginger beer in the Turkish Bath Hotel, Sheppard suddenly whipped out a revolver, killing McKenna and shooting Dr. Devlin, who appeared at the door.

Denies Report of Battle.

Rome, July 20.—The Italian Government, according to a semi-official note issued yesterday, knows nothing of the reported action between a flotilla of Italian torpedo boat destroyers and the Turkish forts at the entrance to the Dardanelles, except that several Turkish torpedo boats left the straits to hunt for Italian warships, and that it is possible, therefore, the Italian destroyers engaged these vessels in battle

"The idea that the Italian destroyers would try to force the Dardanelles," the semi-official note says, "is ridiculous. If the Turkish forts bombarded the Italian warships, it was probably a result of the panic now reigning in Turkey, or was a pretext of the Government again to close the straits."

A despatch from Constantinople stated that eight Italian torpedo boats attacked the entrance of the Dardenelles a 1.30 yesterday morning, and that two boats were sunk by Turkish batteries, the Italians losing several hundred killed or wounded.

Canada to Retaliate.

Ottawa, July 20.—The probability of Canada withdrawing the modus vivendi rights granted to American fishing schooners in Nova Scotia fishing waters was increased last evening by the action of the Department of Marine and Fisheries in instructing the customs authorities at Barrington, N.S., to seize still another United States fishing vessel and cancel its license for violating the present three mile limit regulations. There have been two seizures in four days.

London, July 20.—Justice Meredith, chairman of the board of governors of Western University, is expected back from Europe in another week, after which an invitation will be extended to the man chosen by the board to become head of the university.

The rumor that Bishop Fallon has been asked to become head of the university is emphatically denied by members of the university board.

Application for Divorce.

Ottawa, July 20.—Notice has been given in the Canada Gazette that William Monk, a mechanical engineer of Toronto, will apply on the usual grounds for a divorce from his wife, Lizzie Alma Monk, also of Toronto, but now residing in New York.

DOLLAR JACK FLED TO CANADIAN SOIL

New York, July 20—This city is on the eve of one of the most disgraceful police scandals in all its badly smeared municipal history. Every day brings to light new evidence, to show that the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, was inspired by the officers who feared the disclosures he threatened to make.

When Rosenthal's place was raided there was $5,700 in the faro "bank" and this was seized by the police, who made the raid, but was not turned over to headquarters. "Dollar Jack" one of the employees of the resort knew of this money and declared that he would make trouble if it was not accounted for. Suddenly he disappeared and a letter has been received from him from the Canadian side. He says—

"I'm in Canada, I don't think it's good for my health to stay around New York. In fact, I know it isn't. This is the situation—

"After I left the court-room Monday, you know I talked about that $5,700. Well, somebody, came along and said that they'd heard I might be going to help Rosenthal in his case, with the district attorney. I knew Rosenthal wanted me to, but I hadn't told him I would. Now, this person who spoke about it, remarked that if I knew what was best for myself I'd take a nice long walk before growing much older.

"I laughed but saw there was something serious behind it. Still I didn't think much about it till I heard of Rosenthal's murder early this morning. I concluded to take a perfectly good piece of advice and go on that long walk before anything further is fixed up."

Deplores Suffragette Violence.

London, July 20.—Mrs. Henry Fawcett, on behalf of the executive of the National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies, which consists of more than two hundred societies in Great Britain, whose sole object is to obtain the Parliamentary franchise for women, yesterday issued a protest against the militant tactics of the women's social and political union, of which Mrs. Pankhurst is the founder.

Mrs. Fawcett appeals to the members of the militant body to stop their acts of violence, which are bound to be disastrous to the cause.

TWO MEN AND A WOMAN HELD ON MURDER CHARGE

At Inquest Into Death of Emily Antone, Joseph Axon Admits That He Was Afraid of the Indian, Jack Bennett—Constable Says He Could Not Get Down Stairs In Time—Murderer Is Still at Large.

Brantford, July 20.—At the inquest into the circumstances surrounding the death of Emily Antone, held in the village of Middleport yesterday, before Coroner Ashton, a verdict was returned that the woman came to her death as a result of injuries inflicted upon her by Jack Bennett, a Six Nations Indian of Ohsweken. A. J. Wilkes, K.C., prosecuted.

Evidence was taken from all those in the house of Joseph Axon at the time of the crime, including Axon himself, County Constable Amour, and Susan Frohman, sister of the dead woman. The three are being held as accessories.

Axon frankly stated he was afraid of Bennett, whom he ordered to stop kicking the woman, but the Indian was defiant and crazed with drink. Armour said he was unable to get down stairs in time, and when he did get down, the damage was done. He returned to his bed, however, the victim then being in a dying condition, and without assistance.

Susan Frohman told of her feeble efforts to stop Bennett. The discovery of the woman's death was made hours later, when an attempt was made to awaken her.

The Indian is still at large, and today a posse is assisting the Brantford officers in the man hunt on the reserve. Bennett is thought to be in the woods a few miles from Middleport. The horse and rig with which he escaped were recovered on the road yesterday.

He is of a type of Indian who it is thought will give battle, and considerable trepidation is felt by Indians who know him in assisting the authorities. It is also believed that he is receiving assistance on the reserve, and it may be some days before his capture is effected.

Seek Murderer In Berlin.

Berlin, Ont., July 20.—The police are scouring the city for Jack Bennett for the alleged murder of Emily Antone, near Brantford, on Tuesday last, word having been received from the high constable at Brantford that Bennett was in hiding at the home of a friend here. No trace, however, has been found of the Indian.

No Friction Over Peru.

Washington, July 20.—Correspondence between the State Department and the British Government looking to the suppression of atrocities practiced upon natives in the Putumayo rubber country, indicate that the two Governments have been in perfect accord.

Stuart J. Fuller, this Government's special agent, recently announced his arrival at Iquiton, the head of deep water navigation on the Amazon, and his purpose to establish a base there and proceed up the river to the Putumayo Valley. He is not expected to make an original investigation, for the State Department has accepted the British report as quite sufficient to establish the facts.

But the Peruvian Government having undertaken to bring to justice the guilty ones, Mr. Fuller is charged to see to it that this promise is redeemed and that the conditions complained of in the rubber country are ended.

Owing to the difficulty of access to the Putumayo country, however, it will be some time before the State Department can get a report from Mr. Fuller.

OVER-WORKED KIDNEYS

Cause, Rush of Blood, Fullness, Dizziness.

J. W. Chetland, the well-known railway engineer of Hamilton, found the strain always resting upon men of his occupation vastly intensified by a tendency of the blood to rush to his head, and often at times when clearness of vision and great steadiness were demanded. Finding some difficulty in bending—a stiffness with pain having settled in his back, it occurred to him that his kidneys might be at fault. "This was a happy idea, for by it I not only got rid of the pain but many other troubles as well. I took a full dose of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and was glad to note that some obstruction of the kidneys, which I had lately noticed, was at once relieved. The flushed appearance of my face gave way to a more rational color and there was a perceptible improvement in my appetite. Dr. Hamilton's Pills certainly act splendidly upon the blood, removing heat and fulness and that sort of dizziness that makes a man at the throttle wish when it siezes him that he were elsewhere."

No medicine gives such unquestionably good results for stomach, liver, and blood troubles as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are mild, certain, and always curative. Refuse any substitute. All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c per box, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

CARING FOR CHILDREN

Of all good works undertaken in the interests of humanity by a newspaper that of the Toronto Star in providing the children of the poor of that city with a summer outing must be placed in the foremost rank. The paper receives subscriptions from the public and with the money so collected children are sent to the country for a period of two weeks each during the hot months of the summer, and thus the unfortunate little creatures whose growth, physical and mental, has been stunted in the crowded tenements of the city, are given a new lease of life. A home has been established at Bronte, in Halton county, midway between Toronto and Hamilton on the shores of Lake Ontario and the sum of $5.00 pays the expenses of each child at this resort for two weeks.

The large sums donated by the charitable people both in Toronto and throughout Ontario shows that the plan meets with the approval of those whose aim is to aid the unfortunates of the world. The intense pleasure which the children take in the outing is not without an element of pathos. The pity of it is that their joy is limited and that after a two weeks' sojourn in Eden it is necessary to turn them out again into the thorns and thistles of the wilderness where foul atmosphere and undesirable associations prevail. Yet they will throughout the other fifty weeks of the year dream of the brief taste they had of the better life at the Bronte Home.

BOURASSA'S NEW FAD

Henri Bourassa, in his series of articles in favor of annexation leaves the public in doubt on one important point—he fails to make it clear whether it is his intention to force the whole of Canada to enter the American Union or simply to detach his own province from the Dominion and make it a part of the neighboring Republic. This is probably an oversight on his part and the missing information will be supplied in a later issue of his paper.

"What rights, privileges, customs, laws, codes or charters would the French Canadians forfeit in the event of annexation?" asks Mr. Bourassa in his latest article. Then he pictures Quebec as one of the States of the Union and in his mind's eye no doubt sees himself the elected governor of that state, a senator or in some other position of emolument and power.

If Mr. Bourassa is in good faith seeking information it might be well to inform him that he would find himself in a vastly different position than the one he now occupies if the supposition which he propounds should ever become a reality. In the matter of education alone he would find that Separate or Catholic schools would receive no state aid whatever and if the children of his compatriots were to be educated in such schools it would be a matter of private expense while the parents would still be taxed for the support of the public schools. In none of the latter institutions would the teaching of the French language be tolerated for a moment.

If Mr. Bourassa should essay to play the power of the church against that of the state he would meet with another denial of a privilege to which he at present lays claim. According to the unit of representation that prevails in the United States his state of Quebec would be entitled to about ten representatives in the Government, a mere handful in a bunch of something over five hundred. Let him study the measure of influence exerted by some of the recently admitted states if he would know what kind of a figure he would cut in the affairs of his new nation. Neither would he enjoy any additional powers in the management of his local affairs but rather the reverse seeing that in both educational and religious affairs some of his present privileges would be abrogate.

Really Mr. Bourassa had better take sober second thought to himself before he undertakes to jump his present job and lead his race into a new world. Probably in a short time they would sour on their leader and vex this soul with their repinings and their longings for the deserted flesh pots of Egypt while they looked in vain for showers of the heaven-sent manna. Mr. Bourassa should remember that it is better to be a full grown frog in a pond than a tadpole in a lake. Or to improvise a famous passage from Milton a place as ruler in a limited circle even if the surroundings are not altogether desirable, is better than to play the part of an inconsiderable lackey in a wider sphere.

When a petulant youth makes dire threats of self-destruction or of leaving the parental home and casting in his lot with the Indians, he can generally be restored to a rational mood by a comestible contribution or a ticket to the circus. If Mr. Bourassa is kicking up all this dust, throwing out all these dark hints and making these veiled threats with his eye on any sugar plums of a concessive nature he may yet be induced to pause in his last mad flight and reason the matter in quieter vein.

SOME SUPERSTITIONS

The old story of the late Queen Victoria's superstition regarding the number thirteen is once more going the rounds of the press and it is recalled that on one occasion, when she was to dine with the Duke of Cambridge, the Queen on finding that the list of guests was of the dreaded number, politely but firmly, refused to sit down at the table. This story may or it may not be true, but it has been a popular recital for years.

All kinds of superstition, when investigated will be found to have their basis in some forms of religious belief and that regarding the number thirteen is no exception to the rule.

The objection of so many people, of undoubted intelligence and education to make one of a party of thirteen at a table, originates with the Scriptural account of the Last Supper, when those who partook made up that number. We all know the result. Of the twelve disciples, one was a traitor and betrayed his master, while the other eleven proved themselves poltroons in the time of danger a few hours later, when to a man they forsook their Friend and fled, one of them so precipitately that he left most of his garments behind him. Then the Central Figure of the group met, next day with a horrible death. Hence the well known superstition that, in case thirteen sit down to table, all kinds of trouble will ensue and one of the guests will die before the year is out.

For a similar reason Friday is regarded as an unlucky day on which to inaugurate any important undertaking because it was on a Friday that the world's greatest tragedy was enacted on the Heights of Golgotha.

French Canadians are obsessed with a horror of poplar timber. They would freeze to death rather than warm themselves at a fire where it was used as fuel. They will not sit on a chair, eat off a table or sleep in a house, in the construction of which this wood is used, nor will they allow a horse belonging to them to stand in a building, if there is a single poplar board, in floor, roof or walls. The lumber companies of the north, that depend largely upon French-Canadian labor, have this superstition to reckon with, in building their camps, and the hated timber is never used.

Not one in fifty Frenchmen could probably give any reason for this superstition, but it can be traced to the same religious source. It arises from the belief that the cross on which the Nazarene was put to death, was made of timber, taken from the poplar tree.

GUARD THEIR HEALTH!

Children Who Grow Very Fast Need Careful Watching.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills would make her healthy and happy.

Next to infancy, the years between ten or twelve and eighteen are the most critical in life, especially for the boys and girls who grow too fast. Rapid growth and the physical changes that are taking place render them particularly liable to weakness and disorders of the digestive system, kidneys or lungs that very frequently, when allowed to run on, condemn them to a lifetime of suffering.

It is most important that at this period of life those organs which carry off the body's waste and impurities—the bowels, the kidneys and the skin—should be kept active and vigorous.

Nothing will do this more effectively than that good old-fashioned remedy, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills. It acts directly on each of these organs, enabling them to do their work properly, and thus keeps the whole system pure and healthy.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are still made from precisely the same formula as when our grandparents used them, for nothing better has ever been devised.

NOTE AND COMMENT

It's the Right Honorable R. L. Borden now, seeing that the King has been pleased to make him a Privy Councillor.

If the English lord who has bought a farm near Streetsville makes the venture a financial success, it will probably be by the sweat of his hired man's brow.

Begging the pardon of an exchange, Henri Bourassa and his band of followers do not constitute a wing of the Conservative party. A feather of the wing is more like it.

Now that the suffragettes have resorted to gunpowder, hatchets and incendiarism, the British Premier had better equip himself with light footwear and make his escape while life is left him.

A dispatch says that the Hamilton police are hot on the heels of Lawyer Ogilvie, who absconded with money belonging to his clients. Good. Just give the Hamilton officers a chance and if there is a bad case or two of smallpox along the trail they may catch something yet.

"Bathing Strictly Prohibited," reads a sign in Jackson Park, just at a point where the temptation to indulge is strongest. For the matter of that the same sign might be erected all along the banks of the Otonabee within the city limits.

It is hard to believe that a locomotive and six cars ran over a Hamilton woman and failed to injure her, let alone killing her outright. But then, perhaps, it was on the John Patterson road that we hear so much about and which so far is only a myth.

Who says now that a woman cannot throw straight? The suffragette who hurled a hatchet at the premier's carriage, missed her mark, it is true, but the weapon found its billet upon the anatomy of another occupant of the vehicle. In less skilled hands it would probably have wounded some innocent spectator around the corner.

Another New York millionaire has sucked dry the orange of worldliness, has thrown aside the rind and joined the church. Wasn't it Tom Loker, one of the characters in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," who says something about the meanness of a man who all his life will run up a bill with the devil and then try to sneak out when pay day comes around?

The Review is rejoiced to hear a local contemporary boldly take a stand for home manufacturies, both of pulpwood and machinery, although it looks like a case of half-hearted repentance, seeing that a plea for the necessary protection in the latter case is lacking. And will the penitent explain by what authority the Provincial Government can prevent the settler of the north from selling where he will the pulpwood cut on his own farm?

The readers of this paper will be pleased to earn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

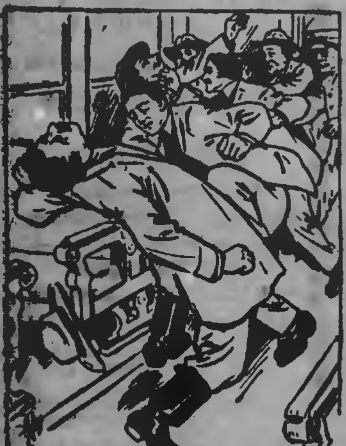
The events of the next few hours seemed like some sort of a weird, wildly mingled dream. Brockett and Solano found a stretch of rocky ground near the river bank, and ran briskly on this for several minutes. Then, descending to the water's edge, they skirted the river a little ways, while the noise of the pack grew momentarily nearer and stronger. They came to a little creek, running at right angles to the river, and crossed it, wading knee-deep in the brown water. Then they struck off into the woods. At the very edge of the jungle was a big boulder, a relic of some glacial slide of centuries ago. They climbed this rock, and took a long jump from its summit, after carefully spreading pepper all over the flat top of the stone. The deep footprints made as they landed from their leap were sprinkled with cayenne. Cayenne covered their tracks into the woods for the next half mile, and when they leaped a slender stream they peppered the spoor on each side of the water. Then they raced on, tired almost to the dropping point, staggering, stumbling now and then, but keeping their nerve and spirit undiminished. At last a railroad cut appeared before them. They crossed it, climbed the bank on the farther side and burrowed in a tangle of long, dry grass and weeds. There they lay, gasping and puffing, while their lungs seemed bursting through their ribs. And from the dim distance, borne upon the breeze, came faintly the howls of hounds in bitter agony, and the shouts of baffled men in fruitless rage.

"That seems to have worked pretty well," grimly commented Solano. "That particular pack of dogs won't be in shape to trail anybody for a week to come. If they want to follow us with hounds, they'll have to send back for another batch, and by the time they arrive we can be some distance on our way. If they try to track us without dogs, we have a splendid chance to get through these woods to some spot where we can board a train. The chances are all with us right now—your noble baron is fooled again."



THE SHERIFF WITH A YOWL OF ANGUISH AND SURPRISE FELL TO THE FLOOR.

Fooled more completely than the boys imagined. At the very moment when Brockett and Solano lay panting in their weedy lair, a large, double-fisted, irascible man walked up to Baron Zollern, who was just alighting from a train and was gazing blandly upon the unaccustomed scenes of Little Rock.

"Baron Zollern?" demanded the double-fisted and irascible individual.

"It iss me. Vot vish you?" acknowledged the baron, amiably.

The large, irascible man seized Baron Zollern with a clutch like that of a laundry presser. "I want you, first," he thundered, "and then I want that gang that you hired to bluff the conductor of the Chicago train. I'll put you where the fleas won't bite you and then I'll collect your partners!"

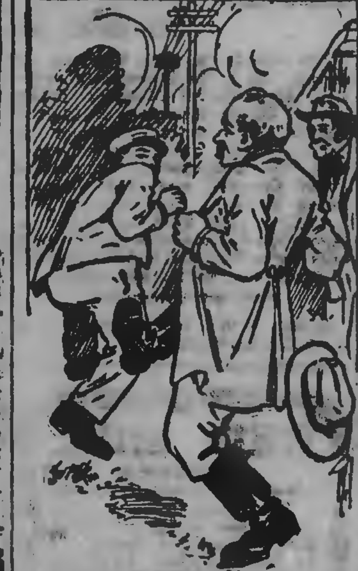
And the genuine sheriff of Little Rock, without further delay or parley, dragged the noble Baron Zollern headlong from the station platform.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Even in the Arkansas hills news travels swiftly, and the boys had hardly begun the second installment of their flight when they were halted by a grinning and wholly peaceful negro, bringing tidings from Little Rock, with a request that they return forthwith and give whatever evidence they could against the German noble. "Ah jes' 'bout rode a hawss to death, gemmen," protested the black man, "an' when Ah couldn't ride him no longeh in dis canebrake Ah done hiked suthin' pow'ful to cotch yo'. De sheriff, he 'lowed dat he'd gib me $5 if Ah brought yo' in, an' dat he'd jest nachully kick de debbil outen me if Ah didn't—an' so Ah stirred mahseff right lively."

Three hours later the youngsters, stained, muddy and thoroughly tired, were having a friendly pow-wow with the sheriff, while a furious German who had been forcibly relieved of sundry interesting papers, was foaming in a strong though crudely constructed cell.

"Right smart sort of crook, this Dutchman," said the sheriff, half-admiringly. "Found out, somehow which road you boys would take. Knew mighty well that if he sent any fake wires to me I'd do a little investigating before I acted any, and so he makes up his own law forces. Gets Tom Tarbrow, a fellow we ran out of here two years ago—must have been living in Chicago ever since—to play my part. Sends 'deputy sheriffs' down to help bluff the conductor and you youngsters. Good scheme, all right. Would have worked if you hadn't been handy with your fists and lively on your legs. What gets me, though, is his nerve in hiring Pod Morgan's pack of hounds to trail you. Pod's all heated up. Says he don't blame you boys none for peppering your tracks, but he'll get satisfaction out of the German or out of Tom Tarbrow. Says his dawgs won't be no good again for six months, maybe never."



HE AIMED A WELL-MEANT KICK AT THE YOUNGSTER

"How would they have handled us?" questioned Solano. "They couldn't very well put us in any lockup with no authority except their nerve."

"Wouldn't have needed to," laughed the sheriff. "Their scheme was plain enough. All they wanted was the papers and letters you boys are carrying. They'd have took those away from you and then turned you loose, figuring that you were too completely bluffed to make any kick, or to do anything excepting to go straight home. Good ideas, sons—but you sure did sting 'em this time."

"What will you do with Baron Zollern and his hired men?" asked Brockett with natural curiosity. The sheriff knitted his brows, thoughtfully.

"That's something of a poser," admitted the official. "If you lads would stay over and testify we could give them plenty of chances to work out a nice long sentence—'specially Tom Tarbrow. Impersonating an officer isn't a healthy trick 'round these parts, and we'd fix Tom proper. You say, though, that you have to be on your way right sudden, and I won't detain you. Reckon I can send Tom and his fellows up for a little while without your help—the testimony of the conductor and of Pod Morgan will just about settle them. I'll be cussed if I know what to do with the Dutchman, though."

"The baron? He's a spy of the German government, and one of the kaiser's most valuable agents," Solano remarked.

"That's a certain cinch," said the sheriff "but that won't get us much right now. We know who he is; we've got some goods on him, and we've taken a lot of choice credentials away from him. Wish it was wartime—we'd soon settle a polecat like him. In the war-time we used to catch Yankee spies 'round these woods now and then—and there was no formality at all. Not a bit of formality. Just a tree-limb and a halter. If we only had a nice excuse, like those times, son, we'd tend to your German. As it is, I'm afraid we can't do much. Might print the story on him, but that would tip off any other spies or secret agents as to where you boys were traveling, and cause you more trouble than it would be worth."

"Why not have all his credentials photographed," suggested Brockett, "and keep one set of copies here, while sending another set to the secret service at Washington?"

"Good idea, boy. Good idea," chuckled the sheriff. "I'll do it. Do it right away."

And a few hours later, various highly valued documents, papers that would cause tremendous stirrings in the land of the Black Eagle, were en route to Washington. The sheriff, by way of good measure and variety, presented the boys with a set of the photographic duplicates, kept a set himself, and sent still another set to official friends in Chicago. As to the baron: He raved. He called heaven and the infernal regions alike to witness that dire calamities would descend upon the United States, the state of Arkansas, the city of Little Rock, and the hardy sheriff, unless his papers were returned and all duplicates destroyed. Whereupon the sheriff, apparently but little frightened, had the baron photographed while at the height of his oratory, and presented the boys with souvenir copies of the proofs.

Late in the evening, somewhat refreshed by the hospitality of the sheriff, the boys resumed their journey. The sheriff himself escorted them to the train, and with him came Pod Morgan, owner of the bloodhounds baffled by the pepper trick a few short hours before. Mr. Morgan showed no resentment against the youngsters, and even insisted on sending a young hound to the home address of each one—"a dawg," as Mr. Morgan stated it, "that'll be a real comfort to yore fambly, an' will be mighty useful when it comes tuh keepin' foreign snakes from traipsin' 'roun' yo' premises." Several of Mr. Morgan's famous bloodhounds were with him and the boys learned, with astonishment, that the dreaded man-trackers were rather small, measly-looking creatures, not large enough or powerful enough to make a good fight against a bull-terrier, and answering in no description the stories or the pictures which pass current in all literature.

"Real bloodhounds," explained Mr. Morgan, grinningly, "has come tuh be nothin' but show dawgs, with long ears that'd git cotched in the brambles in a minuit. Yuh turn a pack of real bloodhounds loose after a man, an' they'd all sit down on their tails an' yell right helpless. Real, genuwine, man-cotchin' dawgs is a wuss mixture than Injun an' nigger—but they can foller, an' they can find."

"They don't look," ventured Solano, "as if they would tear a man to pieces when they caught him."

Mr. Morgan and the sheriff haw-hawed long and loud.

"No, son, they don't look that way, and they ain't," gurgled the delighted Mr. Morgan. "What's more, there never was no man-eatin' dawgs used ter chase nobody, not even niggers. In the old slavery days, when a nigger run away, the thing to do was tuh catch him, but not tuh kill him. Kill a $1,000 nigger? Son, that would be plumb idiotic, wouldn't it? The hounds was simply used tuh foller him, locate him, an' make a racket till the hunters could come up an' get the man."

MRS. GREATON'S AWFUL EXPERIENCE

During Change of Life—How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman.

Natick, Mass.—"I cannot express what I went through during the change of life before I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in such a nervous condition I could not keep still. My limbs were cold, I had creepy sensations, and I could not sleep nights. I was finally told by two physicians that I also had a tumor. I read one day of the wonderful cures made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it, and it has made me a well woman. My neighbors and friends declare it has worked a miracle for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth its weight in gold for women during this perod of life. If it will help others you may publish my letter."—Mrs. MARION SWEET GREATON, No. 1 Jefferson St., Natick, Mass.

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existance. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Stewed Rhubarb With Lemon

Choose tender stalks of rhubarb, trim and remove any tough portions of skin. Do not scrape away the delicate red, as it adds to the appearance of the finished dish. Cut the stalks into pieces an inch long, cover with water and stew until tender with a couple of slices of lemon. Add sugar to taste, heat to the boiling point and chill before serving. Some prefer to add a few seeded raisins with the slices of lemon, and for those who like this fruit the combination can be recommended. Rhubarb is really a spring medicine and is invaluable at this season of the year.

Scalloped Parsnips.

Scrape four large parsnips and boil until tender, then cut into cubes; make a sauce with a cup of milk, a level tablespoonful of butter and same of flour; season to taste with flour and salt and dash of cayenne or nutmeg; turn the parsnips into the sauce, then put a layer into a buttered baking dish on top of a layer of bread crumbs; add a sprinkling of minced onion and parsley, then more crumbs, parsnips, etc., until the dish is full, having the top covered with sauce and buttered crumbs; bake for half an hour and serve hot with boiled fish.

TO STRENGTHEN WEAK NERVES

The Blood Supply Must be Made Rich, Red and Pure

When you build up the blood you strengthen the nerves, because the nerves get their food through the blood. You cannot reach the nerves with medicine except through the blood—this is a great medical truth few people realize. Nervous people are pale people. They are nervous because they are pale. The blood is so thin and watery that it cannot nourish the nerves. Starved nerves mean sciatica, neuralgia, nervous prostration, paralysis.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are a real nerve tonic. They supply plenty of nourishing red blood to the exhausted nerves, thus enabling them to do the work nature intended they should do. This is the simple secret of the success of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in curing nerve troubles. As to their value in cases of sciatica, Mrs. Job Palmer, Fenelon Falls, Ont., says: "For seven weeks I suffered untold agony from sciatica. I tried everything to ease the pain, but it steadily grew worse. Liniments had no more effect upon the trouble than water. Then the doctor told me to apply a hot iron to the afflicted part and I did so morning after morning, but my leg had become so numb with the pain that I could hardly feel the heat of the iron. I never expected to be able to walk again my leg was so drawn up. I had tried so many things that I had given up hope, yet at the urging of my brother I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. To my surprise in two weeks I was able to stand on my feet with but little pain, and soon after I was able to walk about again. I continued taking the Pills for about two months, but some time before I discontinued their use my leg had become normal again, and the agony of the trouble had disappeared, and I have not since had a twinge of it. Words fail to express my gratitude for what the Pills did for me and I must strongly recommend them to all sufferers from sciatica."

The every day mission of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is to cure cases like the above, and they will not disappoint if given a fair trial. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2,50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Asparagus Tips Salad.

Twelve tender asparagus tips (canned may be used), one firm tomato, one pimento, one head of lettuce.

Tie asparagus in bundles of three and cook in boiling salted water until tender. Remove the string and arrange on crisp lettuce on individual plates. Cut the tomato into four rings and slip a bundle of the cooked asparagus through each ring, place on lettuce and sprinkle bits of finely chopped pimento over the whole. Serve with French dressing.

Custard.

One pint milk, large; two eggs, one cup of sugar, small; one teaspoonful vanilla, one-half cup of butter, two tablespoonfuls cornstarch. Dissolve the cornstarch in a little of the milk; heat the rest of the milk; when boiling add the sugar, cornstarch and beaten eggs, stirring briskly; add the butter, stir till dissolved, flavor and spread on the cakes while hot. This can be used as a pudding by pouring over each piece a spoonful of the custard that is left.

Glazed Sweet Potatoes.

Four sweet potatoes, one quart boiling water, one cupful sugar and a half cupful water will be needed for this recipe. Wash the sweet potatoes and cook ten minutes in boiling water, drain, pare and cut in lengthwise slices. Place in a buttered baking dish, cover with sirup made by boiling sugar and water together. Cover the baking dish and bake until tender.

The Evil Eye.

Belief in the evil eye exists in all lands, but especially in Italy. It existed in ancient Egypt. The "eye" is seen on the prows of Spanish and Italian ships and on Mexican bucklers. It is seen on amulets taken from the ashes of Herculaneum and Pompeii. In some places it is surrounded by elephants, serpents and scorpions, animals that were supposed to hold a talismanic power against it. Many celebrities of history—Napoleon among others—believed in the evil eye and feared it. Among the masses of the eastern and European nations the belief is almost universal.

BEAUTIFUL EYES

are made beautiful by long, silky lashes and well defined, lustrous brows. Eyes, like diamonds, depend on their setting. The beauties of the face are lost is the eye brows are thin and scanty, and the lashes are thing and scanty. Parisian Lash Lustre grows beautiful, soft, silky lashes. It has done so for society women throughout Europe, and it comes here well recommended to do the same for you. Parisian Lash Lustre is not a dye or colorator, but a scientific preparation for beautifying the eye lashes and brows. Our guarantee goes with every box of Parisian Lash Lustre. A two weeks' treatment will bring beauty to your eyes that you have never before possessed. By mail, prepaid, in opal boxes on receipt of price, fifty cents B. V. Marion, sole distributor. "OLD JOE" VALOIS GETS HIS $100 PENSION MONEY

He is Over 90 Years of Age and Has Been in Poor Circumstances — A 90 Year Old Comrade of 1866 Signed the Affidavit

A Review reporter called on Mr. Burnham, this morning, to learn if the rumor that "Old Joe" Valois, of 196 Murray street, and aged 94 years and some months was in receipt of his $100 pension money.

"Well you see, it's just this way," remarked Mr. Burnham, "some months ago, "Old Joe" called upon me, respecting his claim, and let me say at the beginning, that it is to the Minister of Militia any credit belongs for any departmental speed in this matter.

"Joe begged that his case should be considered at once, as he was sure he would die before he got the money otherwise. There was only one man who could give a comrade's affidavit, Mr. John H. Mowry, 297 Sherbrooke street, formerly of Ashburnham, and as he was confined to his bed and nearly 90 years of age himself, it was necessary to go to his house and get his affidavit, before he left for the happy hunting grounds.

"He too called out that he was afraid he would be dead before getting his pension, but 'Old Joe' Valois is poor, and when a man gets to be over 90 years of age, and is downright poor into the bargain, it behooves a grateful country to get him his pension at once if one is coming to him.

"When the Minister was approached," continued Mr. Burnham, "he exclaimed that there were 25,000 applications in, most of which were bogus, but, in view of the circumstances he would defy routine and red tape and go back and look up Joe's claim.

"This was done, and the good news has been lately received that the $100 was forthcoming. A friend will advance the $100 to him to-day so that the old man's fears will not be realized, and the oldest volunteer of '66 at any rate, in Peterboro, will know that there's some truth in reports of good fortune after all.

"It must be understood, however, that this case is not to be taken as a sample, for, unless a man can qualify by being over 90 years of age, and in poor circumstances, his case cannot be specially considered, as you can easily see if that sort of thing was started amongst 25,000 claimants the departmental work at Ottawa, would soon degenerate into a riot."

"I am sure we will all be glad," said Mr. Burnham in concluding, "that 'Old Joe' will have a little of his own money to bless himself with for his last days."

BOOKS TO AID MECHANICS ARE IN THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

The value of a library to the public is not to be altogether gauged by the number of volumes that are daily passed over the receiving desk. If it were so the Peterborough library would stand well among kindred institutions in the matter of circulation.

In the Peterborough Library, as in others, fiction is the predominating factor, and it is a mooted question in many minds as to whether the flooding of our homes with a literature, much of which is ephermal and apparently worthless, stands in the light of an advantage or a hindrance to social advancement. But the testimony of the greatest minds seems to point to the fact that there is good to be found in all literature, and that no matter how hard it may be to discover the value of this or that book, the value is there, if not in the inculcation of moral or elevating ideas, at any rate, in the exercise it provides for the active brain or the soothing influence it exerts over the tired one. It was Plato who said that there is no book so bad but some good may be found in it, and accepting his dictum in conjunction with that of many another eminent philosopher, we may rest assured that much more good than harm is being done by the fiction in circulation in the Peterborough Library.

But there is a good point of perhaps greater importance upon which something needs to be said, and that is the scant use that is being made not only of what technical works there are in the library, but also of those dealing with history, travel, biography and religion. Last March the Ontario Government, through its Inspector of Libraries, sent to the Peterborough Library for the use of the mechanics of the city 33 volumes, applying specially to the industries of Peterborough. When they arrived their titles and the subjects with which they dealt were duly published in the papers, but notwithstanding this, the net result so far has been that the circulation has amounted to only 36. The only explanation that can be offered for this seeming indifference is that few are aware of the great benefits that are lying at their disposal. It is incredible that in a city, of this size filled with young men ambitious to prosper at their various callings, there should be any other reason for the attitude manifested.

The members of the Library Board are anxious to make the institution a centre of interest to professional man and mechanic alike, and nothing will give hem greater pleasure than to receive suggestions as to the purchase of books dealing with matters of general usefulness or interest to the public. For this purpose a book has been placed on the receiving desk and anyone is at liberty to place his or her suggestion therein. In future Saturday issues of the local papers an endeavor will be made to set forth some special features of library work and to show in how many different ways the institution can be made an integral and important part of the educational system of the city.

MR. W. M. TAYLOR HAS SOME DOUBTS AS TO AUTHENTICITY OF FORTUNE STORY

Montreal, July 20. — The prospect of being heir to an estate of $25,000,000 in Scotland, as a descendant of the late Dr. Taylor, is, up to the present bringing little joy to the heart of Mr. W. M. Taylor, chief clerk in the auditor's office at the C. P.R. headquarters.

Mr. Taylor has considerable doubts as to the authenticity of the story that this big fortune is awaiting him and his relatives in Scotland, and makes no secret of his annoyance when the subject is mentioned.

This morning he was totting up figures with all the assiduity of a fellow-clerk on the C.P.R., who some time ago was left a baronetcy without any money, when a despatch from Peterborough, was shown him stating that Mr. W. H. Hill, the wife of the water commissioner there, was a grand-daughter of Dr. Taylor, and, therefore, would claim with him a share of the $25,000,000 fortune supposed to have been left by Dr. Taylor.

"That was in the paper several days ago," said Mr. Taylor, impatiently.

"But is it true?" he was asked.

Mr. Taylor frowned. "I'm not saying anything about it," he said, and abruptly turned to his work.

BUSINESS MEN HAD THEIR DAY

About 75 of the business men of the city took in their annual excursion down to Idyl Wyld on the Stoney Lake yesterday. Owing to the chilly state of the weather a sumptous dinner at the hotel was readily enjoyed.

After a wait of a couple of hours a start was made for home. The boat stopped at the street railway wharf, where the excursionists disembarked and boarded the street cars waiting there for them

It was one big afternoon and evening of enjoyment

No Gas
No Dust
Supplies home with pure warm air.
Fused joints cannot leak.

Heating a Home Properly is Something More Than Raising the Temperature. The air must be pure as well as warm. The health of your family demands it. An odor of gas is not only unpleasant but is a menace to the health. Fine coal dust floating in the air is just as bad.

¶ The HECLA Furnace is absolutely gas and dust proof. The Joints, which in other Furnaces are made with bolts and cement, are fused in the HECLA. This process welds the cast-iron and steel into a solid one-piece construction.

¶ Expansion and contraction cannot spread the fused joint. Even after 20 years of service, the joints in the HECLA will be found perfectly tight. The fumes from the fire cannot find an opening. The air in the living rooms is always pure and healthful.

HECLA FURNACE

Ribbed Fire-Pot

Saves one ton in Seven

This healthful heating costs less than ordinary warm air heating. The fire-pot of the HECLA is steel ribbed to radiate the heat rapidly. This, by actual test, makes a saving of 13⅞%, or one ton of coal in seven.

Do you want to give more thought to the heating of your home?

"Comfort & Health" will interest you. It is a book on sane heating. Your address on a post card will bring it.

CANADIAN BORN.

(E. Pauline Johnson, Tekahionwake.)

We first saw light in Canada,
The land beloved of God,
We are the pulse of Canada,
Its marrow and its blood.
And we, the men of Canada,
Can face the world and brag
That we were born in Canada,
Beneath the British flag!

Few of us have the blood of Kings,
And few of courtly birth;
But few are vagabonds or rogues
Of doubtful name and worth;
And all have one credential,
Which entitles us to brag
That we were born in Canada,
Beneath the British flag!

We've yet to make our money,
And we've yet to make our fame,
But we have gold and glory
In our clean Colonial name;
And every man's a millionaire,
If only he can brag,
That he was born in Canada,
Beneath the British flag!

The Dutch may have their Holland,
The Spaniard have his Spain,
The Yankee to the south of us
Must south of us remain;
And not a man dare lift a hand
Against the men who brag
That they were born in Canada,
Beneath the British flag!

ALCOHOL AND DISEASE—ADVICE TO YOUNG PEOPLE.

A celebrated doctor has said, "Alcohol is a fertilizer of the human soil for disease," which means that by putting alcohol into the body it is fertilized—made ready—for all kinds of disease. The bloom we like to see in the garden of human life is health, but alcohol does not produce this flower. Those who drink intoxicating liquors have weaker bodies than they otherwise would have, and are more liable to disease than are the total abstainers. Drunkenness is a disease. What thousands of sick folks in our country to-day. But drunkenness is only one of many diseases brought on by by drinking.

The great temperance orator, J. B. Gough, once went into a village where there were few people, but a large number of pigs. He remarked to one of the keepers what fine looking pigs these were, and asked what they were fed on. The keeper told him they were largely fed on the refuse from the brewery; he also informed Mr. Gough that, although they looked such fine animals, they were not really so, for if a pig got a scratch it turned to a running sore and never healed. "So," said the keeper, "if the skin is broken, we kill them at once."

What a lesson for drinkers! Many who look well, and imagine they are well, find that when some little accident or sickness comes, their body rapidly gives way, and the appearance on which they prided themselves was a deceptive covering to a body slowly but surely undermined by drink—fertilized by alcohol for the dread weed disease.

Many doctors have told us that the man they dread to see brought into the operating theatre of a hospital is the drinker, because they know his drinking has reduced his chances of recovery.

In Glasgow, when the river was drawn on for the drinking supply, mortality was high, because the water was impure. The first year Glasgow drew her pure water supply thirty miles from the district, from Loch Katrine, the mortality dropped by one-half.

At the present time millions of the population of our country drink impure water, i.e., they drink water spoiled by the presence of poison alcohol. When we have total abstinence we shall have an equal, if not greater, drop in the mortality of our country, because disease will have been rare by taking away its fertilizer.—Band of Hope Chronicle.

A Log and a Gull

Recently when the steamer Otonabee was making a trip from Barrie some of the passengers thought they sighted an upturned canoe with a man clinging to it. Strange to relate there were no field glasses on the boat, and it could not be ascertained what it was. After turning round and going some distance out of course it was discovered to be a log with a large gull sitting on it.

WOODSTOCK POLICE TAKE INSANE MAN FOR CRIMINAL

Another glaring example of the inconsiderate treatment of insane persons who have the misfortune to fall into the hands of the police, has just come to light in Woodstock. That the trouble arose through ignorance, and that the officials erred because lacking experience as alienists is the only excuse that can be offered.

A young man was found sleeping on the public highway on the outskirts of that city and was gathered in by a county constable, on a charge of vagrancy. When he appeared before the police magistrate at Woodstock, he refused to give his name or any particulars concerning himself, except that he was making his way on foot to his home in Tornto and that wearied with walking, he had lain down to sleep. The prisoner with some vigor and many caustic remarks, maintained that he was doing no wrong, that the road was public property and he had a perfect right to pre-empt a portion of it as a sleeping apartment, but his plea availed him nothing and he was sentenced to six monthso in the Central Prison.

Pending his removal to that institution "John Doe" though apparently quiet by disposition, was regarded as a desperate criminal by the officers who had charge of him. His specious argument at his trial, branded him in their eyes as an anarchist of the most sanguinary type, and his very reticence was held as a testimony against him.

The governor of the jail went the police one better, when he jumped at the conclusion that "John Doe" was no other than the notorious Italian "Big Frank" who is wanted by the provincial police for killing a compatriot, near Toronto, and news of the supposedly important capture was sent to Toronto. An officer from that city went to Woodstock, but "John Doe" and 'Big Frank" proved to be two different individuals.

A brother, of the prisoner, however, read of the case in Toronto, suspected the latter's identity and went to Woodstock to find that his surmises were correct, "John Doe" who is a member of a respectable family in Toronto, had been confinin an asylum but escaped and was lost sight of by his friends. He was never known to be dangerous, his sole desire, being to avoid company and remain by himself entirely. He will be purged of the jail sentence hanging over him and returned to the asylum.

One would naturally think that years of experience would enable officers to some extent, at least, to tell the difference between a desperate criminal and a harmless lunatic. Only the chance by which his brother came to his rescue, saved John Doe from a six months' sentence among the real brand of lawbreakers. Unless some judgment is used by public officials such stupid blunders are liable to be made every time the opportunity arises.

HOW TWO BIG LEAGUE PITCHERS GOT CONTROL

There was a time when Ed. Walsh was not a great pitcher. In 1904 his speed was terrific, but his control was so bad that he had literally no idea where the ball was going. He could seldom get catchers to help him practise and had to fall back on an enthusiastic fan. This fan, after handling his erratic shoots, gave Ed. some advice. He doesn't know if Walsh took it, but his work indicated that he did something.

"After the season of 1905," said the bug, "I walked to the station with Walsh. I asked him what he intended to do in the winter. He said he was going to do nothing.

"Then I told him he was about the worst pitcher I had ever seen and described to him how Christy Mathewson, before he gained control, had rented a barn, painted a target at one end and pitched into the target all winter, until he emerged in the spring with the best control in the league.

"I don't know if Walsh took the hint, but he certainly had the control when he helped pitch the Sox to the pennant next year."

Hughie Jennings left Wild Bill Donovan at home when the team went east. The Tiger leader told the veteran right-hander to work out at Navin field and get into shape so that he could engage in active service when the team returned to Detroit in June.

Complying with orders Donovan went to Navin field to work out. Bill scanned the bulletin board and discovered he was the only one left at home.

With no catcher to receive him Bill went to work. He hurled the ball against the heavy padding in front of the grand stand. Every time he pitched he had to walk up and recover the ball. This gave him plenty of exercise, but doing the same thing day after day became monotonous.

Bill engaged Artie Sheehan as catcher, but Artie could not find a glove large enough to hold Donovan's fast one, so Art was forced to retire. Now Bill is again pitching to the heavy padding and getting into excellent shape, running up and recovering the ball.

WANTED.

OH, who will be the white man's hope
And with the massive monster cope
Who holds the title now?
Who will go up to Jack and say,
"Excuse me if I seem too gay,
But how about a row?"

Who will step boldly in the ring
And to all comers gayly sing:
"Come on, or black or white!
Come, there will be no turning back!
Come one and all and you, too, Jack!
Come, try me in a fight!"

The man who can with gloves perform
Upon the other's sable form
And make him quit the game
Will then the little hero be,
To managers can name his fee
And live upon his fame.

If he should write a book or play
Or with a poem get away
Or to high art plane hop
He wouldn't be so grand and great
As though he won in three rounds straight
And put his name on top.

We need a scrapper who can scrap
And put the white race on the map
And change the line of dope.
Cannot a single one come back
To take the belt away from Jack
And be the white man's hope?

"Nothing."

"Then she should have no trouble in holding the job."

Bland's Way.

"I don't see why Bland never pays his debts."

"That's because you don't understand his philosophy."

"Philosophy? Didn't know he had anything but money and debts."

"Oh, yes, he has a philosophy."

"What is it?"

"That only a fool pays his debts. The wise man saves his money to get more credit to make more debts."

Not Necessary.

"So you and Bert are going to be married, Handie?"

"Yes. Isn't it perfectly lovely?"

"I think it is perfectly foolish."

"Foolish! Why, Bert is the nicest boy I ever saw."

"Maybe, but he doesn't earn enough to keep a chicken alive."

"Well, you goose, we don't expect to keep chickens!"

Philosophic.

"The road to ruin may be attractive in the start, but I think that you will find as you get along that it is different."

"Oh, well, that won't make so much difference, because we'll be going so fast by that time that we won't have much chance to look at the scenery."

"What trust did he ever bust?"

"Any man's who ever gave him credit."

TO TAME VOLCANOES.

Plan to Divert Their Energy Before It Gets to the Boiling Point.

In 1767 Sir William Hamilton declared that were he to live long enough he might solve the problem of chaining up the lava streams in volcanoes. As it was, after studying the crater of an extinct volcano, he foretold with exactitude when an eruption might be expected. It has now been established by experiment that the earth grows warmer as the the zone of volcanic activity is approached. Hence it is that a German who has made a great study of earthquake and volcanic phenomena advocates the establishing of volcanic stations for observation purposes, these to be located about the area chosen at certain distances from each other and connected with wires and a registering machine.

First of all, the temperature of the soil and its average fluctuations are to be exhaustively studied, with a view to finding a means of dissipating the energy in the interior of the earth. The earth is to be sounded in the volcanic area and a system of wires and electric batteries introduced at a level which must necessarily be very deep. It is pointed out that a wire system under the earth connected with one above would make possible the study of volcanic action, as it is registered step by step on the recorder. When this shall be accomplished, attention can be directed to diverting the energy concentrated on a particular point before the volcano has a chance to get fairly started.

It is said that the Italian government has been approached in the matter and has considered proposals with reference to a study of Vesuvius.—Harper's.

Statistics gathered from all the world point with more or less certainty to the conclusion that, although in the past fifteen years the rise in the cost of living abroad has been about 13 per cent or a little more, the rise in the United States has been about 40 per cent. Reduced to plain figures, this means that, while the European citizen's dollar has shrunk to about 83 cents, the American dollar, measured by purchasing power of necessities, has dwindled to about 71 cents during this period.—World's Work.

Smiths In the Lead.

A total of 106 Smiths have been graduated from the University of Wisconsin since the institution was first established in 1850. The family of Jones with 56 graduates has the next largest number. Some 54 Johnsons have been graduated—47 Browns, 46 Millers, 36 Allens, 36 Andersons, 33 Nelsons, 23 Davis, 22 Bakers. The longest name answered to by any graduate is Kerschensteiner, with fifteen letters; the shortest name of any graduate is Ho, that of a Chinaman.

PARISIAN SAGE kills the dandruff germs and eradicates dandruff in two weeks or money back.

Since its introduction into America it has become a prime favorite with women of refinement.

PARISIAN SAGE gives a fascinating lustre to women's hair and makes it beautiful. It makes the hair grow luxuriantly; it is the daintiest and most refreshing hair dressing that science has produced, and has not a particle of grease or stickiness in it.

A large bottle of PARISIAN SAGE costs but 50 cents at Wm. Madill's and dealers everywhere. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package.

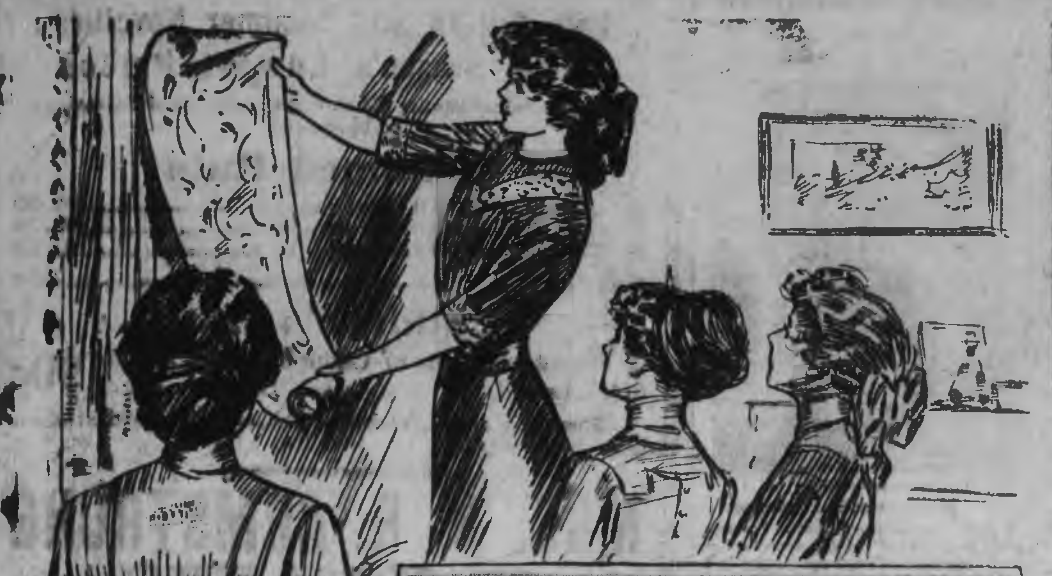
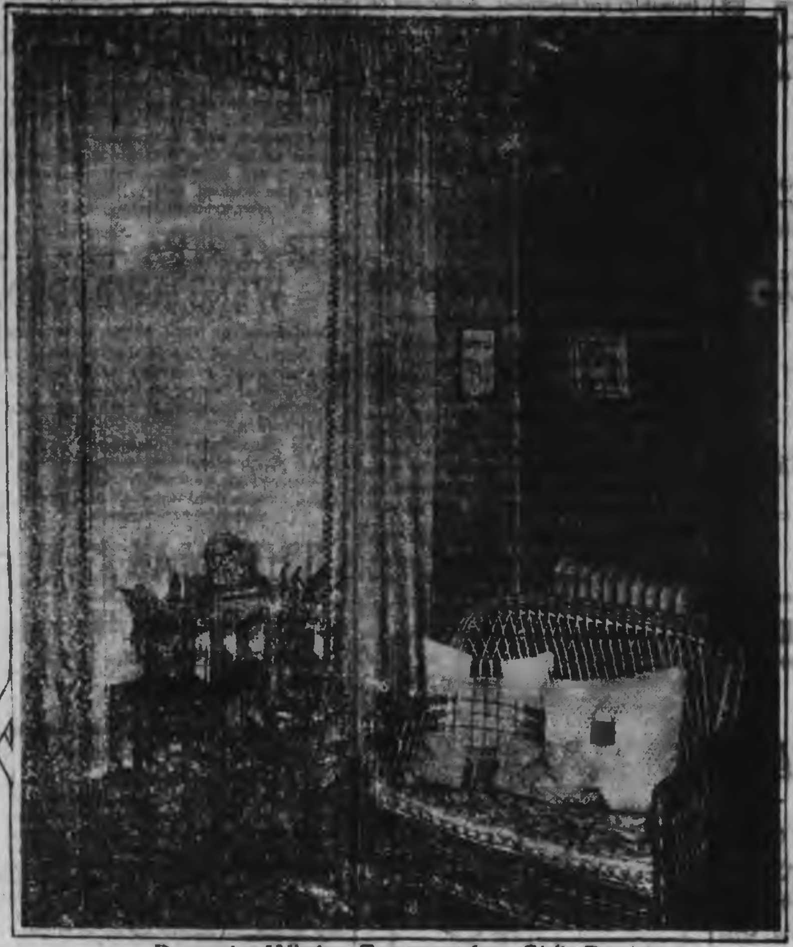
OF INTEREST TO MATRON AND MAID

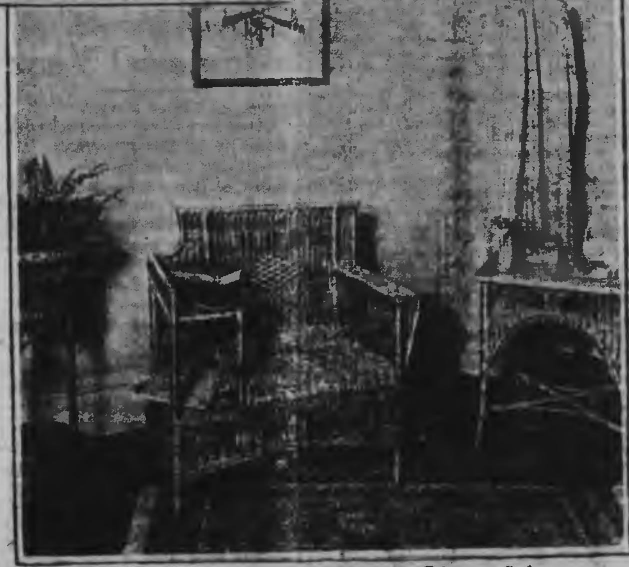


Showing Artistic Treatment of Walls with Stencil Designs



Decorative Window Treatment for a Girl's Boudoir

An Artistic Corner for a Girl's Den



Rattan Furniture of Special Design Is Often a Substitute for Wood

TO work out artistic color schemes for her own room, to study house decoration from a truly artistic standpoint, is the aim of any number of New York girls this season, and in one studio at least—that of two young women art workers in upper Fifth avenue—a class has been started for this very purpose. The girls are all from homes of luxury and the suggestion of the commercial has no part in their intention to become initiated into the mysteries of color harmony and all its attendant details.

The desire to know color values, the combination of materials, the style of furniture which different schemes demand, its proper placing in the general arrangement and the thousand and one details, for every one of which there is a reason and a rule, is the immediate cause of this sudden determination on the part of girls whose main diversion in life is, or will be, society, once they are fully launched for entering this new and untried field.

Back of their decision is the influence which the arts and crafts movement has exerted on the country. In addition there is the more intimate study of the home, which has been brought about by the classes for home makers started in nearly every one of the women's colleges in the country.

As the girl is essentially the home-maker in embryo, one of the really important things—quite as important as sanitation—is the beautification of the home, the ability to work out for herself a color scheme that will enable her not only to decorate her own rooms, those which come more nearly under her own control, but be able to detect discordant notes in the furnishings of the rest of the house.

In discussing the value of such a course for girls the art instructor said:—"A girl can work wonders in the home by cultivating her taste so as to be able to discriminate as to what is worthless and what is good. These young girls will before long have the supervision of their own homes, so that by studying the subject, by closely observing the harmony of color, for one color is a complement of another; by studying the proper arrangement of furniture, the right use of pictures, correct wall coverings, the most suitable treatment for different apartments with reference to their use, lighting and location and the pros and cons of every other important detail, she will be saved at least from making the faux pas that other homemakers, and it may be her very mother, made before her.

"NEARLY every one has a sense of color values, though generally speaking it has to be cultivated. The experience of every one of us, I am sure, is the agony we suffered in some homes we have entered by reason of the discordant element in the furnishings. It may be the pattern of the carpet, the designs of the wall paper or the gaudy colors in the upholstering that have set our teeth on edge, or it may be a thousand and one other things of lesser note. It is to correct just such tendencies as these that I am taking these girls in hand.

"I shall start first by giving them certain materials and having them work out color schemes according to their own notion, then show them where they have erred. I think I can give you as better idea of the sort of drilling they will receive than in making suggestions which will serve to illustrate the danger marks they will encounter. Take wall covering for example. In choosing a paper the use for which the room is to be put is to be taken into consideration, the lighting, and whether the draperies are to be rich in quality or simple in texture.

"As tapestries would be out of place in a simple home, so would a light, characterless paper be undesirable in a room hung with rich damask. Burlap is one of the wall coverings which are safe to use for either a handsome home or a simple cottage. Bear in mind that it is quite possible to combine comfort and artistic effect in furnishing a house, and this applies to wall paper as to everything else.

"In buying furniture one should be [illegible] by the size of the room, and not use furniture that is obviously out of proportion. While it is not necessary to keep strictly to one style [illegible] it is inadvisable to combine articles of [illegible] artistic and impracticable, as it scratches [illegible] beautiful.

"When it comes to floor coverings, there should be a decided harmony between the floors and the walls, though the carpets or rugs should be stronger in tone than the former. The floors, walls and ceiling should show a gradation of shades of the same color from darkest up to light.

"LARGE patterns either in wall paper or carpets should be rigorously eschewed. Turkish rugs are not only sanitary but, as a rule, safe floor coverings, though in buying them it is well to appeal to the wisdom of an expert in the line, since nowadays so much fakism is charged up to the account of a good many persons who deal in rugs. One woman in New York is a rug broker and spends all her time in selecting fine rugs for her clients, who come or send to her from all over the country. She has visited the great rug centres and has written a number of books on rugs, so that her advice is to be respected.

"In selecting the colors for an apartment reference should be had to the lighting, whether the aspect is north or south. A north rooms calls for warm coloring while the southern exposure needs cool tones. Then care should be exercised in the selection of colors. Get those that are restful. It is a well known fact nowadays that certain colors exert definite effect upon certain people, causing more or less annoyance and discomfort.

"To many persons yellow is a constant tonic, the effect of its radiance being like that exerted by the caloric rays of the sun, which cheers one up in spite of oneself. One young girl has made this discovery, and whenever she feels herself likely to have an attack of the 'blues' betakes herself to the guest room and stays until it wears off. Red is probably the most abused color of all, for it is overpowering in a small room and at night absorbs the light to such an extent that it is difficult to light the apartment attractively.

"[illegible] used in a large [illegible]

"In [illegible] any room it is [illegible] best to study out the [illegible] Don't have [illegible] not used and [illegible] need, and all who enter the room will be constrained to remark, 'What a comfortable room!' whether they appreciate the underlying reason or not.

"DON'T overcrowd the apartment. The entire beauty of a room is lost when there is a hodgepodge of furniture and knick-knacks in it. Good furniture needs proper space to show it off. In arranging a room it is always well to consider the aspect of the adjoining apartment. Study the outlook from every quarter where it is visible and create pleasing pictures wherever possible. Figure each piece of furniture out, the place where it should go. If there happens to be a window with a good reading light, then place a chair where the light will fall properly over the reader's shoulder. For night reading have comfortable chairs where one can see without straining one's eyes. Have a reason for everything.

"Hanging pictures is another difficulty that many women have to contend with. A picture appropriately hung should be on a level with the eye and not up under the picture rail where it is entirely out of one's line of vision. One law that is very frequently violated in our home is the law of contrast. Plain backgrounds are much to be preferred for pictures to those that show a decided pattern. Dull gold grass cloth makes charming backgrounds, and as this comes in green gold, copper lustre and a silvery tone, there is a pleasing variety to select from.

"Proper window draping is one of the most difficult details of housefurnishing—at least difficult for the average woman and wholly hopeless in the hands of the average house decorator. There is no individuality in having lace hangings at one's windows nowadays and frequently they are wholly out of place. To think up some artistic materials in a shade that harmonizes with the color scheme of the room is one of the delights of the artist in this line, and this feature lends greater individuality to the home than almost any other except, perhaps, attractive methods of using artifical light.

"Cream net curtains are always in good taste, and with the addition of some soft silk to soften the glare inside one can not go far astray or depart a great ways from the tenets of good taste. These are only a few suggestions to show how much there is to learn, and of the immediate value of such knowledge to the average girl, who, generally speaking, has never before given the matter a thought. I am enthusiastic over my new class and am expecting great things of them in the future. At any rate I mean to instil in their minds the difference between good and bad art in house decoration, and there is no doubt in my mind that it will have a lasting effect on their lives."

There is still another studio in Thirty-third street where girls study house decoration, and where the artists carry the work on in a little different way, in that they are themselves designers of furniture and are constantly bringing out stunning pieces of woodcraft to illustrate certain points in artistic construction or to create a piece of furniture for some special spot. Oak stained gray is largely used, and the effect is delightful combined with the soft gray hangings and wall paper of the same shade, which is now so much used. The work here will constitute a sort of post graduate course in the art of furniture design, so that between the two schools of instruction the pupils will have a foundation which would, if need be, suffice for a commercial career, though in every case the girls are studying for their own pleasure or to supplement an art course.

Glove Modes and Glove Care.

MANY varieties of smart looking gloves have been brought out for autumn and winter service. A sort that is easily drawn on and perfectly adapted to the requirements of the girl who attends a city day school is the piqué sewed one clasp mocha in black, white or tan.

Equally serviceable and certain to give satisfactory wear are the natural colored washable chamois and doeskin gloves fastening with several large self-covered buttons, the one clasp tan or black castor and the dogskin of mannish cut in oak shades. Exceptionally smart for walking as well as for riding and driving are the English hand sewn cape gloves, which fasten with a single big brass button, have spear embroidered backs and come in brown tones as well as white and black. For a girl approaching the débutante period there is no driving glove quite so dainty as that of heavily stitched white glace gauntleted with black kid.

Dress gloves of lambskin and French kid vary in length from two to eight buttons and some of them fasten with three or four pearl clasps. It is possible to obtain these gloves in a shade matching almost any costume and it is best not to chose those with elaborately embroidered back, as that sort of ornamentation draws attention to the size of the hands. If a girl has not the exclusive services of a maid and not much time to devote to the care of her wardrobe, she would do well to buy mousquetaires whenever possible, since nothing looks quite so untidy as a glove from which one or more buttons are missing.

Best of all for motoring are the lined lambskin gloves of eight button length in mousquetaire style, and for very cold weather there is nothing to equal the comfort of knitted worsted gauntlets.

This season more light gloves than ever are to be worn at the theatre. For a short time it seemed as though the omnipresent long white glace had run its fashionable course and that darker hues would be adopted, but just now the tans most in favor are decidedly of a yellow tone and the grays verge closely upon the pearl tints. White glace gloves of elbow or twenty-four button length are good style with all evening frocks of delicate hue, and next in favor are the very palest shades of straw, ciel and rose. These tints are worn only with costumes which they precisely match.

The life of a glove, as every girl doubtless knows, depends largely upon the care bestowed upon it. To lay away, no matter how smoothly, a pair of gloves that are damp with perspiration is to invite that speedy decay which causes the kid to suddenly split. Moreover, the odor of the perspiration lingers and is liable to contaminate the entire contents of the glove case.

Gloves that have been continuously worn for several hours should be hung in some place where the air can fumigate them, and before putting them away a little talcum powder should be shaken inside them. This rule specially applies to evening gloves, which, being of thinner kind, are more easily decayed, and for the same reason they should not be permitted to get badly soiled, as in that case the professional cleaner can scarcely avoid tearing them.

It is far more economical to have the expensive long gloves cleaned after each wearing than to use them several times and run the risk of having them destroyed by hard rubbing.

To roll the gloves in a ball after removing them does more damage than any other sort of maltreatment. Another bad habit is that of jerking at the tips, which strains both the seams and the backs of the fingers.

Every girl should have one of the little glove darners of celluloid, mother of pearl or hard wood, so that when repairing a rip the fingers need not be drawn out of shape or puckered. She should also provide herself with thread of every requisite shade. In order that she may always be prepared to make repairs, and if wise she will cut the buttons from all discarded gloves and preserve them against the time when they certainly will be needed. All these little rules are simple and their observation will go far toward preserving a ladylike appearance.

SOCIAL AMENITIES FOR THE SCHOOL GIRL

EVERY living being, young or old, rich or in humblest surroundings, has some influence over some one, and directly or indirectly over every one with whom he or she comes in contact.

The average normal girl if she dwells on the subject at all places the idea of influence as an attribute belonging exclusively to her parents or her school teachers—it is something which goes with age and consequent wisdom. But there is no theory a girl can have that is so astray as this one.

From the tiniest baby whose cry will disturb a household to the unreasonable old men or women whom nothing pleases now, because all through life the first thought has been of self, there is no age at which the influence of a human person is not felt. What a different atmosphere there is in the home when the baby is a lovely thing of smiles and happiness, and what a delight it is to meet dear old ladies or gentlemen who at the last turning point in their lives are still pleased at the least courtesy that is shown to them; contented with their lot in life and as interested as ever in all the doings and happenings of the young people about them.

There are lessons to be learned from both ages. In many households the daughter of the family is required to take the place of a small child—she is petted and indulged and her every wish gratified, as only an only daughter can be. In return surely the least she can do is to show appreciation of this affection and generosity by always [illegible] humor; always trying to shed an atmosphere of happiness and love in her home. This is [illegible] even though she may have attained full sixteen years or more it is a pity if she has lost [illegible]

[illegible]

The old people [illegible] have many lessons [illegible] she is the eldest of many sisters and brothers her place is clearly [illegible]

Like the dear old people who have lived their life, yet still are interested in all that exists for a younger generation, she can be a real help to the small sister with her first problems to worry over at kindergarten or the younger brothers with their first real lessons, which at first always seem so hard.

These times are still within recent memory for her and she should be able to give great help through her own experience. But even if she has not yet reached the pinnacle where she is sought out as a counsellor and help by her brothers and sisters, her influence is there just as strong as ever. If she allows herself to become lazy and shirk what incentive is there for the younger sister? If she is cross and says unkind words when the day has not gone well what example is there for the young brothers in the practice of restraint.

It is not only within the boundaries of her home that a girl's influence or example is felt. Often and often an entire clique of girls is made to bear the reputation of one of its members. If there is one girl especially charming her friends inevitably rise in the estimation of outsiders, just as a girl who makes herself conspicuous for her bad manners or hoydenish ways is sure to cast some slur likewise upon her companions.

While this outside opinion is often unfair, it is inevitable that every one is influenced to some extent by a friend with whom much time is spent. Be the example for good or ill, each character is bound to feel the effect of a friend's nature, the finer and stronger personality not so much but just as surely as the weaker.

It is a pity, too, that young girls should not realize this fact more—they should look for the weak points in their friends and take care that they do not develop like tendencies. They should down the undesirable qualities as much for their own sake as the others, for perhaps the friend will try to follow their example of never making an unkind criticism, of being always gracious, of firm loyalty to other friends or whatever the trait in question may be.

But even beyond the realm of one's intimate friends the power of influence is exerted. The girls in any particular class are sure to be spurred on to greater efforts if there is one girl who is especially conscientious and does better work than they, but the entire school, all ages and all grades also, receives an impetus when, at the monthly or yearly reading of reports, the names are given of those whose work is excellent.

Even the persons whom one passes in the streets are cheered by a bright and cheerful face and unconsciously depressed by a countenance that is cross and ill humored.

How much more is the acquaintance influenced who receives a warm handshake as from an interested friend, instead of a curt nod. Just a few words and questions to show a genuine good will will do more toward winning a reputation for good manners and charm combined than any amount of stiff and studied politeness.

Two Automobile Conveniences.

TO thoroughly enjoy motoring, one wants to be entirely comfortable physically, and the girl who expects to spend many days in an automobile will have much more pleasure if she has everything ready for that particular form of amusement.

The proper kind of hat, veil, &c., is a very important part of one's equipment, but most necessary of all is plenty of warm clothing, especially as the weather grows colder.

A great help in this matter of keeping warm is an Angora wool waistcoat. The fine soft Angora wool, which is generally used for making babies' caps, makes the warmest kind of a waistcoat and is so deliciously soft and pliable that it does not give one any feeling of being bundled up. With one of these waistcoats on under it, the outer coat need not be especially thick; indeed a girl can wear her summer pongee coat and be quite comfortable.

The waistcoat can be bought, but not everywhere, and the girl who wants one will not find it much trouble to knit it for herself. If she does not know how to knit, her mother will probably do it for her and the wool can always be bought with no trouble.

One of the small drawbacks to the pleasure of motoring is the jar caused by the motion of the machine, especially when going fast. This jarring can be lessened by using a pneumatic footstool. These footstools have recently been made especially for automobiles and are a great comfort. A footstool of any kind is desirable for most girls, for automobiles generally seem to be planned for very tall persons, but the pneumatic stool is far better than any other and lessens very much the feeling of being shaken up.

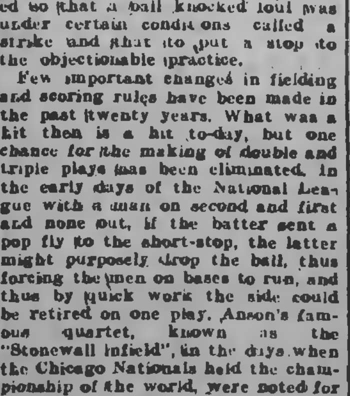
EVOLUTION OF BASE BALL IN THE LAST TWENTY YEARS

Changes That Have Been Made in the Pitching and Other departments of the Game—The Clubs of To-day and Long Ago—The Greatest National League Team of History Was Managed by a Graduate From the Old Maple Leafs of Guelph.

Some of us can remember the days when baseball was played on the school lot with a flat bat, a soft ball the handling of which was free from danger to the person without the use of mask, chest protector shin pads, or gloves, when a ball caught on the first bound or sent by a heavy hitter over the fence, retired the batter when a base was known as a bunk, and the entire nine players had to be put out before the side was retired. In those good old days, the umpire had not been invented, the foul line was unknown and such a thing as a foul tip had not been dreamed of. Everything went. Players chased each other in madly joyous procession around the bases, and the hardest worked functionary in the business was the one who, with a knife, notched the record of the runs upon a piece of timber.

Times have changed and with these changes has come a development of the game which has lost none of its popularity in the past quarter of a century. In the eighties, it came into a public favor which has never wavered and each succeeding year produces a new bunch of players and a fresh crop of fans.

One of the most noticeable changes that has been made in the rules of the game in the time referred to, was in the pitching department. In those days, the pitcher was left more to the freedom of his own will. The box was closer to the plate, and so long as he kept within the lines marked out for his guidance, he could dance about at pleasure. To be a successful pitcher it was necessary for him to be something of a contortionist and marvellous indeed were some of the physical shapes which he assumed. He was at liberty to keep the ball out of sight, as much as he pleased, tie himself into knots and skip from the rear to the front of the box just as he delivered the sphere. Sometimes he followed the ball headforemost, from one end of the box to the other just as he let go of the leather, often in order to throw a "drop ball" he jumped three or four feet into the air and discharged his shot from that elevated position. He was a harder worked man in those days, for then the batter had the privilege to call for a high or a low ball, the first to come no higher than his shoulder or lower than his waist, the latter to be delivered between his waist and his knee.

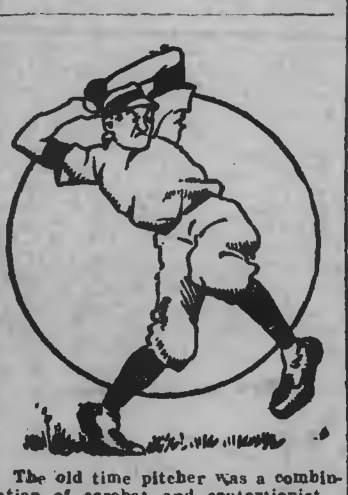


I'M WISE TO THE SIGNALS

"Deacon" White could stand at the plate and knock fouls at will.

Under these conditions, the batting was so light and the runs so few, that the fans wearied of what was simply a battle between the pitchers and, accordingly, changes were made in that department. The pitcher was placed farther back, he was required to hold the ball in full view of the batter, and to keep one foot on the ground when he delivered the sphere. The result was more hits and more runs, and increased satisfaction on the part of the patrons of the game.

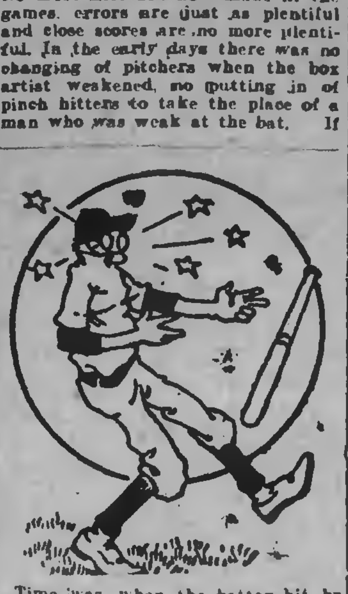
Some expert batters had a wonderful faculty for knocking the ball foul. "Deacon" White, the third baseman of the old Detroit National League team, an aggragation that won the second world's championship series ever played, in 1887, and who was one of the best batsmen that ever weilded the stick, could stand apparently as long as he pleased at the plate and foul the ball at will. When he had the worried and tired pitcher at his mercy he cut loose and was as likely as not to put the ball beyond all hope of recovery. When other batters began to develope the same tedious habit the rules changed so that a ball knocked foul was under certain conditions called a strike and that put a stop to the objectionable practice.



The old time pitcher was a combination of acrobat and contortionist.

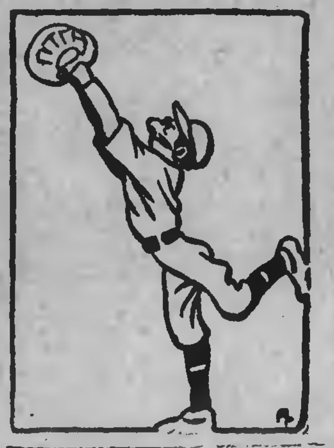
Few important changes in fielding and scoring rules have been made in the past twenty years. What was a hit then is a hit to-day, but one chance for the making of double and triple plays has been eliminated. In the early days of the National League with a man on second and first and none out, if the batter sent a pop fly to the short-stop, the latter might purposely drop the ball, thus forcing the men on bases to run, and thus by quick work the side could be retired on one play. Anson's famous quartet, known as the "Stonewall infield", in the days when the Chicago Nationals held the championship of the world, were noted for this play as well as for every trick ever invented in baseball.

Baseball experts who have seen the games of yesterday and to-day agree with every show of reason that the professional teams in the major leagues of the present are no better than the diamond heroes of the '80's. No more hits are now made in the games, errors are just as plentiful and close scores are no more plentiful. In the early days there was no changing of pitchers when the box artist weakened, no putting in of pinch hitters to take the place of a man who was weak at the bat. If a player was injured then, and then only, he was allowed to retire. He might change places with another player in the game but barring injury that was the only shifting that was permitted. The sacrifice hit was an unknown quantity at that time. No batter got credit for the performance of something which in nine cases out of ten is purely accidental.



Time was, when the batter hit by a pitched ball was not given a base. All he got out of the accident was agony.

The greatest ball team the National League, or any other major league has ever known, the old heavy hitting Detroits, was gathered together and steered to the top rung of the ladder by a Canadian, W. H. Watkins, who was born in Milton, Halton county, the town that became famous a few months ago by the discovery of oil in the adjacent country districts. Mr. Watkins played his first professional ball with the old Maple Leafs of Guelph. One year he landed the Detroits in second place and next season they not only won the National pennant but beat the St. Louis Browns in a series for the championship of the world. The following season they faded. They developed a serious case of "big head," a complaint that has wrecked many a professional team or individual, became superior to discipline and went to pieces.



In the old days, an infielder often purposely dropped a pop fly in order to make a double or a triple play.

Of late years Mr. Watkins has further established his reputation as a baseball manager by successfully handling the Indianapolis and other teams in the American Association.

George Rose pleaded guilty to forgery and theft in police court this morning, and was sentenced to three months in the county jail on two charges. He forged his name to a cheque for a small amount, and also stole jewellery from a local hotel.

DIABETES

Sanol's Antidiabetes, the great discovery of a German Specialist, is the only practical and thoroughly tested Remedy for Diabetes-mellitus. It has a specific action against the poisons of the disease, and by its use the secretion of sugar almost immediately abates and disappears altogether after a short time. So long as the disease has not reached its last stages, a cure can be effected with "Sanol's Antidiabetes."

Open wounds heal after a little time, the disagreeable thirst disappears, after a few days the general health of the patient becomes speedily improved.

Sanol's Antidiabetes is used with an alternate diet regimen based on long experience in the study of this disease.

All sufferers from this terrible and hitherto considered incurable disease, should not hesitate to give "Sanol's Antidiabetes" a trial, as we feel absolutely certain that it will justify all the claims we make for it.

This remedy is perfectly harmless to the organic system, being composed only of herbs and extracts, and containing no poisonous or injurious matter whatever.

GARBAGE SYSTEM TO BE EXTENDED

The Sanitary Inspector has been asked by several residents outside the garbage collection area, whether he could not arrange to have their refuse collected. He has been considering the matter, and if there is a sufficient number to warrant it, he will take steps to organize a route. Will the residents who wish a regular collection, say twice a week, send their names and addresses to Mr. Spence at the City Buildings at once?

Ten cents a week will probably cover the cost of collecting.

PROF. J. F. DAVIS

563 CHURCH ST., TORONTO.

I want to say to the people of Toronto and elsewhere that "Fruit-a-tives" is my only medicine and has been for the last four years. Noticing the advertisement of "Fruit-a-tives", I adopted this treatment altogether and, as everybody knows, since taking "Fruit-a-tives", I have been enjoying the very best health and find it a pleasure to follow my vocation of Dancing and Deportment Instruction".

TORONTO BOY'S BODY WAS FOUND BURIED IN SAND

Frantic Parents and Neighbers Search for Basil Collins Until Early Sunday Morning and Father Discovers Him Dead In Hole In the Sand With His Legs Protruding—Bruises on His Face.

Toronto, July 22.—Buried head foremost in the sand, with only his legs exposed, the dead body of Basil Collins, 11 years old, only son of M. E. Collins, of 22 Lake Front, Kew Beach, was found by his father and H. Edgar about 4.30 yesterday morning. The boy's cheek and nose were slightly bruised. How he got into the hole, or how the sand which almost covered his body was placed there is a mystery, which Police Inspector Miller, Crown Attorney Greer and detectives are attempting to unravel. Whether someone killed the boy and buried the body, whether his companions, while playing Indian, buried him in the sand and left him when they saw that he was buried out of sight, or whether he fell into a hole in the sand and was covered up before being able to extricate himself, are matters of conjecture.

On Saturday night, as was his habit every night, the boy was playing baseball on the beach with several companions, directly in front of the residence where he and his parents live during the summer. At about nine o'clock it grew too dark for the boys to see the ball, and they stopped playing. The boy then went to his home and asked that he be allowed to go to a moving picture show.

Mrs. Collins, his mother, advised him that it would be better for him not to go to the show, and he promised her that he would not. He then went out on the beach again, taking with him a crutch which had been left at the house by a boy friend, who is lame. He was not seen again until he was found.

When Basil failed to return home by 11 o'clock, his parents grew anxious. His father and H. Edgar of 2,070 East Queen street, went out to search for him, thinking that he might have gone in for a swim in the dark and met with an accident. About midnight they saw a canoe floating on the water a few yards out from shore, and thought possibly that the boy might have been in it. They went out and got the canoe, but it was empty.

Thinking that possibly the lad had fallen out of the canoe, the searchers got grappling irons and commenced to drag the lake.

After dragging for four hours, they reached the conclusion that the boy had not been drowned, and gave it up. They walked along the sandy beach. They had not gone many feet before they saw the boy's legs lying flat on the sand.

Mr. Collins and Edgar attempted to pull the boy out of the sand, in which he was buried. This they where unable to do, as the sand was packed tightly about the boy's body.

Then they got on their knees, and scooped the sand away from the boy's body with their hands.

They picked the dead lad up and lay him on the beach. His nose, forehead and cheek were slightly bruised. These, however, were not severe, and could not have been the cause of his death. Probably not even enough to cause him to lose consciousness.

The body was carried into the lad's home, and the police were notified. His mother was prostrated, and had to be placed in charge of a physician.

Inspector Miller of No. 4 police station, with the crown attorney, detectives and Coroner Pickering, were notified, and went to the house. After investigating, the coroner gave it as his opinion that the boy's death was accidental.

Another Bay Missing.

Toronto, July 22.—Another Toronto boy has mysteriously disappeared. This time it is a 12-year-old Italian lad named Ricco Ungaro. He left his home at 82 Robert street to go to his brother's store on Queen street to help there during the day. He had never caused his parents any anxiety by absenting himself before. When they learned later in the day that he had not arrived at his brothers they began to make enquiries, and were seriously alarmed when no word of his whereabouts was obtainable on Friday night. Enquiries were continued on Saturday and Sunday without avail.

The missing boy wore a blue cap and coat, black pants, shoes and stockings. He has bright brown eyes and a dark complexion.

OFFICIAL PROTEST IS NOT YET MADE

Washington, July 22.—A. M. Innes, the British charge d'affaires, called at the States Department again Saturday, but did not deliver the expected formal protest of England against the Panama Canal bill.

It is probable the charge learned unofficially the sentiment of the State Department in this matter. Its position appears to be unanimously in support of the contention, embodied in the pending bill, that the American Government has an undoubted right to favor its own ships, either by relieving them from the payments of tolls or rebating tolls collected without violating the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. It is recognized, however, that this is a subject that might fairly be made a diplomatic issue, and as the Department has decline to enter into any such negotiations, so long as the subject is under discussion before Congress, it is unlikely that it will commit itself to any formal statement of its position at this time.

PARLIAMENT TO SIT IN SEPTEMBER

Ottawa, July 22.—With the present trend of political events, the belief is daily growing stronger in well-informed and semi-official circles here, that Parliament will meet some time about the latter part of September. Premier Borden and Messrs. Doherty, Hazen and Pelletier are expected back from England about the latter part of August, and as there are a number of matters demanding immediate attention, it is believed that Mr. Borden will ask that Parliament be summoned.

Some significance is attached to a proclamation in Saturday's Canada Gazette to the effect that the house will stand prorogued until August 31.

Hydro Lineman Killed.

Toronto, July 22.—Earl B. Light, a lineman in the employ of the Hydro-electric maintenance department, fell 60 feet from one of the commission's transmission towers, a mile west of Oakville, Saturday noon, and died later in the General Hospital here. His skull was fractured, his right arm broken and he sustained severe internal injuries.

Light was 21 years of age and his home was in Galt.

This is the first fatal accident on the Hydro line since it was built.

DEATH CLAIMS FIRST RHODES MAN

Toronto, July 22.—After an illness which lasted for three years, Ernest Riddell Paterson, B.A., the first Rhodes scholar from the University of Toronto, passed away Sunday morning at the residence of his father, John A. Paterson, K.C., in Wychwood Park. Mr. Paterson suffered from anaemia and his death was anticipated.

While at the university he distinguished himself by his scholarship and by his aptitude for athletics. He was a first-class honor man in classics, and at the same time was the champion tennis player of the college, as well as a member of the senior Rugby team. As a speaker he was considered one of the best at the university.

When he graduated in 1902 he was given the first Rhodes' scholarship, which he was unquestionably designated by his all round ability.

At Oxford he won further laurels. He enrolled in Baliol College, and his work at classics and English marked him as one of the foremost men of the college. He was chosen captain of the Oxford tennis team and lead his associates to victory against their Cambridge opponents. He was also a emember of the Oxford soccer team, and he rowed with the Baliol crew. For athletic ability he obtained the "Oxford blue," which is the highest mark of distinction of old university bestows in the way of sport.

LISBON OFFICERS UNDER ARREST

Lisbon, July 22.—Conditions are peaceful to-day both at Lisbon and Oporto. Flying columns of Republican troops continue the search in the north for Royalist bands, but no more have been found.

Several army officers have been arrested charged with complicity in the monarchist plot. The Minister of War says that the Government has mobilized 5,500 men and spent $2,200,000 to quell the rising.

Gasoline Fire Destroys House.

St. Catharines, July 22.—The residence of Allerthorn Dyke at Port Dalhousie, a well-known jeweler of this city, was completely razed to the ground by a fire on Saturday. A gasoline stove exploded and started the blaze, which baffled the efforts of the volunteer brigade, which worked hard to put it out. The house and all contents were entirely destroyed.

The blaze came near to having fatal results; a little child who was in the building narrowly escaping suffocation.

PUBLIC MEN IN FEAR OF DEATH

London, July 22.—Completely terrorized by the suffragettes, English public men are guarded as the czar is guarded at a time of Nihilistic activity in Russia. They are no longer worried by the risk of mere annoyance. They fear for their lives and the safety of their families.

King George's advisers have warned him strongly against any public appearance for the present. Scotland Yard's ingenuity and resources are taxed to the utmost to protect the members of the Cabinet, their wives and children and their homes.

The police are convinced that the votes-for-women militants have entered upon a campaign of arson and homicide. There is no question that an attempt was made to burn the home of one member of the Cabinet. The hangings of the Dublin theatre, where Premier Asquith spoke were actually set on fire. That the gunpowder found in the rooms of a party of suffragette demonstrators was intended to blow up the theatre the suffragettes themselves do not deny.

It is agreed that the heavy hatchet thrown by a suffragette at the Premier in Dublin on Friday, narrowly missed killing or seriously injuring him.

The Women's Social and Political Union issued a statement last night commending all these demonstrations. It is feared that this will inspire further violence.

Premier Asquith, Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd-George, Home Secretary McKenna, Minister of the Navy Winston Churchill, and other Cabinet Ministers, have received the most ferocious threats descriptive of what would happen to them unless they declare for equal rights at the polls. Not only are they assured that they are in danger of being killed, but that the burning of their homes and the kidnapping of their children are planned.

"There is only one thing that will induce us to declare a truce," announced Miss Annie Kenny, who is acting head of the Women's Social and Political Union during the period of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst's convalescence from her recent experience as a hunger striker in Holloway prison, "and that is the passage of a law giving us the ballot."

Pitched Battle In Desert.

Misrata, Tripoli, July 22.—Gen. Fara attempted yesterday to dislodge a large body of Turks, which had been harassing the region near Misrata. The enemy, however, made a tenacious stand in the desert beyond and a fierce engagement ensued. The Turks were forced to retreat after four hours' sharp fighting. They suffered heavy losses. The Italians casualties numbered 19 killed and 87 wounded.

BRITISH NAVAL PROGRAM CALLS FOR HEAVY OUTLAY

Winston Churchill Asks for a Supplemental Appropriation of Five Million Pounds on Account of the Attitude of Germany—Five New Battleships Next Year and Four Each Year for Four Years Thereafter — Nothing Said About Negotiations With Canada.

Special To The Review.

London, July 22—In the House of Commons this afternoon, Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, in announcing the supplementary naval appropriation for five million pounds, said the reason was, the new German naval law which he characterized as remarkable and without example in previous practices of modern naval powers.

The British program is, for five battleships to be constructed next year and four each year for four years following.

No statement was made regarding any negotiations with Premier Borden and none was anticipated, as no official announcement on this question is expected until the meeting of the Canadian parliament. It is generally understood, however, that the increase in the naval construction of the Empire, as outlined in Mr. Churchill's speech, is to be borne in part by Canada.

Young Men Heavily Sentenced.

Belleville, July 22.—Recently a G.T.R. car was broken ito at Trenton and some 30 pairs of boots were stolen. Patrick Riley, Robert Spureless, John Collins, Joseph Douglas and Charles Miles, all young men, were arrested, charged with the offence.

All were convicted before Police Magistrate O'Rourke, and the first three were sentenced to five years in the penitentiary, Douglas to two years less one day in the Central Prison, and Miles to six months in the Central Prison.

Prince Katsura Shortens Visit.

St. Petersburg, July 22.—The serious illness of the Japanese Emperor has decided Prince Katsura to terminate as speedily as possible his visit to Russia. The prince and his party will leave here for Japan on July 27. All receptions and banquets during his stay here have been concelled, as well as his proposed visit to other capitals. Prince Katsura will remain in St. Petersburg for the week as originally intended.

J. T. SHERIDAN, OF TORONTO SUICIDES BY SHOOTING

Widely-Known Manufacturer, Who Has Recently Had Business Reverses and Lost Control of Company, Has a Chat With His Old Employes and Blows Out His Brains—Leaves Notes on Desk.

Toronto, July 22.—After setting forth all his financial and business difficulties in a letter, J. T. Sheridan, founder of the Pease Foundry Co., and up till more than a year ago its president, committed suicide about 3.45 Saturday afternoon in the office of the plant at New Toronto. He was found dying five minutes later.

Of late Mr. Sheridan's visits to the plant had been few and far between. Although it is not the custom to work after 12 o'clock on this day, six men were inside helping to repair a clutch block run by air. An expert was on hand from the Dodd's Pulley Works to supervise the job.

Mr. Sheridan was smoking a cigar. He shook hands warmly with Chester Beswick, shipper, and George Cooper, under foreman. These two men had been with the company for years. The late owner talked over old times with the men. Mr. Beswick then unlocked the office door for him, as he wanted to 'phone.

Hearing groans about 3.40, Cooper and Beswick opened the office door and entered. Mr. Sheridan was lying on the floor in a crumbled position. His feet were under the arch of the desk, while the chair from which he had fallen was beside him. His right hand, grasping a Savage automatic ten-shot 32 calibre revolver, was under his right knee. Blood was streaming from the mouth and left ear. He was still groaning.

Beswick summoned Coroner Dr. Carman Ricker. Sheridan, however, expired within a very few moments.

There were two notes on the little desk in the dead man's hand-writing. One was: "Call my office — Main 3293." This Mr. Beswick immediately did.

On another sheet of paper pinned down by a paper weight, Dr. Ricker found a letter to all concerned setting forth the cause of the suicide. While the coroner would not give the letter out for publication its contents are fairly well known.

In writing Mr. Sheridan stated that he had decided on this means of doing away with himself because the result of practically all his life work had been lost through a financial deal. This occurred about fifteen months ago and after its execution Mr. Sheridan retired from the presidency and control of the Pease Foundry Co.

He became despondent after his defeat and was subjects to fits of mental depression. He went into real estate. But this was not as prosperous a field for him as the foundry business was.

WILLIAM ROBINSON DIES AT KINGSTON AGED 88 YEARS

He Wrecked the Sandfield Macdonald Government in 1870.

Kingston, July 22.—William Robinson, ex-M.P.P., who claimed to be the man who caused the defeat of the Sandfield Macdonald Government in 1870, died in the General Hospital yesterday afternoon, at the age of 88 years.

He was elected as an independent member in 1870, but voted with the Liberals when the Macdonald Government was close pressed.

He was mayor of the city in 1869 and 1870, and also alderman for many years. He was a Presbyterian and also a strong Orangeman.

Asquith In Cheerful Mood.

London, July 22.—The Prime Minister returned to London yesterday from Dublin. He said that his reception in Dublin was unparalleled in enthusiasm and proved that home rule would enormously strengthen the Empire.

The Liberals, Mr. Asquith declared, were never more united than they are now.

Brooklyn Doctor Drowned.

Port Colborne, July 22.—A sad drowning accident occurred here yesterday. Dr. Murray of Brooklyn, N.Y., came here with his wife and child to visit his sister, Mrs. Goodwin of Welland, who has a cottage on the lake shore. The doctor was in bathing, and either got a cramp or the undertow caught him, as quite a sea was running.

The body was recovered shortly afterwards and worked over for two hours, but life was gone. He was an expert swimmer and about 30 years old.

TWO SUSPECTS CAPTURED IN NEW YORK MURDER CASE

Commissioner Dougherty Declares That When Truth Is Told the Crime Will Be Unparallelled In the Annals of New York—Has No Use For Lieut. Becker—Valuable Witness Is Brought Back.

New York, July 22.—Second Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty yesterday made a mysterious tour up town in his efforts to solve the Herman Rosenthal murder and bring about the sensational developments which he had said could be expected late yesterday.

The deputy commissioner in charge of the detective bureau, had promised that there would be "something doing" last evening and that arrests might be expected.

Louis "Bridgie" Webber, keeper of an uptown resort, and Sam Paul, head of the "Sam Paul Association," at the outing of which last Sunday threats were made to "get" Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, were arrested last night on suspicion of homicide in connection with the killing of Rosenthal. Jack Sullivan, alleged go-between Police Lieut. Charles Becker and "Bald Jack" Rose, the latter already under arrest, was taken in custody as a material witness.

An important witness of the assassination was found yesterday. He is a newsboy who sold Herman Rosenthal his batch of morning newspapers just before the gambler was shot to death in front of the Metropole Hotel.

The newsboy is in terror of his life and tells a vague story of the murder, evidently suppressing much that he knows. While the police were looking for him in Saratoga, having learned that a fund had been raised to get the youth out of New York, he has been in New Rochelle since the murder, returning here Saturday night.

The high officials of the police department have ceased to bear the defence of Lieut. Charles Becker, formerly head of the "Strong Arm" squad, and accused by Rosenthal before his murder of having grown wealthy on the tribute exacted from gamblers. Becker has been relieved of active duty with his roving commission, and is kept at police headquarters under orders. Deputy Commissioner Dougherty indicated the abandonment of Becker for the first time when, in reply to a question if Becker had been sent out to Far Rockaway to bring in Jack Rose Saturday night, replied:

"I would no more send out Lieut. Becker to arrest a man in connection with the killing of Rosenthal than I would send out Jack Rose himself.

"There is no evidence yet to warrant the arrest of Becker," said he, "but there are suspicious coincidences and information of astonishing activity on the part of Becker's friends a few hours before the murder."

"Bald Jack" Rose, who was working his head off doing Becker's work on Monday night, hired the car that carried the murderers of Becker's enemy. Now any farmer sitting under his own apple tree with a straw in his mouth could draw his own conclusions."

"We are after the murderers wherever they may lead. This case will be solved and shortly. And when we are ready to let the public know as much as we know, there will be the most startling story of conspiracy and murder that the town ever heard."

Deputy Commissioner Dougherty asserted yesterday that he knew who was in the murder car and who did the shooting, but he added that it might take some time to gather them all in.

Men who know the under world of Harlem said yesterday that the fatal shots were fired by the worst outlaw of the upper east side, a man known widely for his shooting affrays, but who possesses the cleverness never to have a weapon on his person when searched by the police. This bandit, picked up by the auto party, was in a condition of intoxication, where the killing of Rosenthal was the most natural thing he would do, said those who knew.

Just who this man is the police refuse to say. Neither would they disclose the fact that he was one of those arrested last evening.

Andrew Lang Dead.

Banchory, Scotland, July 22.—Andrew Lang, critic, poet and anthorpologist, died here yesterday.

Mr. Lang was born at Selkirk, March 31, 1844. His writings extend over the period from 1872, and include ballads and lyrics, fairy tales, angling sketches, history, critical essays and translations. He was a frequent contributor to periodical literature and was associated for a long time with The London Daily News. In 1888 he was Gifford lecturer at St. Andrew's University on natural religion.

Mr. Lang died from heart disease. He arrived at Banchory apparently in good health last Tuesday, but suffered a sudden seizure Saturday morning, and died soon after midnight.

REPUBLICANS IN MICHIGAN SPLIT

Jackson, Mich., July 22.—Michigan Progressives divorced themselves absolutely from the Republican party in their state convention here on Saturday.

By almost a unanimous vote, the delegates went on record as favoring the placing of an entire ticket, both state and national, in the field. A few instructed delegates voted against the move in order to record the sentiment of their home counties, but explained to the convention that they personally were for separation from the old party.

Delegates to the National Progressive Party convention in Chicago, Presidential electors, members of the state central committee and a member of the national committee were chosen Saturday.

Italian Flotilla Is Safe.

Rome, July 22.—An official communication regarding the Dardanelles affair says that a flotilla of torpedo boats "while perhaps pursuing the enemy's torpedo boats, or for the purpose of reconnoitering," made a dash into the Dardanelles. Although detected by searchlights and fired on by the forts on each shore, they pushed on until they discovered that the enemy's fleet was protected by steel cable obstructions. They were thus prevented from delivering an attack on the Turkish warships anchored in the strait.

"The Italian flotilla," says the communication, "retired in perfect order, despite the heavy fire of the forts, reaching the Aegean intact, thanks to the enemy's bad gunnery."

BRITISH DOCTORS REFUSE TO WORK UNDER INSURANCE ACT

Special to the Review.

London, July 22—One of the hardest blows at Lloyd George's new insurance bill was given Saturday, when the British Medical Association, representing the medical profession throughout two hundred divisions, voted to break off the negotiations pending with the chancellor whereby they were offered six shillings per annum for each insured person for the administration of medical benefits. The doctors demanded half a guinea, but came down to eight shillings before deciding to refuse all consideration of the scheme.

The vote will need confirmation at a further meeting, but this seems likely to be given.

LIVER LAZINESS

Those Who Lack Energy and are Unsuccessful Should Read This Closely.

"I am only thirty years old, yet for almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night and in the morning feel so depressed and heavy that effort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the chance that I should soon be unfit to do my work, and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicine and mixtures Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope. From the very first I could see they were different in action from other pills. They didn't gripe and acted as naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged up system. My spirits rose, I felt much better, the sluggish action of the system gave way to normal activity. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite, good color and ambition to work returned and have remained. I am like a new man and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

This was the experience of J. E. Parkhurst, a well-known grocery dealer in Jefferson. Follow his advice, use Dr. Hamilton's Pills for your stomach, kidneys, and liver, and you'll enjoy long life and robust good health. MORE INTOLERENCE

Canada is not the only country in the civilized world where religious intolerance is in existence. The Methodists of Bermuda have just been given authority by the Methodist Conference committee, recently in session in Toronto to institute a civil action in order to secure rights which they claim have been usurped by the Anglicans in the matter of burying their dead.

When a Bermuda Methodist—or any other member or adherent of an evangelical church other than the Anglican for that matter—dies, his clergyman can of course hold a service at the house or church, and head the funeral procession to the cemetery, but there his functions as the officiating pastor cease. He cannot enter the cemetery except in his capacity as a private citizen, and is not permitted to read the burial service at the grave. That last sad rite can only be performed by an Anglican clergyman.

The public has been under the impression that the last of this spirit of intolerance was stamped out in the British colonies when it was swept away in our own country, where it flourished even in a more marked degree in the days of the Family Compact, and when clergymen of a certain denomination were alone permitted to perform the marriage ceremony and other religious rites. The situation in Bermuda as revealed by the recent action on the part of the Methodists is a surprise to the Christian world, especially when it is made apparent that the cemeteries to which the Methodist clergymen are denied official access are maintained by the municipalities, and are not the property of any single denomination.

It is unfortunate that the evangelical churches cannot settle their disputes without an appeal to the civil courts, and it is besides a reflection on the stage of development that has been reached by that much preached article of faith—Christian charity. But as we have all learned from recent legal decisions that the state courts are not only superior in authority to ecclesiastical bodies, but are, when appealed to, not slow to straighten out such tangles as the one in question, we are justified in believing that the Methodists will win in their present contentions.

THE CANAL AND THE RAILWAYS

The executive heads of the Grand Trunk and the Canadian Pacific Railways have recently stated in authorized newspapers interviews that they do not fear any loss of traffic when the Panama Canal is opened for business two years hence. They claim that the wheat of the western provinces will still continue to move from west to east and to be reshipped at Montreal for transportation to Liverpool.

That they have not arrived at what to them is a satisfactory conclusion, without a careful and practical consideration of the situation is evident from the reasons which they submit. The wheat of the West, harvested as it is with all haste, drawn from stook direct to the threshing machine and then rushed to the elevator has not been submitted to that sweating process which is an essential in securing the best quality of grain. The "sweating" is done in the freight cars on the long trips to Montreal and the reshipment at that point by allowing the air to have access to the moist grain, dries it so thoroughly that the process is completed without loss.

If the wheat, say the railway magnates, should be shipped by the Panama Canal route, the long trip through the burning tropical climate would ruin the grain that was "sweating" in the hold of the vessel or at least damage it to an extent that would reduce its value to an extent beyond any saving that might be effected in the matter of freight.

Sometimes a business man when threatened with competition affects to make light of his prospective rival and all expressions from him to this effect is the best evidence that he stands in fear of the disaster that threatens his interests. This may not be the case with the railway men, seeing that they give practical reasons for their belief but exception is taken to their position by at least a portion of the grain growers and the business men of the West.

Vancouver these days is indulging in dreams that in the near future she will become the Metropolis of the country because the people of that city believe that when the Panama Canal is opened the port on the Pacific will be the shipping and receiving station for the prairie provinces. The manifesto of the railway presidents have caused something in the nature of a jolt to those roseate visions, but the optimistic westerners have not yet abandoned themselves to despair. They say that a trip through the tropics is just what is required to dry the wheat in transit and that consequently the Panama Canal will be the route of the future.

Unless the grain of the west possess some peculiar quality unknown in that produced by Ontario farmers it would appear that the railway men have all the best of the argument.

The two transportation magnates are not alone in their professed indifference to the Panama Canal as a future rival. James J. Hill, the American Railway King, says that lumber produced in the western states will be the chief commodity that the new waterway will bring to the North Atlantic ports of the United States. This, however, will not benefit the places which lie inland further west than Maryland or Syracuse in New York, seeing that they will have to pay a back haul from the Atlantic coast. For this reason he holds that his railways will continue to carry the products of the western forests to the markets of the east just as they do now.

If Mr. Hill's prophecy proves true the consumers of one of the chief commodities in the country will be disappointed in their hopes for cheaper lumber except in those North Atlantic Coast ports in which the lumbermen of the South have for years enjoyed a monopoly that resulted in golden dividends.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Mr. Bourassa has cried "Wolf" so often and has run so many bluffs that his latest outbreak promises to bring him nothing in the shape of consideration to subside into silence.

"Why do men vote?" is the caption of a magazine article. Probably a good many of them do so from no higher motive than a desire to save the spoils of office from the party of the second part.

The champion mean man lives in Toronto. He has asked the police to suppress all crying babies, and to segregate all parents of young children, who give high vocal protest to the conditions which surround them.

The Globe is alarmed at the threatened invasion of Canada by the New York gamblers, whose lives are in danger in their own city, but there is no serious cause for worry unless the police of New York begin to migrate in this direction.

For the first time since the union Ireland has a chance to entertain a British Premier and judging from the hearty reception given Mr. Asquith in Dublin, the people are evidently bent on making up for lost time.

During the recent hot spell there was to the cemetery in every large city, a procession of white hearses, containing the tiny caskets of children under the age of one year. Plenty of money is provided for the intelligent care of live stock, but little is done to instruct young mothers how to save the lives of the babies.

The hatchet, originally intended for a pacific and useful purpose, is fast becoming the recognized emblem of war and bloodshed, and in the skilled hands of a suffragette is more to be dreaded than the rolling pin, formerly the favorite feminine weapon of attack.

If a man, after drinking a glass of ginger beer in a Montreal bar room suddenly became tumultuously insane and killed one man and wounded another, what form of homicidal mania would he have developed if he had indulged in a potation of the bottled chain lightning they peddle in that city?

Because they act so gently (no purging or griping) yet so thoroughly

A Baseball Romance

BY W. A. PHELON

Copyright, 1912, by W. G. Chapman. Copyright in Canada and Great Britain.

"In Cuba," put in Solano, "the Spaniards used real bloodhounds, and fierce ones too, to run down and kill the Indians."

"Well," assented Mr. Morgan, "that would be plumb diffrunt. An Injun is a diffrunt beast from a nigger. Your nigger was mighty valuable—you had to look out fer his hide. Your Injun was mighty dangerous, an' better dead than livin'. See the diffrunce, sonny? Tell me, whar did you pick up that pepper trick?"

"Cuban scheme," explained Solano. "In the Ten Years' war, my father and his friends threw the Spaniards off the trail a dozen times that way."

"Great idea," quoth Mr. Morgan. "I don't bear you boys the least ill-will for it—but somebody's got tuh make good for them dawgs, an' I reckon it'll have tuh be the German."

"THE CATS DON'T RIDE A [illegible] TO DEATH TO FETCH THE GERMAN."

The travelers were accustomed to receiving notes by now and they were hardly surprised when Brockett, as the train moved out, received a small white envelope from the hand of the friendly sheriff.

"Came by mail this afternoon," cried the sheriff as the station receded into distance. "Note to me with it. Note said to give it to you as the train started. Good-bye, boys, and good luck go with you!"

And the note bore, in the same mysterious code, simply these directions:

"SBH Fin W W WP Pos PO TC E SBH FB PO TC TC BA TC Fin TO SB TC W TO W TC Fin AB PO SH."

"Hurry along and look out for trouble," Brockett translated. "I'd risk something that there's plenty of that article still ahead of us."

CHAPTER XXIV.

There isn't much that can be said about certain stretches along the Rio Grande, except that they are undoubtedly those portions of Texas which made a great general declare that if he had that state and the infernal regions at his disposal he'd live in hell and rent out Texas. Mesquite and prickly brush; jungles bisected here and there with thorny trails; habitations almost as scattered and as seldom visible as in the days when the Comanche and the Lipan rode abroad in the land—that is the Rio Grande border. It is an ideal country for smugglers, cattle-thieves and revolutionists, just as it was once the happy hunting ground of the most pernicious red men.

Still, it doesn't much matter what the section of the land may be, or what the scenery may amount to. If it is in these United States—and there is a patch of fairly level ground discernable—there will be a ball game in progress any pleasant afternoon, and the crack of the bat will rouse the echoes where once the Indian war-whoop scared the birds. Hence it can hardly be considered startling or even remarkable to find good games in full blast upon the Rio Grande—games which may not be played with big league skill, but which are filled with liveliness and pepper, loud outcries and troubles for the umpire.

THE BARON RAVED

The second game of the great series between the Fourth cavalry and the common citizens promised to be the warmest battle seen on the banks of the big river in several moons. While the cavalry had won the first contest 17 to 9 on heavier hitting the common citizens—war correspondents and camera artists in the main—had been reinforced the night before the second tussle. Two lithe, sinewy youngsters had blown into camp, asserting that they had some small, unimportant business with the commander. As that official had temporary business at San Antonio, the boys had been made welcome and given quarters while awaiting his return. Baseball, of course, had been one of the earliest topics of conversation, and the newcomers showed intense eagerness to break into the game. As any one outside of army circles was eligible and the common citizens were short-handed, the new arrivals were promptly drafted into service. Brockett was detailed to guard centerfield while Ramon Solano was listed for third base. Both youngsters, while wild to have at least one day of diversion, were modest and diffident when asked to play, and declared that they didn't want to crowd any other fellows off the team. It was explained however, that Sanborn, the estimable war correspondent of the New York Whirl, had counted himself out with a charley-horse, while Summers, kodak man of the Chicago Blizzard, had been stung by a scorpion—not seriously but squarely on the right wrist, disabling him from further baseball doings. That left two vacancies, and the appearance of the boys was a blessing to the common citizens' array.

Brockett and Solano warmed up with real delight when the teams were summoned to the field. They had found friends—a jovial crowd of newspaper men and photographic experts—and the minor officers of the regiment had likewise extended them a warm welcome. The Polo Grounds as the troopers proudly styled the ball yard, was somewhat humpy in places, and rather diversified with cactus in others, but everybody concerned had seen far worse arenas for the game. Grandstand there was none, but long lines of cracker-boxes, beer cases and brush heaps afforded sitting room, while hundreds of the enthusiastic bugs stood as close to the base lines as they dared. Mexican ranchers, Mexican peons, rurales on short furloughs, "lungers" who had sought that region for their health, and soldiers by the hundred—such was the assembly, and it is doubtful if any ball game ever was played before a more uproarious crowd.

A college man who was directing things for a moving-picture concern went in as pitcher for the common citizens, and seemed fairly capable. He stopped the cavalry hitless for two innings, pop flies and strikeouts quickly disposing of the warriors. The common citizens were equally helpless with the stick. Brockett and Solano, the newcomers, on whom the common citizens were counting for material batting help, failed in the pinch on their first times up. Brockett raised a foul fly to the fat sergeant, who was catching, and Solano grounded to a farrier who was playing short.

In the third inning the troopers began to land on the moving-picture man and two hits were followed by a fumble on the part of a contractors' agent, who was covering second. With the bases full, the moving-picture man put on the steam, struck out the chaplain of the regiment—usually a corking good batter—and made the bugler pop to the first baseman. The next man up was the captain of Company C, a portly gentleman who had struck out on his last previous appearance. He barely grazed the ball and raised a tiny fly that hovered over third.

Solano settled with eager hands for the catch. Just as the ball landed in his glove, the trooper who was coaching at third bellowed, like a foghorn. "The spider! Look out for the tarantula, boy—look out for the spider!"

With a startled yell Solano sprang nimbly backward. The ball fell with a chugging thud and rolled away. Two runs crossed the platter, and the whole regiment gave vent to wild and woolly howls of glee. Solano, a bright crimson suffusing his olive countenance, said never a word, but Brockett, far out, shrieked at the absurdity of the thing.

After this the tide of battle ebbed and flowed. The common citizens began to hit the distinguished marksman who was pitching, and got back those two runs in the fifth inning. They accumulated two more in the sixth, thanks to a neat drive by Brockett, and Solano got some measure of revenge in the seventh when he caught a liner and stepped on third before a runner could get back. The cavalry rallied in the eighth, but could push in only one man. They turned into the ninth with the score 4 to 3 in favor of the common citizens, and the audience rooting like wild men.

The moving-picture man fed the first batsman a high, fast ball, and it whizzed past first for two bases. A strikeout disposed of the next man while the next drew four balls. The chaplain came up, tried to catch the infield napping with a bunt, and was thrown out at first, leaving men on third and second, with two down.

The bugler caught a slow, tantalizing curve squarely on the trade-mark and it soared out over center field. Brockett ran back, back and kept on traveling. At the very edge of a mesquite clump far behind his position he gathered in the ball and heard a tremendous outburst of applause from the assemblage. He arched the ball back into the infield, started to walk back to the bench—and then something swished through the air, and a loop settled round his shoulders. The lasso was pulled in with rapid hands and Brockett vanished behind the mesquite clump before he could even give a warning cry.

CHAPTER XXV.

It doesn't take long for a crowd of husky athletes to traverse the distance between the home plate and centerfield. As Brockett disappeared behind the mesquite, half a dozen ball players, with a yell of surprise and rage, dashed across the diamond. It was less than half a minute before they reached the point where the lassoed youngster had last been visible, but all that they found was Brockett himself, still mixed up with the coils of a lariat, his shirt half-torn off, the waistband of his trousers ripped, and his pockets inside out. His assailants, whoever they might have been, had vanished into the chaparral, and the crackling of the underbrush gave evidence that they were rapidly widening the distance between themselves and the avenging cavalry.

"What was it?" "Who roped you?" "Are you hurt?" the players chorused, as they picked up the rumpled but uninjured centerfielder. Brockett, freed from the tangling rope, shook himself, made an effort to readjust his torn clothing, and then sat down on the grass, rocking with laughter.

"I'm not hurt," he explained, between spasms of merriment, "but I think somebody's feelings will be injured. Somebody is going to be badly stung."

THE SPIDER! LOOK OUT FOR THE TARANTULA, BOY—LOOK OUT FOR THE SPIDER!

A large new floating dock for Montreal will be launched at Harrow-in-Furness, Eng. It will be christened "Duke of Connaught."

Many summer tourists en route for the Thousand Islands, had a narrow escape near Watertown, N.Y., when a passenger train ran into an open switch.

THE LONGEST EXPOSITION.

San Francisco's Panama-Pacific Fair Will Last Nearly a Year.

San Francisco's Panama-Pacific exposition is to be the longest in point of duration as well as in stretch of territory that the world has yet known. The opening and closing dates for the 1915 world's fair, as announced by the board of directors will be Saturday, Feb. 20, and Saturday, Dec. 4, providing a season of forty-one weeks.

President Charles C. Moore contended for a season of twelve months, which would have marked the Panama-Pacific fair as the first to run a full year, but it was finally decided that to add nearly three months to the longest previous duration of an exposition was an advance enough at this time. There are few places in the world where an all year round exposition would be possible, so San Francisco seems likely to hold the record for a long time.

The St. Louis exposition has up to date been the record holder. The monster show of 1904 opened April 30, more than two months later than the date set for the beginning of the San Francisco display, and closed Dec. 4. The Paris exposition in 1900 began April 15 and closed Nov. 11. The Pan-American fair at Buffalo in 1901 was from May 1 to Nov. 2, and the World's Columbian exposition at Chicago was open May 1 to Oct. 30.—Tacoma Ledger.

Aeroplane Wings.

It is difficult to determine the cause of most aeroplane accidents, but during the investigation which followed the fatal accident to Lieutenant Sevelle recently in France an important discovery is said to have been made by eyewitnesses. This was that the wing of his Bleriot broke downward instead of upward, indicating that there was an extreme downward pressure as the operator started to volplane. Experiments lately made in France are said to have confirmed this, and it is now believed to be necessary to guy the wings as substantially above as below.

Cookery Points

Fried Chicken.

Fried spring chicken is a favorite treat. Do not neglect the gravy, which to many is the best feature of the entire dish. To fry the chicken cut a small chicken in four or six pieces, dip each piece hastily in cold water, then sprinkle with salt and pepper and roll the pieces in plenty of flour. Have some sweet lard heated very hot in a frying pan and fry the chicken until each piece is of a rich brown hue on both sides. Take up, drain well and arrange the pieces on a warm platter, setting the dish in a hot place to keep the meat from cooling while the gravy is being made. Pour out of the pan all but a tablespoonful of the fat and stir into the pan one cupful of milk. When the liquid is hot and well stirred thicken to a rich cream with one tablespoonful of flour rubbed in smooth and one tablespoonful of butter. Boil two or three minutes, stirring constantly. Season with salt and pepper. A little chopped parsley is often added to the gravy. Butter if here used in place of lard is difficult to manage, as it burns so easily.

Cheese Patties.

This makes a good luncheon dish when meat is not served. Cut out some rounds of bread about two inches in thickness and with a small cutter take out the middle, making a little tartlike case. Fry in fat both the case and the piece removed (which is to form the lid) until a golden brown and drain on paper, or brush the cases with melted butter and brown in the oven. At serving time fill the cases with the following mixture: Boil half a cupful of water and two teaspoonfuls of butter together and add to it four ounces of grated cheese, and season with a pinch of cayenne pepper. Stand the saucepan in boiling water and stir in the beaten yolk of an egg and half a cupful of fine breadcrumbs. Reheat and fill the bread cases and serve hot.

Practical.

"Oh, dear! It is raining cats and dogs!"

"Now, if we only had a sausage machine!"

Fooled Them.

The boy stood on the burning deck,
And all the honest skippers
Were much surprised; they didn't know
He wore asbestos slippers.

When a Man Marries

WHEN a man marries he quickly discovers his need of innumerable things he had never thought of before.

And the butcher, the baker and the cabinet maker have a new home to supply.

The new husband and wife must buy things to which they had previously given little thought.

Right here is a fact overlooked by many merchants.

They say, "How could it pay us to keep on repeating the story of our goods or service?"

If they could reach every possible customer with one advertisement—and if people didn't forget—there might be no object in "keeping everlastingly at it."

But because every possible customer does not read every advertisement, you must repeat.

And because these thousands of new homes are every day coming into existence, continuous advertising brings increased results.

Perhaps some people knew your goods or your store five or ten years ago. Since then new generations have come into existence.

The boy of to-day is the man who will sign the cheques to-morrow. To-day your advertisements are of small interest to him. To-morrow he is your customer, if you solicit his trade through advertising.

Every day thousands of people discover for the first time their need of your kind of goods.

Will you be there every day with your bid for their business?

Or will you leave the field to your competitors?

Advertising is the key that opens the door of these new homes to your goods.

Is Advertising on your key-ring?

Advice regarding your advertising problems is available through any good advertising agency or the Secretary of the Canadian Press Association, Room 503, Lumsden Building, Toronto. Enquiry involves no obligation on your part—so write if interested.

BUY THAT BOY A WATCH

You owe him one. Ask him if you don't.

A watch of his very own will help to make him manly.

It might Stimulate him to study harder too. And he can't be late for supper, and say he didn't know what time it was. Thus it will teach him to be prompt.

And promptness is something that's good for everyone

Sure, get him a watch. Let it be a boy s watch, such as we have to show you.

VISITORS HAD GOOD TIME; MAY VISIT PETERBORO AGAIN

President of Bricklayers' Union Enthusiastic Over Trip—Is a Former Peterboro Man.

"No we certainly did not make any mistake in coming to Peterborough, on our annual trip," was the emphatic statement of Mr. H. H. Hillier, president of No. 2, Bricklayers' Union, when in conversation with a Review representative this morning.

"We have had a very enjoyable visit in the Electric City," continued Mr. Hillier." The Oval was an ideal place at which to hold our sports and we may at a future date come again to Peterborough.'

The Bricklayers' and Masons' excursion from Toronto certainly looked to be a big success. They were a merry crowd of visitors and the fine weather of the day assisted materially in the success.

A big list of sports was run off at Nicholls Oval, chief among the events being a baseball match between nines captained by Bros. Thorne and Weale, in which the former was a winner, and a tug of war between No. 2 and No. 26, the latter taking the honors.

A detachment of the Highlanders' Band with the Pipers, did yeomanlike service, in giving music that suited everybody. This department of the excursion made a big hit.

Heading the parade in the morning from the C.P.R. station, were Messrs J. J. Hartley, treasurer of N. 17; Thos. Issird, fourth Vice-President of No. 2, and H. H. Hillier, President of No. 2.

The Bricklayers' Union No. 2, is a very strong organization in Toronto. It has a membership of 1,400 and its affairs are in a very healthy condition. Financially the Union occupies a high position, there being $20,000 to its credit in the bank. The President, Mr. H. H. Hillier, is a former member and officer of the local union of Bricklayers, and his many friends in the city, will be pleased to learn of his success in Toronto.

POLICE COURT

Acting Magistrate S. R. Armstrong occupied the police court judicial chair this morning in the absence of Police Magistrate Dumble.

A young man pleaded not guilty on a disorderly charge. As a witness was not in a position to appear, the case was laid over till Friday, July 26th.

A strange looking individual was Harry Strange, who charged with vagrancy will likely be deported inside of a week. He has been in this country scarcely a month. He has lost four positions in succession, being unfitted for manual work. He is also badly deformed on one side.

While deportation arrangements are being carried on, the young man will have to remain in jail, lacking better accommodation. He is not capable of performing farm work, being physically unfit.

Park-st. Ladies' Aid are holding an excursion to Gore's Landing on Thursday afternoon, August 1st, per str. Geneva. Boat will leave Wolfe street wharf at 1.30 and street railway wharf at 1.45. Tickets, adults 50c. Children 25c.

MR. F. W. MILLER NOW IN CHARGE

Immigration Office Now Located Across From the Market

The Immigration Office, having been taken over by Mr. F. W. Miller, following official notice, business will be transacted at Mr. Miller's premises, 348 Water street, across the market square.

Of late there have been but very few applications for farm help. The Immigration Officer at Toronto however, is reported as having 2,050 applications for assistance. To-day's Mail and Empire says:

Ontario farmers are face to face with the labor problem. Following the clean sweep that has been made in the Eastern provinces by plans to supply the West with farm labor comes information which makes the problem a serious one for this part of the country. The Ontario Government immigration officer in Toronto has now 2,050 applications for assistance from the farmers of the province. He has no men to send. This morning the Empress of Britain is to dock at Quebec, carrying several hundred immigrants, of whom 150 are slated for Toronto. He expects no more than ten of these will be available for farm work. The situation he declares, is serious. Hundreds of men who are supposed to come to Toronto never reach here, being "stolen" by contractors and agents for construction work and the West before getting as far as Toronto. The highest wages are now being offered by farmers for assistance in handling their crops, this producing no effect whatever, as the men are not to be had.

Auction Sale of Furniture

BREEZES FROM THE DIAMOND

Bill Phyle will handle the games at Riverside this week.

First-baseman Gurney and outfielder Graney, have been released by St. Thomas.

"Cosy" Dolan's hit, allowed Ottawa to tie the score of the first game, with Brantford, Saturday. The game went 13 innings.

Pitcher Bramble won his own game against St. Thomas, by hitting out a home run.

An explosion in the film room of the General Film Company, at Albany N.Y., killed two men and caused a loss of $125,000.

HE NOTES MANY CHANGES IN PETERBORO

Mr. William Sheehy Returns after Absence of 36 Years

After being away from Peterborough thirty-six years, Mr. William Sheehy, a brother of A. R. Sheehy, the local contractor, is back in the city. He left Peterborough when a boy of twenty-two or three. The city was then but an infant compared to its present size, and Mr. Sheehy notes wonderful changes and great progress. He can scarcely be said to be renewing old acquaintances, for thirty-six years works many changes and old friends have drifted hither and thither.

Mr. Sheehy's life from the time he left Peterborough has been spent in the thriving and busy little mining town of Virginia City, Nevada, U.S. The mining operations in that place, says Mr. Sheehy, are especially productive financially. The ore is extremely rich in silver and gold, and sells to the smelting mills at prices as high as $3,000 a ton. Vast fortunes have been gathered there, and there is still much wealth to be extracted.

When Mr. Sheehy arrived there the place was at its best, and he appeared to be well satisfied with the results of his own labors there when seen this morning.

Asked if he intended to return to Nevada, Mr. Sheehy stated that he did not know. He intended to enjoy a well earned rest and spend some time visiting in the neighborhood.

He was married in Nevada and has a son of nineteen, who came north with him. It is his son's first visit to Canada. He is at present at Chemong.

Mr. Sheehy expressed especial surprise at the way Peterborough has been built up. He said to a friend on the train coming into Peterborough that he could walk from the station to his old home, blindfolded, but when he alighted he failed to recognize any of the old familiar places.

OBITUARY

Mrs. John Kylie

Annie Brady, beloved wife of Mr. John Kylie, 139 Hunter street, passed away in St. Joseph's hospital Sunday morning, about seven o'clock, after having been there a little over one week. The late Mrs. Kylie, however, suffered from a lingering illness of nearly three years duration, although death came at the last, rather unexpectedly.

She was of a quiet, lovable disposition and was highly esteemed by a large circle of friends and acquaintances, who will sympathize deeply with the sorrowing and family in their affliction.

Her husband is Mr. John Kylie, and the family, consisting of three sons and two daughters are, John, Frank and James, living at home, Sarah at home, and Mrs. Killinbeck of Rink street.

The funeral leaves the residence of Mrs. John Hurley, 464 Charlotte st., Tuesday morning, at nine o'clock for St. Peter's Cathedral, and from there to St. Peter's cemetery.

It will be private.

Six sisters and two brothers also survive, namely Mrs. Ed. Kennedy, and Mrs. Arthur Lawder of Chicago, Mrs. J. W. Diament, Mrs. John O'Reilly, and Miss Julia Brady, at home and Mrs. John Hurley of this city, Patrick of Waubaushene, and Joseph of Brecken.

LOCAL NEWS ITEMS

The chimes were rung on Saturday last in honor of the city's visitors. As the visiting band belonged to the 48th Highlanders, Old Scotch airs and melodies were rendered. It was remarked by many how audible the bells were, as they were easily heard in all parts of the city.

The pleasure yacht, "Wawinet," owned by Lady Mackenzie, of Toronto, passed through the Peterboro Lock this morning, en route to Healey Falls.

A Close Shave

A bicyclist was rapidly proceeding along Charlotte street to George st., this morning, and a rather fresh horse was being led in the same direction. As the bicyclist passed the horse, the animal struck out with his hind feet, missing the youth on the wheel, by a matter of inches.

Luncheon Asparagus.

Prepare two large slices of toast by slicing lengthwise of the loaf. The slices should be uniform in size and thickness. Toast a nice even brown on both sides. Lay one slice on the heated dish and moisten slightly with a little of the water the asparagus is boiled in. On the toast arrange a layer of nicely boiled asparagus with the tough ends cut off. Cover with a cream sauce to which you have added a little lemon juice and two beaten egg yolks. Place the second slice on the asparagus and add another layer of asparagus and the sauce. Decorate the border with parsley and potato chips or, when served as a luncheon dish, serve thin, crisp brown bacon slices with it. Fresh green peas boiled in salted water and drained, seasoned and a little butter added make a suitable combination and a nice border. Boiled rice or spaghetti increases the value of the dish when either takes the place of meat.

Bread of Rolled Oats.

Two cupfuls boiling water, one-half cupful molasses, one-half tablespoonful salt, one tablespoonful butter, one-half yeast cake dissolved in one-half cupful lukewarm water, one cup rolled oats, four and one-half cups flour. Add boiling water to oats and let stand one hour; add molasses, salt, butter, dissolved yeast cake and flour. Let rise, beat thoroughly, turn into buttered bread pans, let rise again and bake. By using one-half cupful less flour the dough is better suited for biscuits, but, being soft, is difficult to handle. To make shaping of biscuits easy take up mixture by spoonfuls, drop into plate of flour and have palms of hands well covered with flour before attempting to shape.

Fig Cake.

For the dark part of the cake take a half cupful of butter, one cupful of sugar, a half cupful of water, one and one-half cupfuls of raisins cut fine, two eggs, one teaspoonful of baking powder sifted into the flour, nutmeg, cinnamon and cloves, a half teaspoonful each. Bake in two layers. Take one pound of figs and save eight for the top of the cake. For the filling use the remainder of the figs washed and chopped fine, one tablespoonful of sugar and a little water. Cook until smooth. Make any delicate white cake, alternate the light and dark layers, using the fig paste between each layer. Frost the cake all over with icing, plain white preferred.

Sand Cake.

For sand cake or snow cake have ready the following ingredients: Powdered sugar, the weight of eight eggs; corn flour, the weight of six eggs; butter, the weight of four eggs; eight eggs and the juice of half a lemon. Separate the yolks of the eggs from the white and cream the egg yolks with the sugar in a basin. When quite creamy add the lemon juice, the butter and the milk, stirring all the time. Next work in gently and lightly the stiffly whisked whites of eggs and the corn flour. Have ready a well buttered and floured cake mold, and bake in a moderately heated oven for about one hour.

New Green Peas.

Wash the pods thoroughly in cold water. Shell out the peas and put the pods into a stewpan and cover with water. Boil thoroughly, then strain the water over the peas and put them on to boil. Boil them tender. Season with a teaspoonful of butter, salt and pepper and serve. In this way the peas have a much richer flavor and nothing is wasted. The water will make a delicious cream soup for the following day or may be used for making sauce for asparagus or other vegetables.

Endive and Potato Salad.

Cut some boiled potatoes in dice while warm and dress them with a little oil and flavored vinegar, a few drops of anchovy essence and a dust of cayenne, with a very little salt. Put them in a cold place for a few hours. Place a head of endive in a plate or bowl—let it be compact in shape—then put a row of chopped beet root between it and the potatoes. Sprinkle over the latter a small onion finely chopped and some parsley and thyme.

Beets and Cabbage.

Boil young beets tender and when done skin, slice and chop fine. Shred enough white or red cabbage to make quantity equal to that of beets when cabbage is also chopped fine. Stew it tender in just enough water to cover, adding a little butter, salt and pepper. Drain thoroughly and when mixed with the beets add a little boiled, hot salad dressing or pour over the vegetables a little soft butter mixed with lemon juice, salt and pepper. Serve hot.

Baked New Beets.

Many prefer them baked instead of boiled, as the flavor is best preserved in this way. Select beets of uniform size, wash carefully, and bake until tender, allowing more time than for boiling usually. When done, peel, slice and serve them hot, seasoned with salt and pepper and a little butter.

The Italian Camorrist murderers will be distributed throughout the prisons of Italy.

The putting of the trench to lay the sewer pipes on Brock street, from the line on Water street to George street was started promptly on Wednesday morning and the work is making good progress. The opening of the trench at the corner of George street disclosed, about a foot of eighteen inches below the surface of the street, a layer of stout timbers, and some curiosity was aroused to know why any town or city council of former days had caused to be buried at that particular spot such material. There was no apparent purpose to be served and to many it seemed to have been an odd and unnecessary proceeding.

To any one at all familiar with the past history and progress of the municipality the thing was plain, but as the years roll by the number is growing less. And here is the explanation:

Shortly after the incorporation of the town—it never was known as a village—in 1850, need was felt for some means of fighting the too frequent fires. A large proportion of the buildings were clap-board or the familiar plaster covered, or "rough-cast," as it was termed. Once a fire started in a range of buildings, in any fair proximity one to another, all were doomed. So the town council of those days caused to be bought what was termed "a powerful and most efficient fire engine," and this machine is still preserved at the fire hall and was and is known as "Protection No. 1." It was dragged to a fire by willing and enthusiastic cittizens. It was manned by other willing and by many not too enthusiastic citizens, when the contrivance got to work. "The brakes," as the pumping or driving appliances were termed, are long rods or poles, that when not in action fold up along the sides of the machine. When they were extended at right angles to the body of the engine, and manned by sixty men—thirty to each side, and all fell to work, things fairly hummed for a few minutes. The captain of the brigade, or company, mounted the engine and dexterously balancing himself on the teetering levers, bawled through a large tin horn for "more men on the brakes," as perspiring citizens fell out of line to get more breath and take something. Massed together the strength of the sixty men amounted to about eight horse power. One fairly steady and effective stream was thrown a matter of one hundred and fifty feet or up to the level of second storey windows. The work was exhausting, but then a fire was a public excitement, anyway, and everybody turned out and worked or stood about in dishabille and said things.

A sister organization was known as "The Hook and Ladder Company," and was familiarly and often correctly referred to as the "ladder hooking company," due to certain practices and proclivities. Working together the one pulled down and wrecked what the other couldn't put out. It was a fairly destructive partnership, anyway. Buildings were not strongly sheeted if the frames were stout, and when the big hook was well fastened in the side of a house and a couple of hundred men hauled on the line something had to give, and the whole side would come away. It was a fair prediction to make that any building that did not burn down was pulled down in any event. So that a fire generally resulted in disaster which every way you look at it.

For years the creek was the source of supply of water for fire-quenching purposes. Passing almost diagonally across the town plot, from the north-west to the south-east, it was generally available. As years rolled on the lands—along which the source of supply was situated—were cleared up and the spring freshets carried off a tremendous quantity of water and left the creek almost dry in summer when fires were most to be feared. Recognizing this the town Council caused to be dug three large tanks, or basins, quite the shape of an ordinary bowl, one at the corner of Brock and George street, another partly on George street and partly on the market square, about opposite the C.P.R. uptown office, and a third near the corner of Aylmer and Simcoe streets. These tanks were fairly big concerns, lined with a clay plaster and covered in with timbers, and the usual road material on top. A manhole was provided, down which the suction pipe of the fire engine was thrust, and down which any daring soul that wished, by a ladder, might go and explore. Few ever tried it. The interior looked like Hades and smelled like the inferno. No one volunteered. There were risks, and then there might be spooks and other things. This was about forty-five years ago. These tanks were filled from the storm water along the street, when it rained, a grating keeping out what it might of sticks and stones and other debris. The gratings would clog and some public spirited citizen would pull it up and allow free ingress to whatever floated along. So in time the tanks became veritable settling tanks, anything that went in stayed and decomposed.

When a fire broke out the engine was hurried to the tank and the big six-inch suction pipe inserted. There was a strainer on the end—at least it was called a strainer, but anything that could go through a three-quarter hole was pulled up the suction pipe. Occasionally when the solution in the tank seemed too thick they pulled off the strainer and gave the contents a chance. Everything that could crowd through the eight-inch cylinders of the engine came along. Frogs, snails, muck, tin cans, pieces of rope, leaves, old boots, hats, surged up in the general current. Anything that could be liquified and get into the hose was squirted out, and when the stream dwindled in spite of the power on the brakes, the suction was pulled up and a pole ran through it to ram out the obstruction. Frequently the language used by those intimately concerned in the autopsy was unfit for publication.

From long confinement the contents of the tank was about the color of strong tea—or old port wine—which even the reader may use as a means of comparison. As it struck the fire it was fragrant and ominous. When thrown on the roof of a white plastered house, and afterwards trickled down the walls, the sides of the building were a public scandal until whitewashed. The inside of any house treated to a bath of that water was practically ruined, unless it burned down in a spasm of mortification at the disgrace. Any citizen who got in the way of the branch immediately went home and changed his clothes and buried those he discarded. The fiercest blaze quieted down when the nozzle was pointed at it, and people within striking distance dug out in large haste. To get a dose meant that one would be socially ostracized for a week or more. It is true there were other calamities, but none so immediate and pregnant.

With the coming in of the water supply system in the middle eighties, the tanks ceased to have any useful end, and they were filled in and put out of business. The timbers that were exposed in digging the trench at Brook street corner are all that is left of the covering of the tank that was placed there, and which like a deal of municipal life and appliances, discarded with the march of improvement and effort.

SASKATOON OFFICIAL THINKS $80,000 NOT TOO MUCH FOR BRANCH OF THE QUAKER OATS

While there appears to be some opposition at Saskatoon to the proposed butlay by the city of $80,000, for property which the Quaker Oats Company wants before making an agreement to erect a big branch of their business in Saskatoon, the Board of Trade has endorsed the action of the Council, which body approved of accepting the terms of the company.

A vote is to be taken some time next month.

The Saskatoon Star publishes an interview with a member of the Industrial League of the city as follows—

"We cannot afford to lose the Quaker Oats company," said F.R. MacMillan, a prominent member of the Industrial League to a Star reporter this morning, "and I think that the people will realise this fact when they go to the polls to cast their votes, next month, on this question.

"I, like many other people, think that the city is spending quite a lot of money in getting this company to locate in the city, but at the same time I think that no matter what the price is we can't afford to lose them to Saskatoon. There is no doubt that $80,000 is a lot of money to expend on one company, but I think that it is better to spend it on this company, than a bunch of two-penny half-penny companies who want everything and are willing to give very little. The Quaker Oats company is one of the biggest and one of the most prominent milling companies in the world, and Saskatoon will benefit in a great many ways from the location of this industry in the city.

"In my opinion this is by far the best industry yet that has signified its intention of locating in Saskatoon, and we thus cannot afford to lose it. It is giving something to us in return for the money we are spending in getting it to locate here. While they started in a small way at Peterboro, Ontario, they now have a large plant, which employs many hands and has a very heavy pay roll. This is the class of industry that is needed in this city. When they have made such an enormous increase in their plant and staff at Peterboro, it it reasonable to suppose that even a larger increase will take place in Saskatoon, where they have the whole of the province to draw from for their supply of raw material.

"A number of companies have approached the city who want a free site to build upon here, and they ask sufficient financial assistance to build and equip their plant. At the best, all these men want only a life job, for that is all that it amounts to. This company, however, is going to do some practical good for the city, and I think that it will receive the approval of the people."

On the first page of the Star also appears a telegram from S. R. Armstrong, City Clerk of Peterborough, which reads—"Quaker Oats Company employ five hundred persons here."

This information was forwarded at the request of the Saskatoon Star.

THE CHURCH AND POLITICS

Church Should Interest Itself When Great Moral Issues Are Being Fought.

Rev. James Rollins, in his sermon at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church last night, referring to the life of Christ, before He began His public ministry, said that he had no doubt the Nazarene was a good carpenter and a faithful workman. If He had been a bricklayer, He would have built a good wall and if He had been a merchant He would have given His customers fair treatment and would have been satisfied with a fair commission on His business. This is the spirit which Mr. Rollins hopes will soon prevail throughout the entire business world.

The speaker, toward the close of his address said that the church should interest itself in politics, when such questions as temperance and social and moral reform were at issue. The day is past for religious organisations to stand in awe of the politician. It is more fitting that the latter should pay heed to the demands of the church.

Profs. Newberk and Caspay have reported to the Berlin Medical Society that they have discovered a combination which may mean a cure for cancer.

PETES ARE HOME WITH NEW PLAYERS

The Petes are home again for games this week with Brantford and Berlin, Brants playing to-day and tomorrow, and Berlin Wednesday and Thursday. The Caps go to Guelph for Friday and Saturday, and return home for four games with the Maple Leafs.

Each game this week will be called at 3.45 o'clock. The fans will notice several new faces with the Petes. Brant and Nicholls, both youngsters who working at short and second, respectively, have filled two bad infield holes, while Ballinger, late of the Berlin champions, has been added to the pitching staff. This latter gent, it will be remembered, beat the Petes 10—6 in the last series with the Dutchmen.

Manager Rowan is on the injured list, as a result of a mishap to his leg. He took the first bag in Friday's game with Hamilton, when he should have been resting up, and has since been paying the penalty. A short rest, however, will see him in harness again.

The local leader gives Barthold credit for twirling a nice game in his first appearance in the box, and is helpful for better success for the ex-big leaguer. Barthold, it was expected, would take his turn to-day in the first go with the Red Sox.

Frederick, another new pitcher, landed in the hospital after joining the Caps, and may not be ready for business for some time.

Manager Kane has Pitcher Erd with him this trip, and he is particularly anxious to get away with a double win, so as to make up for lost ground at Ottawa.

As the Petes appear in uniform today, Swartz, Trout and Beard are the only survivors of the Templin regime.

SOME GAME THIS; THEY SCORED SIXTEEN RUNS IN THE FOURTH

Something connected with the hamlet of Pontypool, Saturday afternoon and there were fireworks galore. It was a baseball match, the score at the finish standing only 31-16, with the local nine having the extra few.

They say it was a great game till the fourth, when the Electric All Stars turned on the juice, and crossed the old tin plate for sixteen counters. This was during the heaving of Dr. Clarke. The locals say he had lots of "stuff" but the rest of the team didn't fit in very well. A short bunt was as good as a two-bagger, and when the ball was captured, it meant extra bases, as the "Pontys" were as wild as the old Strathconas used to be with two out and the bags at work.

A return game may be played on Saturday next.

The local line-up was—

Kirn and Hagerman, p; Wilson, C; Morphet, 1b; Galley, 2b; Kendry, ss; Pratt, 3b; G. Butcher, A. Butcher, outfield.

CRICKET BY AN OLD CRICKETER

Essex Made the Highest Score for This Season

Hundreds of cricketers must have been mightily tickled by the "Star's" (Toronto) heading, in Saturday's issue of the latest available cricket news. Fancy E. S. Jackson reading that "heading" on top of that splendid synopsis. No wonder that the ordinary reader fails to understand what is meant by cricket results, when a heading like that in the Star is sent forth. Mixing up the starting announcement that Essex county has piled up the biggest score yet made by any country against the Australians, with Mead reaching 1,000 runs for this season, consigns the author to the Mutt and Jeff series with apologies to the series.

The simple facts are, that Essex made the highest score against the Australian team for this season, securing 611 runs for the loss of only two wickets. Douglas was in 4 hours and 10 minutes for 129, and Perrin for 2 hours 15 minutes for 104. Australia went down for 178 in their first venture, but compiled 320 in their second, for five wickets, veteran Gregory piling up no less than 103. Result, match drawn.

With the junior county, Northamptonshire, heading the table, shades of Yorks, Surrey, Kent and others obtrude, yet the table may be materially changed before the season closes.

BREEZES FROM THE DIAMOND

Star Mason has been released from the Guelph pitching staff. He has not won a game this season.

A second edition of the T. A. S. champions went to Chemong Saturday and were defeated by a big score. Huycke twirled for the Chemong boys and didn't allow the invaders to score a run.

Joe McManus, the premier flinger of the Ottawa Senators, has been ailing since Bill Garlow handed him one where Lizzie wears her string of beads.

The Senators are on the road all this week, opening at St. Thomas today.

Sailor Burke copped a suit case in the fourth when he crossed Erd and swept one out along the left field foul line for three pillows. Burke has enough premiums now to start a shoe store or feather factory.—Ottawa Free Press.

The Brinton Carpet Co. baseball team will play a nine picked from the canoe factories at six o'clock this evening.

Knotty Lee thinks that as he took up the defy of the Senators and pitched Bill Garlow against McManus, it's only fair that Louie Cook should send McManus in to do battle against the Big Chief when the Cookmen play in Hamilton, and is calling the Senators' leader to show his hand.

Mrs. Charles H. Havenor is the second woman to enter the field of baseball owners. As her husband's heir she inherited the Milwaukee American Association Baseball club. Mrs. Havenor has just been elected president and treasurer of the club by the directors, and she declares that she will devote her time and energies to making it a success. The St. Louis Cardinals is the only other baseball club in the world owned by a woman. She is said to have been the first woman in the baseball field.—New York Sun.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Some men let their eyesight considerably exceed their dexterity. That's why they enjoy standing round and grinning at the fool chasers.

Of course widows may and do marry. But none was ever able to beat a widower to it.

Gossip may be publicly tabooed, but it has much encouragement on the sly.

The best way to get rid of a suspicion is to go after it and invite it out into the open.

It is a lot easier to deserve what you get than to be satisfied with it.

The older a woman grows the more dissatisfied she becomes with the reflections of her mirror.

Some women talk all the time under the mistaken impression that they are keeping their neighbors from it.

Many a timid man has had the courage to marry and has been scared to death at his own boldness the rest of his days.

Many a platonic friendship heads merrily for the divorce court under the misconception that it is going straight into the state of co-operative companionship.

How He Proved It.

"Are you progressive or conservative?"

"Progressive, most certainly."

"Good! Then you'll vote in favor of having senators elected by the people?"

"I don't know about that."

"Why not?"

"Well, you see, all of our best senators have always been elected by the state legislatures."

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

OMAR KHAYYAM.

HAVE you turned Omar inside out
And wondered what 'twas all about
And vowed that you would read and see
Some time when you were feeling stout?

Some persons who have got the bug
Will talk about the loaf and jug,
The book of poems and the bough,
All mixed together safe and snug.

But should you ask them what's the rest
They couldn't, were the truth confessed,
Give explanation that would stand
A thorough civil service test.

It sems that Omar was a chap
Who didn't care a single rap
How many hours he didn't work
And who preferred to take a nap.

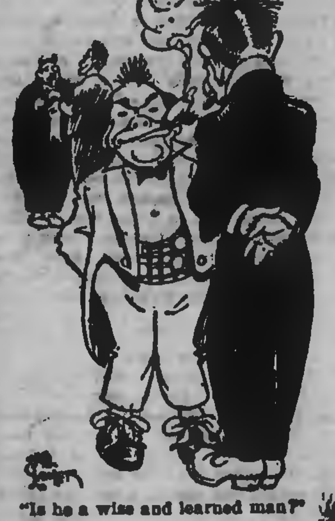
Philosophy was his one whim.
The wise professors he could trim,
And he would argue it for days,
Just so the drinks were not on him.

Whenever other sports were shy,
Then he would turn to rock and rye.
Were he among us now he'd move
From any village that went dry.

And, as I gather from the tale,
If he escaped the frowning jail
I fear the cops would say to him:
"Come, beat it, Omar. There's the trail."

That's what in skimming it I get.
I own I haven't read it yet
To find if I am right or wrong,
Nor will I read it; that's a bet.

A Paradox.



"Is he a wise and learned man?"

"No."

"But he has such a ponderous way of speaking."

"That's because he is such an intellectual lightweight."

Degrees.

"Do you know Mary Long?"

"Pretty well."

"Just what do you mean by pretty well?"

"I know her well enough to borrow her gloves, but not well enough to tell her that her switch doesn't match."

His Limitation.

"You'll never make any noise in the world."

"I'll bet I will."

"Well, maybe. Perhaps you may attain to second bass in the anvil chorus."

FINGER PRINTS OF THE UNDERWORLD THAT NEVER LIE

MR. WILLIAM A. PINKERTON Describes the Amazing Results Achieved by This Method of Identification Which the Chinese Used for Centuries and Mark Twain Made Famous in a Masterpiece

(Copyright, 1911, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

"SEE this fellow; what do you think of his face?"

The speaker was William A. Pinkerton, present head of the great detective agency that has made the name "Pinkerton" synonymous with "detective" from Hong Kong to Chicago—and that goes both ways.

I looked at the photograph he handed me. It was that of a bald, bearded, roughly dressed man, of middle age. There was a shifty look about the eyes, a suspicious twist of the cruel looking lips, and it did not require much thought to decide that I did not like the face.

"I don't like it; looks like a crook," I hazarded. It seemed to be a safe guess for one who was talking with Mr. Pinkerton.

"That's what he is," replied the detective, "and he doesn't look any better in this picture, either, does he?" He handed me another photograph. There was the same shifty eye, the same cruel lip, the same bald forehead and stubby beard. The gentleman did not improve upon acquaintance, and I said so.

"Here's another," said Mr. Pinkerton, passing over a third portrait. I was really disgusted by the subject's appearance by this time. Those tricky eyes and that cold blooded mouth were beginning to affect me unpleasantly.

"Wouldn't like to meet him in a lonesome street, would you?" suggested Mr. Pinkerton. I admitted that I would not.

"Don't know as I would either—that is, not all of them. You see, those three pictures are photographs of three entirely different men." Then he laughed.

"You needn't feel ashamed of being deceived," he continued. "The likeness would deceive any one. There isn't a detective anywhere in the whole world who if told to pick up the man whose photograph I first showed you would not arrest either the second or the third if he met either of them and be perfectly sure that he had the right man. And until very recently there was no police department in the world that wouldn't have tried to fasten a crime committed by No. 1 on either No. 2 or No. 3 had they been arrested and have been perfectly honest in the attempt."

"And now"——

"Now it's different," replied Mr. Pinkerton. "It has always been known that 'doubles' existed. It is an old saying that 'every man has his double,' and there are plenty of cases where three men, as in these three pictures, look so much alike that it is impossible to distinguish their photographs. But there is one physical characteristic that every one possesses of which no double so far as human experience goes exists."

"And that is"——

"That is the thumb print," replied the detective. "See here." He passed me three small pictures—mere blots of black, formless and vague looking affairs.

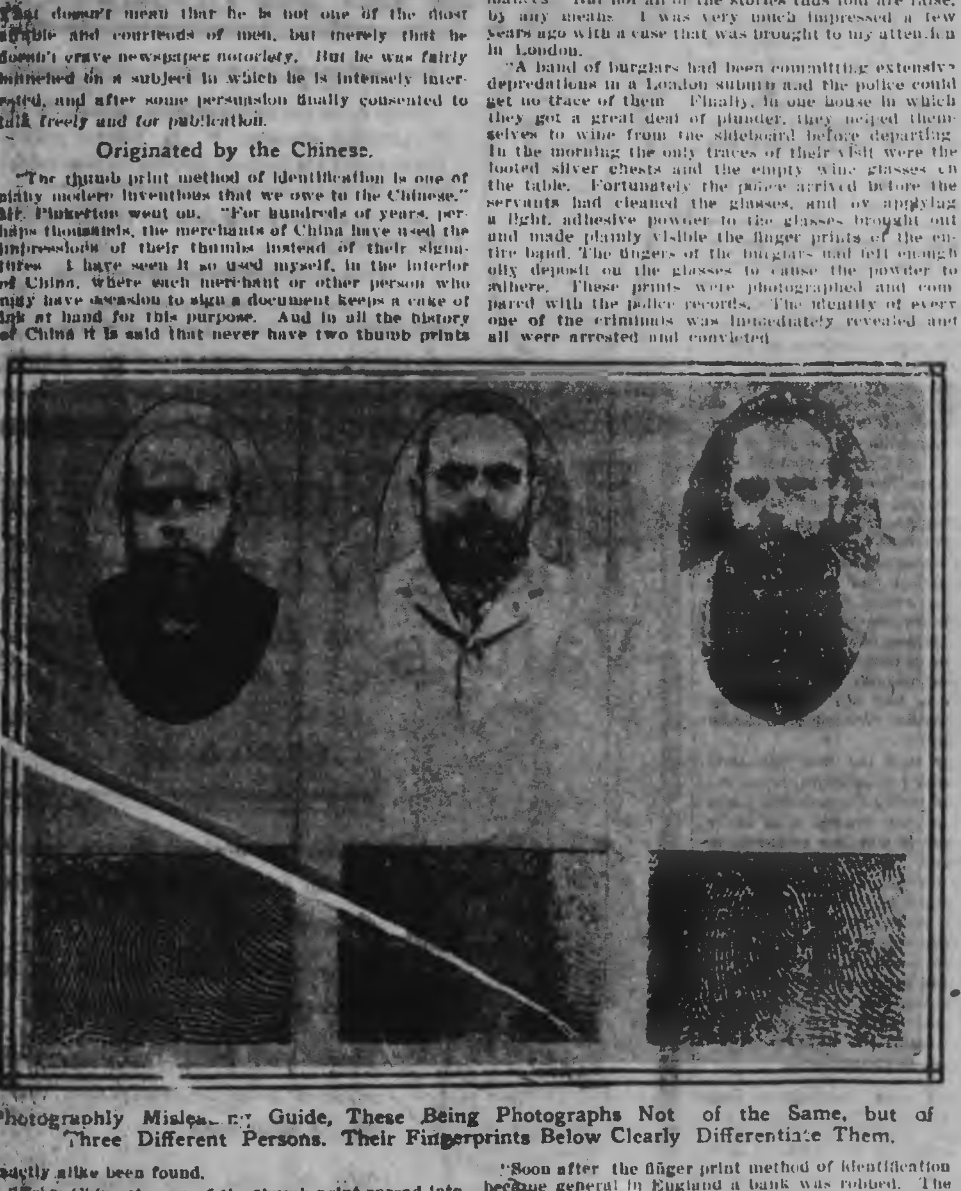
"This is the thumb print of the man whose photograph I first showed you. This is the print of the second man's thumb, and this of the third. Do you see the difference?"

It was as plain as the nose on one's face. The first man's thumb was coarse grained, with lines and ridges set far apart and the central whorl of the simplest possible type. The second man's thumb showed very much finer lines, with a more complicated whorl, while that of the third bore a transverse scar that confused the lines and made the impression quite distinct from either of the others.

It is not an easy task to interview Mr. Pinkerton. That doesn't mean that he is not one of the most affable and courteous of men, but merely that he doesn't crave newspaper notoriety. But he was fairly launched on a subject in which he is intensely interested, and after some persuasion finally consented to talk freely and for publication.

Originated by the Chinese.

"The thumb print method of identification is one of many modern inventions that we owe to the Chinese," Mr. Pinkerton went on. "For hundreds of years, perhaps thousands, the merchants of China have used the impressions of their thumbs instead of their signatures. I have seen it so used myself, in the interior of China, where each merchant or other person who may have occasion to sign a document keeps a cake of ink at hand for this purpose. And in all the history of China it is said that never have two thumb prints exactly alike been found.



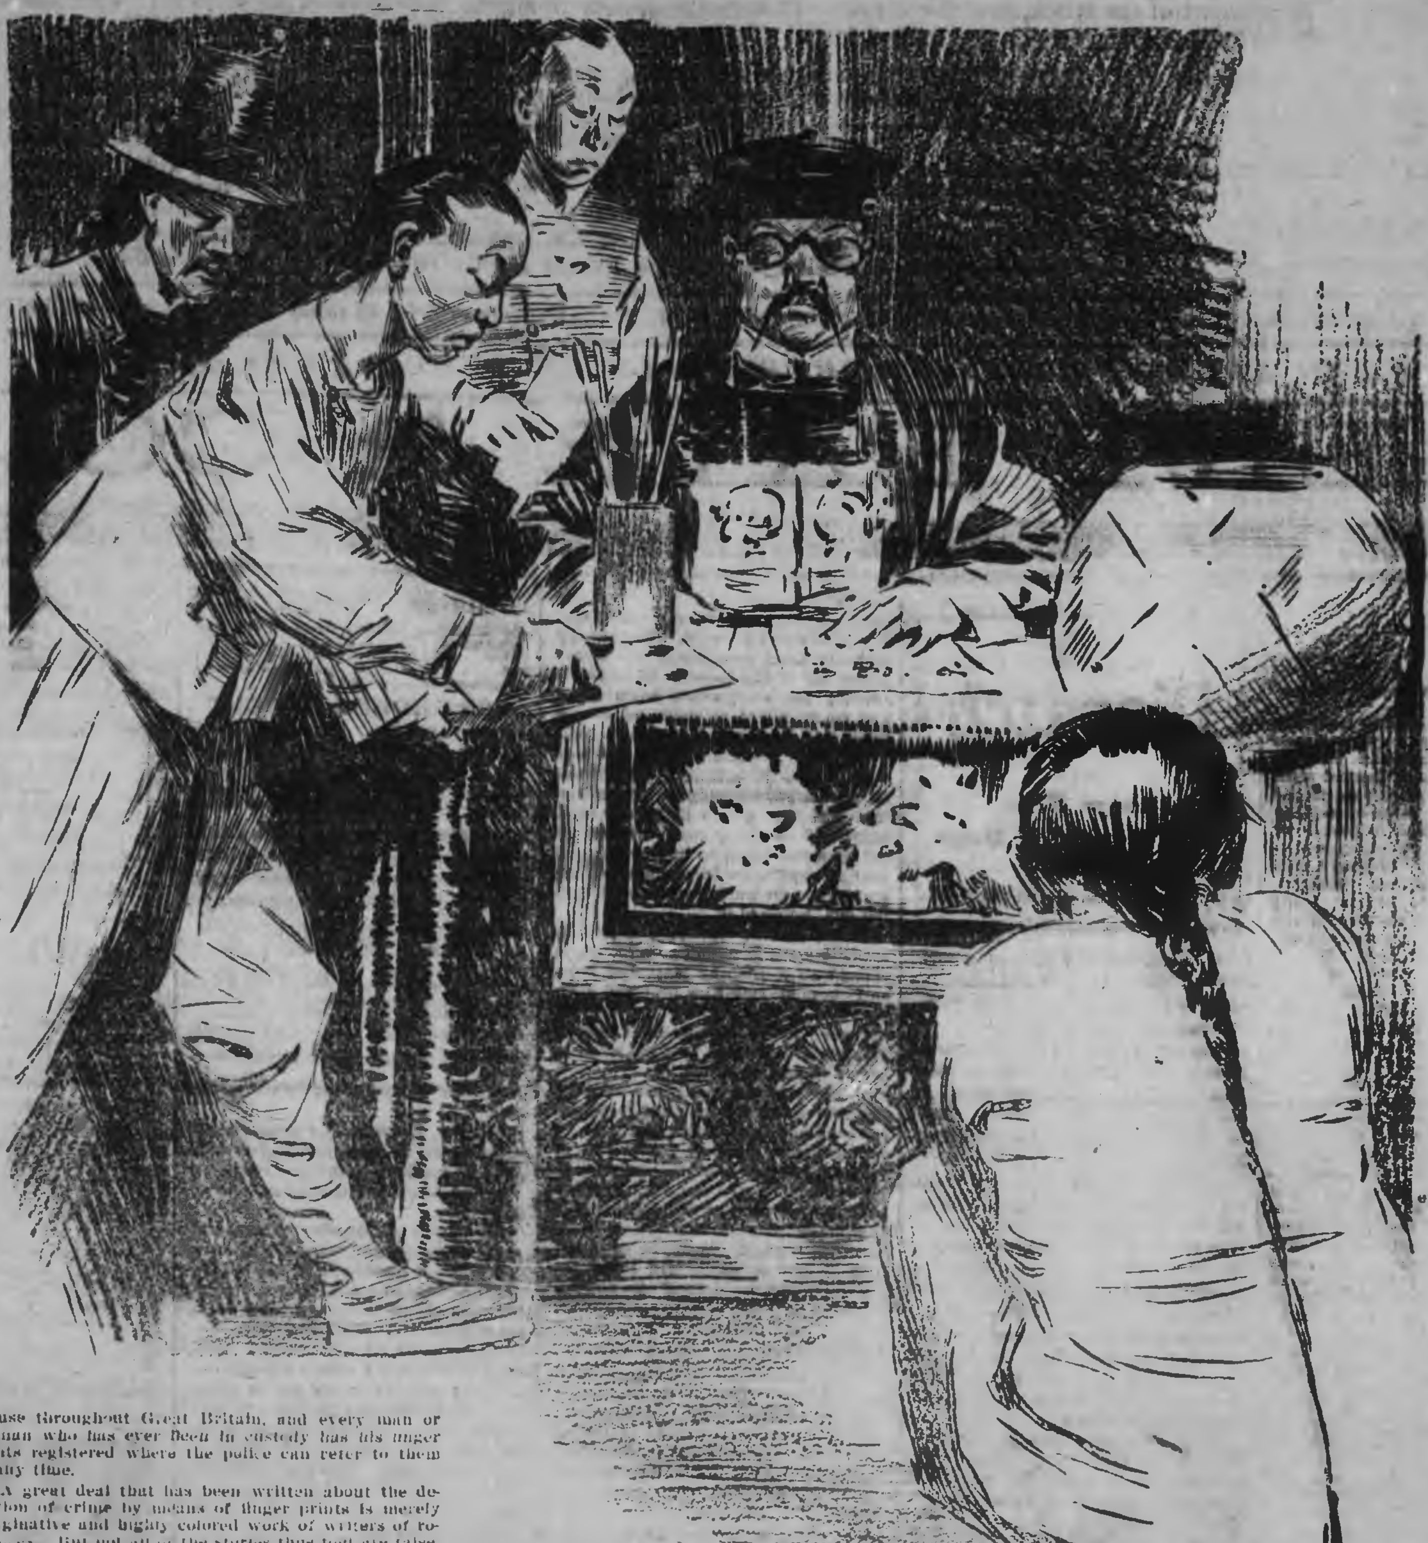
Photographly Misleading Guide, These Being Photographs Not of the Same, but of Three Different Persons. Their Fingerprints Below Clearly Differentiate Them.

"From China the use of the thumb print spread into the north of India, where it was adopted many years ago by the British military authorities as a means of identifying the individual members of the native troops, who look so much alike that white men have difficulty in distinguishing one from another. From this has it spread to the white troops in India, who were registered by thumb prints as a means of identifying deserters. English officers, returning from India and taking positions in the police departments of Great Britain, soon realized that here was an infallible method of identifying criminals. Now the system is in use throughout Great Britain, and every man or woman who has ever been in custody has his finger prints registered where the police can refer to them at any time.

"A great deal that has been written about the detection of crime by means of finger prints is merely imaginative and highly colored work of writers of romances. But not all of the stories thus told are false, by any means. I was very much impressed a few years ago with a case that was brought to my attention in London.

"A band of burglars had been committing extensive depredations in a London suburb and the police could get no trace of them. Finally, in one house in which they got a great deal of plunder, they helped themselves to wine from the sideboard before departing. In the morning the only traces of their visit were the looted silver chests and the empty wine glasses on the table. Fortunately the police arrived before the servants had cleaned the glasses, and by applying a light, adhesive powder to the glasses brought out and made plainly visible the finger prints of the entire band. The fingers of the burglars had left enough oily deposit on the glasses to cause the powder to adhere. These prints were photographed and compared with the police records. The identity of every one of the criminals was immediately revealed and all were arrested and convicted.

"Soon after the finger print method of identification became general in England a bank was robbed. The burglar left but a single clew—a piece of paper in which some of his tools had been wrapped. On the chance that it might reveal a trace of his identity the police sprinkled it with powder and the finger prints stood out distinctly. He, too, was arrested and convicted.



The Thumb Print Method of Identification Is One of Many Modern Inventions That We Owe to the Chinese.

"I could tell you of hundreds of instances in which criminals have been detected and identified through finger prints. A year and a half ago a pickpocket was arrested in Chicago. He was clearly an Englishman who had not been in this country long. The police were unable to get any history of his record. I got his thumb prints and sent them to England. By the earliest possible return mail we received three photographs of the man, with a complete history of his criminal record. It had taken just five minutes to learn who he was when the English police saw the thumb prints.

"A few years ago a burglar, making his escape over an iron picket fence, caught a ring that he wore in such a way that when he leaped he tore his finger off and left it sticking in a crevice in the fence. An impression of the finger was taken and compared with the finger print records of criminals of his class. In a few hours the police had found the man they suspected, and his finger was missing.

"It is not going to be so easy to detect clever criminals by this method in the future, for so general has become the knowledge among crooks that finger prints are dangerous clews to leave behind that any really first class cracksman or forger now wears gloves while at his work. But if every person who is arrested is registered by means of finger prints it is not going to be difficult to identify him if he ever gets into trouble with the authorities again, for his finger prints will be compared with those registered on previous occasions and there will be no chance for him to plead mistaken identity.

"I have been active for several years trying to get the National Bureau of Identification, of which I am one of the Board of Governors, to adopt this system throughout the United States. Some of our members who are using the Bertillon system have been inclined to be sceptical. But the Bertillon system, though useful when very carefully and accurately used, is liable to all kinds of errors.

Bertillon's System.

"Bertillon's method of identification consists principally in certain minute measurements of certain parts of the body, such as the right ear, together with a record of the color of hair, eyes, &c. Now, any system that depends upon measurements is likely to go wrong whenever the person doing the measuring makes an error. A single error ruins the accuracy of the entire record. And these mistakes due to human inaccuracies, which must always be reckoned with, occur frequently.

"A few years ago one of my operatives, Charles Schumacher, was shot and killed by two yeggmen, William Rudolph and George Collins, at Union, Mo. I put every available man on their trail and they were arrested at Hartford, Conn., and taken back to St. Louis. There they were measured by the Bertillon system and placed in jail awaiting trial. Before their cases were called they broke jail and escaped.

"I declared that the world was not big enough to hide them and redoubled the efforts of our men to find them. It was practically certain that they would go back to their old line of work, so I decided the best way to catch them would be to keep track of all the yegg burglaries. Wherever a yegg was arrested, anywhere in the United States, I sent one of my men, armed with the photograph and Bertillon measurements of the two criminals, to look over the prisoners and see if they were Rudolph and Collins.

"One day we were notified of the arrest of two yeggmen in a small town in Kansas. A man from our Kansas office went to the scene, taking with him the Bertillon clerk from Kansas City Police Headquarters, and the measurements and photographs of Rudolph and Collins. The pictures looked like the two men, but the Bertillon measurements failed to identify them, and my man was uncertain, because, as I have just shown you, and as every experienced detective knows, photographs are deceptive. We had to have the men held until some one who knew them could go to the spot and identify them without question. Incidentally, the identification was made, and Rudolph and Collins were hanged. But the point I am making is that it might have been proved impossible to hold these men on the Bertillon measurements alone, while if the finger print system had been used they would immediately have been identified without question.

"The use of the thumb print for identification is rapidly spreading. Every great State prison and penitentiary now uses it, and no escaped prisoner can evade identification. He may alter his physical appearance all he pleases—he can never alter the impressions of his finger tips without amputating all his fingers. In the United States Army the finger prints of every enlisted man are recorded as a means of identification in case of desertion. Even the officers have recorded their finger prints in the War Department. In time of war this might prove to be the only way of identifying a body found on the field of battle. Thousands of unidentified dead who perished in the civil war might have been identified if this system had been in use, and many a man reported simply as 'missing' might now be known to his family as having perished with the honors of war.

"I received a letter from the War Department recently asking me whether I thought it advisable to register the finger prints with every new enlistment. I replied that it made little difference, since the finger prints never changed, but as the records are quickly made and take up little room it might as well be done.

"There is a great advantage to an agency like ours in the use of finger prints for identification. We have no right to photograph prisoners whom we arrest, but we can take their thumb prints. Then, too, thousands of criminals are arrested in small towns and places where there are no facilities for photographing them, but any school boy can take their finger prints. A photograph of a criminal or a suspected criminal is useful in putting the police of the whole country on their guard, but the wrong man is likely to be, and often is, arrested by some too zealous policeman who is looking for glory or a reward and has fancied a resemblance between the picture and the man he arrests. If the thumb prints accompanied the picture, a person so suspected could clear himself instantly if innocent.

Mark Twain's Novel.

"Mark Twain laid the whole truth about finger prints before the people of the United States nearly twenty years ago. His novel, 'Pudd'nhead Wilson,' which was dramatized and had a long and popular run, was based on the plain fact that finger prints never lie. I told the English authorities about 'Pudd'nhead Wilson,' of which they had never heard, a few years ago, and they were intensely interested. I sent some copies of the book to some of my friends at Scotland Yard, and they declared that Mr. Clemens had gone into the subject in the most thorough manner.

"There are such dramatic and romantic possibilities in the finger print system that I wonder that more of our writers and playwrights have not utilized them. I happened to meet a rising young American dramatist in London a short time ago and took him to Scotland Yard, where I showed him some of the things the British police have done with finger prints. He was amazed.

"'To think of all this dramatic material right under our noses for years, and none of us ever touched it!' he exclaimed."

Horse for 97 Cents at a College Raffle

IT was a Princeton University sport who was talking.

"Did you ever hear," said he to a bunch of New Yorkers at a bohemian table d'hote, "the true narrative of how W. H. Edwards, Commissioner of Street Cleaning for New York city—largely known as 'Big Bill,' and no infringement on President Taft's sobriquet—bought a horse for ninety-seven cents? Not marked down from a dollar, either. No? Well, listen. When the aforesaid William was cleaning up the curriculum of Princeton University some years ago there was a big and husky Nova Scotia Scotsman named Donald Mackenzie Macfadyen doing the same thing some grades lower.

"Macfadyen was also a boss football favorite and on the side was tutoring a youth over at Lakewood, but not in football classics. He was handing the youth other kinds of mental pabulum, and he found it was necessary to have a horse to keep up with his young charge, so he negotiated the rent of one from John Dwyer, the well known Jersey horseman. This animal was named Chubb, and had at one time been George Gould's finest polo pony. But he had got a buck in the knee, and when a horse gets that he gets out. It happened, therefore, that Dwyer had Chubb in livery, the last resort of the noblest equines. By and by, when Macfadyen was leaving Lakewood, he concluded he would buy Chubb, to whom he had become fondly attached, and take him to Princeton with him to use on the gridiron if necessary, but incidentally to hire him to other students and thus add to his income. He paid Dwyer $25 spot cash for the horse, including the bucked knee, and rode him home.

"At Princeton the intellectual atmosphere was too much for Chubb and he did not prove a financial success. Or it might have been his bucked knee. In any event, Macfadyen offered him for sale, but there was no rush of buyers. Somehow they were on to Chubb and that knee of his. But everybody wasn't, and presently Bill Roper, the coach, rose to the bait and offered to purchase if the horse proved satisfactory on demonstration. Mac had his doubts about expecting too much of Chubb, but it was demonstration or no sale, and Roper rode away. But not for long. He was a sight when he got back to the stable, Chubb having weakened in the knee and him having gone over his head. Nothing but Mac's aid saved him from an untimely fate, and Chubb went back into his stall.

"Forced at last to desperate measures Macfadyen finally put Chubb into a raffle, one of those running up from one cent to $1 a chance, or however high it had to go to enable the raffler to break even on the purchase money. Here Big Bill appears on the scene, and being a judge of horse flesh and [illegible] of Chubb, who put up a good front, though he didn't weigh much more than the Commissioner does now, he took a ticket out of the box and its number was ninety-seven, meaning that the holder had to ante up ninety-seven cents or stay out of the game. But William the Great was a true sport, and he handed over the cash nonchalantly in the bowl. Then he waited in eager expectancy till the drawing. And behold, the magical ninety-seven won the horse, and William took him with him to his room or some place.

"How many times Chubb fell down with his new owner or what other painful incidents in connection with the bucked knee may have occurred is not a matter of public record, but Chubb could have been bought cheap mighty soon after the raffle, if anybody around Princeton had wanted him. But nobody did. Neither did his owner, but that was different. He might have prosecuted Macfadyen for obtaining money under false pretences, but ninety-seven cents for a horse would have been a hard case to handle. As Princeton offered no relief, William shipped Chubb to New York, but not to enter him at the Horse Show. Just what for nobody knows, but it was reported some time later that he had swapped the horse to a Long Island farmer for a yellow dog and had turned the dog over to the tender mercies of the S. P. C. A. people.

"But that has nothing to do with the fact that W. H. Edwards, Commissioner of Street Cleaning for New York city, bought a horse for ninety-seven cents, has it?"

WITH THE Y.M.C.A. BOYS AT THE KAWARTHA LAKES

Seniors are Having the Time of Their Lives — Father Mac Sees Some Fairies.

The senior boys of the Y.M.C.A., under the direction of S. R. Hall, boys' secretary for the Peterborough Association, are running a two weeks' camp on the Kawartha Lakes, with headquarters on Juniper Island. The camp commenced July 13th, and will continue until July 27th. Judging from the reports of the boys, they are having a very fine two weeks' outing, the first week of which ended Friday, the 19th inst., and was spent as outlined below.

To give in detail the various happenings of every day is impossible, but a short synopsis will suffice to show that they are enjoying the very best in every line, indeed with Sandy Hall to plan the trips and the well known cook, Archie Jackson, to look after the requirements of the appetite resulting from an abundance of pure air and physical exercise, it could not be otherwise. July 13 "Sandy," accompanied by an advance guard, landed at Juniper with the camp equippage and had a real lively time endeavoring to erect tents and protect the "grub," etc., from the torrents of rain which accompanied the severe electrical storm. They succeeded nobly and were able to offer a shelter and dry bed to three less fortunate campers who had their tents blown down.

July 14th, Sunday, all attended service at the pavilion on Juniper in the morning. The afternoon was spent quietly. Physical Director Thompson and wife entertained the boys to tea at Sandy Point, and later all attended the song service at Gillett's. July 15th was taken as an off day, nothing of particular interest being done. The many things necessary to comfort in camp were attended to, as well as completing that which was left over from Saturday. July 16th an early breakfast and an early start for the "Cave" via Gilchrist Bay, Indian River and the road. Several portages were necessary down the river, or rather semi-portages, as some of the heavier fellows found it necessary to wade in in order to get the canoe over the shallow places. The rapids were negotiated in various ways, some forward, some backward, some sideways and others stuck half way down and waded the rest. After visiting and exploring the "Cave" some of the boys, "Mandy" Irvine and "Frills" Nicholls decided they were hungry and endeavored to shake the rest of the fellows and visit a farm house in the hope of securing refreshments but alas—Dora had no pies. The journey back was accomplished by paddling and wading. Swimming was not found necessary though all wore bathing suits in case of emergency. Camp was reached with everyone the proud possessor of an—appetite. "Sandy" Hall, "Silent" Sanderson, "Searchlight" Callendar, and "Mac" McCarrell being the only exceptions. They didn't have such ill fortune in their quest for refreshments as "Mandy Frills & Co." consequently were not very hungry. July 17th, the morning was occupied by fishing and wood-cutting which afforded considerable amusement and exercise. "Indian" Downing and "Bummer" Bartlett were quite accidentally left without a canoe, the wood-cutters finding it necessary to have an extra canoe for a barge. Strange to say the "Barge" appeared to be the most convenient to put the wood into and the "Bummer" poor fellow, had to work to unload it. The afternoon was spent in paddling to the High Falls in Eel's Creek. The scenery along the route is splendid and was much enjoyed. The trip home was featured by the sensational shooting of the various rapids, but the most spectacular feat of all was the very brilliant manner in which "Sandy" shot the second rapids with a five foot drop. He did it! Yes—but—he upset. Did the boys laugh? Oh no that would have been rude. Everyone arrived home with the same companion as on the previous evening—a fine appetite. July 18th, the biggest trip so far was taken to the Blue Mountains, paddling as far as Jack's Creek the canoes were left there and the remainder of the distance covered on foot. Last year's veterans of the trip—"Frills" and "Mandy"—volunteered to lead the way, but after a half hour walk they concluded they were off the track and "Sandy" was elected to lead. The rest of the journey was accomplished in short order. A splendid view of the surrounding country dotted with lakes, was obtained and a visit to the mica mines on the return journey furnished each with a souvenir of the trip. On the return paddle, "Frills" Nicholls and "Weeney" Miller, "Mandy" Irvine and "Mandy's Brother," "Prunes" Taylor and "Pill Pounder" Porter decided to visit Crowe's Landing. The remainder of the party, "Sandy" Hall, "Silent" Sanderson, "Gentleman" Carter, "Indian" Downing, "Searchlight" Callendar, "Nick" Carter, "Bummer" Bartlett, "Pedagogue" Manning, and "Father Mac" McCarrell thought a rest would be very nice, but it rained and it rained and it rained some more but a canoe turned bottom up was proved to be a good shelter. The rain showed no signs of abating and upon suggestion by "Sandy" negotiations were completed whereby the second party returned to camp at Juniper per steam launch "Patricia". The first party were obliged to wend their way through wind and rain to the tune of their paddles, however even an afternoon's rain was not sufficient to dampen the spirits of either party, and a very hilarious evening was spent in making and unmaking beds shying pillows and wit at the most promising looking victim. "Pedagogue" Manning found a considerable share of banter coming his way on account of a dazzling exhibition he gave of launching a canoe and embarking over the stern deck. It proved to be splendid. When he finally landed his landing place proved to be some three or four feet beneath the surface of Jack's Creek but the "Pedagogue" was in the canoe. July 19th, a rest was indulged in, meal times excepted. The rest took the form of sailing, lounging and sleeping and a visit to Fairy Lake. Three nice fairies were seen on the bank of the lake, whereupon "Father Mac" McCarrell, immediately proceeded in quest of a bouquet of white water lilies to present but alas poor "Dad" when he got back, the fairies were gone. Cheer up "Father Mac" better luck next time; you'll learn yet before you are aged. Some of the boys are apparently hatching something for to-night, so watch out for our next edition of camp news.

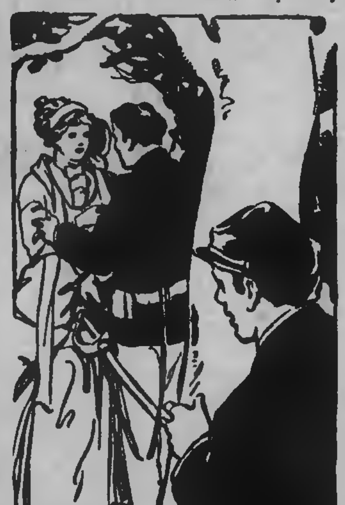
A Story For Memorial Day

By Captain ARTHUR TRASK

"Grandpa," said a miss of sixteen, "I wish this year you would make the story of the war you tell us on Memorial day one about a Confederate. To us young ones the war is a matter of history, and we don't realize that those beside whom we are now living as friends were then our enemies. Now, tell us a story about a nice, brave Confederate."

"I understand just what you mean, my dear," replied the septuagenarian vet, "and appreciate it. Indeed, I rejoice at it. Since we are now one people it is fitting that we, especially you of the third generation of those born after the war, should feel no bitterness for a people who were our enemies half a century ago. And I am not surprised that you like to hear about them as well as about those who fought for the Union.

"Of course I must give you my own experience. There is one I had with a Confederate which is especially adapted to Memorial day, for it is sad, and Memorial day, you know, is sad in itself. It recalls those who perished in that gigantic struggle.



HE CLASPED HER IN HIS ARMS.

"My story is laid in the very beginning of the war. Fighting of a desultory kind was going on in western Virginia, then a part of the Old Dominion, but now a state which in that period of secession seceded from a state. The Allegheny mountains divide Virginia from West Virginia, and it was in these mountains that we were fighting. I was in the cavalry and did a good deal of scouting among these heights, from which I enjoyed some very beautiful views.

"The general who opposed us was a very active man. Indeed, he subsequently became one of the great leaders of the war, and many military men consider him to have been the one general of both sides who had in him the Napoleonic genius for war. If quick movement indicates such genius he certainly was in a smaller field the equal of Napoleon, for even the little Corsican could not have moved more rapidly, more unexpectedly or been in more places at the same time than Stonewall Jackson.

"Well, one day our general sent for me and told me he wanted me to find out where General Jackson was. He was reported to be at Romney, at Springfield and at Pawpaw. He couldn't very well be at all of them at the same time, and the general wanted to know where he was and if possible where he would be next.

"There was a mountain ridge running north and south directly to the west of these places, and, ascending it, I rode northeastward, with Romney and the other two places mentioned below me in the valley. Of course I couldn't see everywhere down there, and troops might be concealed by the trees and intervening heights. Near Springfield I concluded to descend with a view to getting a little closer to what might be going on. The mountain side was not to be passed over, especially on horseback, without going by a trail; but, having had a good deal of experience in mountaineering, I knew a trail when I saw it and, finding one, followed it.

"Reaching the valley, I struck a road. I knew it wasn't safe for me to remain on it for any length of time, so I chose an eminence near and a little above it where I could see and not be seen. There I dismounted behind a clump of low trees, tied my horse to one of them and waited.

"There was but one house in view, and that was a few hundred feet from the road and approached by a lane. I watched this house for evidence of something alive, for the place was lonely and I craved the sight of a human being. It was midsummer and everything was green. There were flower beds about the house, and presently I saw a young girl come out and begin picking some of the flowers. A girl in a flower garden has always been a pretty sight to me, and I watched this young woman with very pleasant sensations. I was tempted to go down and make her acquaintance, but this might interfere with my object, so I contented myself with looking at her, admiring her graceful carriage and the comfort her flowers appeared to give her. They seemed to be talking to her and she to be listening at what they said.

"While enjoying the sight I heard a clatter of horse's hoofs coming up the valley, and presently a horseman in gray uniform appeared. As soon as he reached the lane that led down to the house he turned into it. Catching sight of the girl, he took off his hat and waved it, and she threw kisses to him. Dismounting beside her, he clasped her in his arms.

"Now, I had compunctions at spying upon two lovers who had evidently met after an absence. But here comes in the difference between peace and war and more especially between peace and spying, and you must prepare yourselves for the horrid war part of my story, which I am now going to tell you. Not considering it the part of a soldier or even a spy—for that's what I was—to look upon such a sight, I determined to turn away from the couple, but as I was about to do so the young soldier unbuttoned his coat, took out a folded paper, evidently a letter, opened it and read it to the girl. Then he said something to her in an earnest way, whereupon she gave him her hand, saying something to him, and it struck me that she was making him a promise.

"An explanation of this scene flashed upon me. He was carrying an important dispatch, had informed her of its contents and she had promised him that if anything occurred to prevent his delivering it she would go to the commander for whom it was intended and deliver it verbally. This was my interpretation of the matter; but, of course, it was only a guess.

"The young soldier remained only a few minutes with the girl. After having taken her in his arms again he tried to disengage himself from her, but she clung to him, and it was quite awhile before he could get away from her.

"This parting affected me very much, for I was resolved to possess myself of the dispatch or whatever it was he carried. This could hardly be done without one of us killing the other, and it was likely that he would fall, for he was unaware of my purpose, while I could follow him and if necessary shoot him in the back.

"You may think, my dears, that to harbor such intentions was very horrid of me, but you must remember that his life or mine was a mere bagatelle compared with the lives of men composing two armies. Besides, there was the cause each represented.

"The young man having torn himself from the girl, whom he left standing peering after him, I mounted my own horse and, screened by the trees, rode down the incline in the direction he had taken. We had not gone a mile from the house before I overtook him.

"Hearing the clatter of horse's hoofs behind him, he drew rein and turned. He saw me with a carbine leveled at him and heard me calling on him to surrender.

"He must have known that to refuse was certain death to him, for he must depend on a revolver, and he was out of range, while I could shoot him down before he could come near enough to me to render his weapon effective.

"You asked me to tell you of a brave Confederate, and I assure you this one was not only a brave but a noble man, for rather than be captured with the dispatch on him he chose death. He made a dash at me, but before he had come twenty paces I shot him, and he fell from his horse, which went tearing back in the direction from which he had come.

"The young soldier was dying when I dismounted and stood beside him. I wished that the war was a thing of the past, as it is for you youngsters, and I was in my own home in the north engaged in peaceful avocations. I waited till he was still in death, then opened his coat, took out the paper and read it.

"I saw that it was an order for the general commanding a detached portion of General Jackson's forces to form a junction with him that night and be ready to surprise us at dawn the next morning.

"Then I forgot everything but the carrying of the dispatch I had captured to my general as soon as possible. Putting my foot in the stirrup, I swung myself into the saddle and rode southward. So intent was I on the importance of what I was doing that I did not think of the girl at the house below. As I approached it I saw her holding her lover's horse with its empty saddle and weeping hysterically with her arms about its neck.

"I could not bear to pass her. Turning up the mountain side, I struck the trail by which I had descended and, reaching the crest, rode into camp about 10 o'clock the same night, delivering the captured dispatch to the general. When I told him the story I have told you he said:

"'Thanks to you, we have nothing to fear tomorrow. We will turn in and sleep soundly.'

"The year that the first Memorial was celebrated I went south, found the grave of the young Confederate I had killed and placed flowers upon it. I was no longer in war, but amenable to the generous, loving influences of peace. I was standing bare headed over the grave when the girl I had seen some years before approached with her arms full of flowers. I withdrew without saying a word to her.

"What could I have said to her? Had I not caused the death of the man she mourned? She could not have realized that the act was a war duty."

BIG CRIMINALS ALLOWED TO GO

New York, July 23.—Writs of habeas corpus were issued before Justice Giegerich in the Supreme Court last evening on behalf of Sam Paul and "Bridgie" Webber, arrested Monday and held by Coroner Feinberg without bail on the charge that they were accessories before the fact to the murder of Herman Rosenthal. Harfordt Marshall, appearing for both men, asserted that no facts had been brought out to show that either of his clients had any knowledge of the murder before it occurred and that they were being held in the Tombs without bail without warrant of law and contrary to their constitutional rights. The cases will be heard to-day.

Jack Rose, Sam Paul, "Bridgie" Webber, William Shapiro and Louis Libby, all held by the police for complicity in the murder of Herman Rosenthal, were arraigned before Coroner Feinberg yesterday. All were refused bail.

The district attorney believes that he knows the names of the men whose fingers pulled the triggers of the revolvers which killed Rosenthal, but he has no evidence to show that any of the men under arrest had a part in the act of killing. He feels that the police have allowed the assassins—as distinct from the men who may have plotted the murder and paid the price for it—to slip through their fingers. Mr. Whitman gets indignant every time he dwells on this side of the matter in talks with his associates and his friends.

A country-wide search for the slayers of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, have become known to the police officials through a grilling third degree given several prisoners now in custody in connection with the case.

The band of gun men that were engaged in the killing after it had been carefully rehearsed in an uptown gambling house, are believed to have fled within a day or two, having become convinced that the "police system" will not be able to protect them.

Some of the east side "characters" whom the detectives are searching for are: "Lefty Louis,.. a gun man; "Whitey" Lewis, Harry Vallon, gamblers; "Sam" Schepps, a gangster, and "Itsky," another gangster.

SIXTY BURNED BY REBELS

Mexico City, July 23.—According to reports which have leaked out, a number of passengers in the second-class coach of the passenger train which was attacked by "Zapatistas" between here and Cuernava, on Saturday, were burned to death when the rebels set fire to the train. More than 60 people were killed and many were wounded in the assault, and it had been reported that the 30 passengers in the second-class coach were shot down, but it is now said that only nine were slain outright, and that the rest perished in the flames. A strict guard has been placed over all survivors since their arrival here.

The Zapatistas robbed the dead and living and the express car.

CANADA HAS MADE FORMAL OFFER TO AID BRITISH NAVY

Announcement Made by Winston Churchill -- Premier Asquith Thanks the Canadian Premier—Full Details of Offer Not to be Disclosed Until the Meeting of Dominion House.

London, July 23.—Right Hon. Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, introducing in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon the supplemnetary naval estimates, said that the direct cause of these additional estimates was the new German naval law, which he proceeded to examine in detail. Its main feature, he said, was the increase in the striking force of ships of all classes immediately available, and its general effect was the maintenance of four-fifths of the German navy in full permanent commission. This meant that it was constantly and instantly ready for war. Such preparation was remarkable and so far as he was aware found no example in the previous practice of modern naval powers. The German plans, he added, involved a remarkable expansion of strength and efficiency.

Mr. Churchill, discussing the general question of the growth of modern navies, said that cool study and methodical preparation prolonged over successive years could alone raise the margin of naval power. It was useless flinging money about on the impulse of the moment. The strain we should have to bear would be long and slow. No relief could be gained from impulsive and erratic action.

We should learn from our German neighbors the way in which policy marches unswervingly to its goal. We must have an ample margin of strength instantly ready. There must be ready and systematic development of our naval forces untiringly directed and pursued over a number of years.

"These supplementary estimates," said the speaker, "are, of course, only the first and smallest instalment of the extra expenditure which the new German law entails upon us. The number of ships we shall have to build in the next five years in order to maintain the sixty per cent. standard will have to be raised from the figure at which we had hoped it would stand, namely, from three next year and four, three, four and three in the succeeding years, to five next year and four in each succeeding year.

"The Germans," he added, "are spending about $5,000,000 a year on submarines, and we cannot allow our lead in submarines to be diminished. The estimates also include $800,000 for a fleet repair ship, attachable to the third battle squadron."

It was proposed to raise the number of battleships in full commission from twenty-eight to thirty-three, and there would also be a second fleet, consisting of eight vessels. We should have from the year 1914 and onwards five battleship squadrons, of which four squadrons would be in full commission. There would thus be thirty-three ships against Germany's twenty-nine. This might not, perhaps, be considered a very satisfactory proportion, but having regard for the character of the vessels, the arrangements proposed would, in the opinion of the Admiralty, be adequate to the needs of the years 1914 and 1915.

Mr. Churchill further declared that the maintenance of local supremacy in the Mediterranean, apart from the general supremacy, would mean a three power standard, plus an additional 60 per cent. preponderance over the strongest naval power. This would impose a burden unjustified by any vital fundamental need. The command of the Mediterranean cannot, he said, he treated, as something wholly separated from the general command of the sea. Any attempt to confine naval supremacy to any particular water was false strategy and bad politics.

The right way to maintain British interests in the Mediterranean was to employ the smallest number of modern ships, good enough for the work that would have to be done. Even without the Gibraltar battle squadron the Malta squadrons would be most formidable and unapproachable in speed by vessels of equal power, now building or projected on the Mediterranean.

Touching on the subject of Canada's share in the work of defence, Mr. Churchill said:

"We have had repeated conferences with Mr. Borden and his colleagues at the Admiralty, and they are now in possession of all the facts. We discussed with them with the utmost freedom and confidence what action should be taken to surmount the difficulties obstructing such action.

"Mr. Borden and his colleagues authorized me to say that they shared this view and that any special action which the immediate future may require of them will not be delayed. Pending the settlement of a permanent naval arrangement they wish that the aid of Canada shall be an addition to the existing British program, directly strengthening the naval forces of the Empire and affording a margin available for its security. They tell me that the action of the Dominion will not be unworthy of the dignity and power of Canada. More than that, I am not entitled to say. The decision of the Canadian Government will not be announced until the Ministers have returned to Canada. Meanwhile, I would suggest that the less the question is speculated upon the greater the public convenience will be."

Right Hon. Mr. Asquith, the Premier, in the course of his speech, said with regard to the visit of his Canadian colleagues:

"I believe that the co-operation which has already begun in council, will, before long, fruitify in action. I desire to tender on behalf of this Government our most grateful acknowledgement to Mr. Borden and his colleagues, not only for the spirit in which they have entered into these deliberations, but for the contribution they have already made to our knowledge of the matter."

"Side by side with their growing participation in the active burdens of the Empire on the part of the Dominions there rests with us undoubtedly the duty of making such response as we can to their obviously reasonable appeal to be heard in the determination of the Empire's policy and the direction of its affairs. Arrangements such as this are not to be made in a day. They must result in their very nature from deliberations and will probably have to be developed from time to time. But without committing ourselves to any particular form of arrangement, we share with the great Dominions the feeling which, as years have passed, has become more conscious and articulate, that we have a common heritage and common interest, and that in the enjoyment of that heritage and in the discharge of the duties which those interests involve, we are more and more conscious partners one with the other."

After mentioning the necessity of Mr. Borden first making an announcement in Canada, the Prime Minister proceeded to say:

"Whatever that announcement may be, I am perfectly certain that it will be adequate to the dignity and patriotic spirit of the Canadian people, and that we shall receive it here with the utmost gratitude as an acknowledgement that we are true co-partners in this great Empire; that its burdens and responsibilities will be shared between the Mother Country and the Dominions and that we cannot either in peace or war, isolate ourselves from one another."

JAPAN'S RULER IS GETTING BETTER

Tokio, July 23.—The extreme tension caused by the illness of Mutsuhito, the Emperor of Japan, has generally relaxed, but the attending physicians say that while there is reason to be encouraged, the public must wait a full week before assurances can be given respecting the outcome.

The improvement noted Sunday was maintained yesterday, and the bulletins issued by the court physicians, which are posted on the police boxes and railway stations throughout the empire, indicated that the maladies from which the emperor is suffering have been gotten under control, at least temporarily.

President Taft Advises Congress to Repeal the Reciprocity Treaty Which, Owing to Canada's Attitude He Regards as a Dead Issue—Tries to Hold Farmers' Vote.

Special to the Review.

New York, July 23.—A Washington despatch says that President Taft now favors the repeal of the Canadian Reciprocity Act. He has written the Senate Finance committee stating that in view of Canada's failure to accept the policy of closer trade relations the legislation now standing on the United States statute books might as well be repealed.

Many of the President's friends have advised him to this jettison policy on the ground that reciprocity is dead anyway and to keep it on the statute books is only nursing a forlorn hope and maintaining a scare crow against the farmer vote.

MARRIAGE CASE APPEAL IS NOW BEFORE PRIVY COUNCIL

Italian Is Murdered.

Montreal, July 23.—Salvatore Mercurioso, a young Italian, who arrived in this city two weeks ago from Vancouver, was shot and instantly killed at 6.30 yesterday evening by an unknown man, who as yet has not been apprehended.

The shooting occurred in the heart of the Italian district, on St. Genevieve street. There were many people on the street at the time and several men made as if to seize Mercuriso's slayer, but he threatened them with his revolver and disappeared in an alleyway. The two men were seen walking together just before the shots were fired, but did not appear to be quarreling.

Big Array of Legal Talent Assembles Before Privy Council to Argue Regarding Lancaster's Proposed Marriage Law — Mr. Wallace Nesbitt Presents Case — Other Lawyers Speak in Behalf of Various Phases.

London, July 23.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Privy Council chamber at Whitehall yesterday was the scene of the opening arguments, which will undoubtedly rank as historic in the annals of Canada. The famous marriage law case referred to the Privy Council came before the Lord Chancellor, Lord Loreburn, Lord Halsbury, Lord MacNaghton, Lord Atkinson, Lord Shaw and Chief Baron Pallas yesterday.

A notable array of counsel appeared in the case. For the Dominion, Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., Eugene Lafleur, K.C., and Geoffrey Lawrence, were present.

P. B. Mignault, K.C., and I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., have to deal with other questions, and R. C. Smith and Aime Geoffrion represent the Attorney-General of Quebec.

Mr. Nesbitt opened with a formal recital of the grounds of the appeal.

The first question was: Has the Parliament of Canada authority to enact in whole or part the recently proposed amendment to the marriage act. Mr. Nesbitt read one of the clauses:

"Every ceremony or form of marriage heretofore or hereafter performed by any person authorized to perform any ceremony of marriage by the laws of the place where it is performed and duly performed according to such laws, shall everywhere within Canada be deemed to be a valid marriage, notwithstanding any differences in the religious faith of the persons so married and within regard to the religion of the person performing the ceremony."

He also read the next section;

"The rights and duties, as married people of the respective persons, married as aforesaid, and of the children of such marriage, shall be absolute and complete, and no law or canonical decree or custom of or in any province of Canada shall have any force or effect to invalidate or qualify such marriage."

Mr. Nesbitt proceeded to read question two: Does the law of Quebec render null and void, unless contracted before a Roman Catholic priest, a marriage otherwise legally binding between (a) persons both Roman Catholic, (b) persons of whom one is Roman Catholic?

The third question was if A or B answered affirmatively, or both, has the Canadian Parliament authority to enact that existing hereafter contracted marriages are legal. Counsel said that the Supreme Court judges were of the opinion that proposed legislation was ultra vires.

"That all-important point," said Mr. Nesbitt, "is that legislation touching the actual contract of marriage as such is within the exclusive power of the Dominion Parliament."

His point was that once two persons agreed to live as man and wife there was a marriage state, who could say such a marriage would be recognized only if certain formalities were complied with?

Lord Halsbury intimated that he thought the word marriage depended upon the context in which it was used. A and B might agree to get married and so go through a form of marriage, and yet not after all be man and wife.

Lord Shaw did not agree that it was true a marriage could take place as in a private house, but there must be solemnization in some form.

Following Geoffrey Lawrence, who supported the previous argument, I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., replied to the argument which had so far been addressed to their lordships and mentioned that Mr. Mignault would deal with the further point of the status of Roman Catholics who were married by a minister other than a Roman Catholic priest.

Mr. Hellmuth was still speaking when the tribunal adjourned.

TORONTO DETECTIVES WILL ANSWER TO SERIOUS CHARGE

Inability to Account For the Disappearance of Papers In Farmers' Bank Enquiry, Especially the Celebrated $3,000 Check, Will Be Thoroughly Sifted—No Action Can Be Taken at the Present Time.

Toronto, July 23.—The investigation which is to be made into the conduct of the Toronto Detective Department, with regard to the Farmers' Bank case, is to be very thorough. The Attorney-General has take the matter up and the police commissioners have also decided to conduct an enquiry which, although it will not start for some time, will be very exhaustive.

Charges have been made that one of the material witnesses at the Farmers' Bank hearing had been threatened with a term in the penitentiary by a detective if he did not make his evidence suit.

The charges arise upon the handling of the papers in connection with the Farmers' Bank case. Several of these documents are missing. One in particular, the mysterious check for $3,000, cannot be accounted for.

Col. Denison made the following statement yesterday morning with regard to his action:

"I have arranged to secure all the papers and text of the evidence at the enquiry," he declared, "and I expect to have them in my hands by to-morrow at the latest. I shall go over them carefully and see just what was said before Sir William Meredith.

"There is not likely to be any action taken in the matter, however, for at least two months. Judge Winchester is on his vacation, and the mayor is still in England.

"I have nothing at present to guide me but the newspaper reports of the case, but assuming that these are true, it would seem that there is urgent need of a thorough enquiry.

"It looks to me as if there had been considerable laxity in the administration of the detective department, and as far as I am concerned, the whole thing will be sifted to the bottom. It is essential to the welfare and standing of our police force."

Sir William Meredith, royal commissioner, when asked about the charges, said:

"I do not know to whom the charges were made. They were not made to me, and I know absolutely nothing about the matter." Sir William returned from London, arriving in Toronto at 3.45.

Sir James Whitney was asked yesterday afternoon if the rumored allegations against the Toronto police department respecting the Farmers' Bank investigation had been received by the Government.

The Premier said:

"I understand that they have been laid before the Attorney-General, and are being enquired into."

Twelve Hurt In Accident.

The force of the collision turned the trolley car completely around and threw the engine from the tracks. Several of the passengers, who saw the engine bearing down upon the car, escaped by jumping.

"Bill's roight. That's me," said Tim. "I'll bet on annything at enny time. For example, I'll bet tin dollars wid anny man or wid ivra man that there ain't no man in this crowd that kin guess within a t'ousan' moiles av where I was born."

Inside of ten minutes there were ten bets up, and Bill held the money as stakeholder.

Seven men guessed Ireland. Two guessed England. One guessed Scotland. Then Murphy said:

"Bill, give the guys information an' thin gimme the money."

"I warned you not to bet," said Fogarty. "My friend Murphy was born in New York, but when he was only two years old his parents took him back to Ireland and reared him there." —Boston Post.

The Pannier Skirt.

The pannier skirt, according to the opinion of a fashionable dressmaker, will become popular despite the opposition on the part of the women who say that they cannot be won away from the tight fitting garment. "The efforts to bring back the crinoline," she said, "had to end in disorder because we are living in a time when space is too valuable for that style. Subway and bargain counter crushes, small apartments and crowds make the big skirt impossible. But it is time to get away from the other extreme, and the pannier is the thing. All this talk about 'opposition' to certain fashions on the part of some women is nonsense. They only think they are opposed to them, and they all come in line, and the most courageous fear to wear dresses that are not stylish."—New York Tribune.

THE WAR SCARE

The pastor of a German church in Montreal deplores the agitation that is kept up by the "yellow" papers of Canada concerning the impending struggle between England and Germany. It is all imagination, he says, and tends to foment hard feelings between the British and the German residents in Canada. He proposes to abandon his regular pastoral work and go through the country, as an apostle of peace and good-will.

The worthy pastor has made a blunder in the selection of his mission field. It is to Germany he should go in his newly adopted apostolic role for it is that country alone that is responsible for the agitation of which he complains. From the Emperor down, with the possible exception of the socialists, the war feeling is rampant. It is in Germany that the "yellow" press keep up a continued agitation against the British. No responsible journal, either in England or Canada, has ever favored a conflict with the Teutonic race. The attitude of the British is one of defence entirely, and the press has simply given circulation to the bellicose utterance of the Kaiser and his cohorts and to the sanguinary teachings of the German papers, which we are justified in believing have official sanction when they call on the nation to wreck the naval supremacy of England. German army officers have published books to preach the same doctrine of aggression.

The Montreal pastor's desire for peace is praiseworthy, his ambition to become a missionary in the interests of national harmony is a commendable one. But there is nothing like tackling the trouble at its source, like preaching in the field where such instruction is most required. If he desires to bring about amity between the races, Germany, and not Canada, should be made the field for his labor.

He can indulge with impunity in such discourse in Montreal. In his native land it would probably be regarded as "lese majesty," and the preacher be given an opportunity to prove his sincerity by suffering in some Teutonic prison for righteousness' sake.

DODGED THE ISSUE

The Examiner in its reply to an article in these columns dodged the issue by ignoring the question submitted by the Review concerning the authority of the Provincial Government to prohibit the exportation of pulpwood out of private lands. If such power was vested in the local legislature would it be wisdom on the part of the Government to exercise it and by so doing limit the market in which the settler of the north can dispose of the only article of value which he finds on his wild land? Why does the Examiner single out the case of pulpwood for prohibition in the matter of export when it has been preaching wider markets for the farmer ever since the Reciprocity bogey was brought out to wreck the party which our George street contemporary so ably and faithfully supports? If a so-called wider market is good for the wheat farmer, why is it not equally good for the man who harvests the timber on his little farm? To be consistent the Examiner should turn entirely right about face and advocate that the export of grain in its raw state be prohibited. Think of the mills that would spring up throughout the country, the thousands of men who would find employment in preparing the wheat for market by turning it into flour.

The Review has always stood for the protection of home industries and for the manufacture in Canada of all the machinery required. The Examiner in its article which originated this discussion gave voice to similar sentiments but could not find it in its heart to even suggest a measure of protection to foster such enterprises. Hence the allusion to a half-hearted conversion or repentance—which you will.

The Review has throughout its career never wavered in support of the policy to prohibit as far as possible the exportation of either pine or pulpwood logs in the rough. That was one of the planks in the platform of the Provincial Conservative party since the time when Sir Oliver Mowat was Premier of Ontario. But the latter would never listen to any such proposition and the timber wealth of the north continued to be rafted to the mills of Michigan there to make lucrative labor for an army of Americans.

When Sir Oliver Mowat left Toronto for Ottawa and A. S. Hardy became Premier of the province, the Liberal party found themselves facing an election and in desperate straits early in the year 1898. It was then Mr. Hardy and his followers played their last trump. Turning their backs squarely upon the road they had travelled for years, they adopted the policy of the Opposition and decided that all logs cut on Government lands be manufactured into lumber in Canada and by Canadian labor exclusively. They won the election, it is true, but by one of the slimest majorities that a government ever leaned upon and the election scandals disclosed in a number of constituencies, as revealed by judicial investigation was simply outrageous.

Seeing that they were forced into this policy by the Opposition and that a month or two before the election they stole the plank they had spurned for years, and that the theft was all that saved them from utter defeat, the real credit for the prohibition of the export of logs, a policy which ultimately resulted in the transfer of $20,000,000 worth of sawmill machinery from Michigan to Ontario, belongs not to the Liberal party but to the Conservatives with whom it originated and who supported it through good and evil report ever since the lumbermen of Michigan purchased the first timber limit from the Ontario Governmnet.

Surely the Examiner does not intend to hold up the subsequent Ross Government as a model, a government sustained to the last by every trick, every subterfuge and every suspicious deal that the politicians rendered desperate by the prospect of defeat could invent. And in spite of all it finally perished of senile decay. Better to veil that portion of the political history of the province seeing that a share of the responsibility for the party's disgraceful demise comes close to some of us.

Why not be fair even in the war of politics and give credit where it has been earned by faithful and honorable public service. No portion of the Liberal press, neither Mr. Rowell or any of his followers, speak of Sir James Whitney's new colonization scheme by which the settler in New Ontario is to be provided with a market for his pulpwood at his very door so that as he clears his farm he is assured an immediate return for his labor. And the best feature of the plan is that his interests are to be safe guarded by the government so that the purchaser cannot worst the farmer either in the matter of price or measurement. The profound silence of the Opposition is the best guarantee that the new policy is sound in every detail.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Col. Roosevelt has an editorial in the Outlook on the subject, "Men who live softly," but with characteristic modesty he does not include himself in the list.

"We are dying, slowly dying," wails Stratford. And yet the city wants to lie down quietly and suffer a soulless corporation to place its foot upon the municipal neck.

No wonder even the gamblers are fleeing from New York. A city in which the police commit murder instead of protecting human life, is certainly a dangerous place in which to live.

A New York paper says that the police department has been placed in a "dilemma" by the Rosenthal murder. This is drawing it mild, to say the least.

Every day dispatches are sent out saying that "the police are hot on the trail" of some criminal. The trouble is that while the officers may perspire by reason of unwonted exertion the trail itself remains cold.

After the Titanic disaster we had alleged messages from W. T. Stead. Now a Baltimore man, clothed and apparently in his right mind, gravely asserts that Capt. Smith did not perish, but that he met him in that city and had converse with him. We may now be prepared for a declaration from some other unexpected quarter that the entire catastrophe was only a dream.

Nervousness And Dyspepsia Cured By "Fruit-a-tives"

WALKERTON, ONT., MAY 9TH 1911

"My trouble was extreme Nervousness, brought on by Indigestion or Dyspepsia, from which I suffered in its worst form.

I asked Mr. Hunter, my druggist, about "Fruit-a-tives" and he advised me to try them.

I took several boxes and am pleased to say I am now enjoying fine health.

I honestly believe I owe my health to "Fruit-a-tives" and strongly advise anyone suffering from Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Nervousness or Sleeplessness, to commence using "Fruit-a-tives" and continue this remedy until a cure is accomplished".

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, July 22.—Business in Manitoba spring wheat over the cable from here continues very quiet, but there is a fair demand from foreign buyers for oats, for which bids were 3d to 4½d lower than Saturday and in consequence only a few odd loads were worked. There was some demand from local buyers for Manitoba feed wheat and sales of 25,000 bushels were made at 69c, c.i.f., and 50,000 bushels No. 2 Canadian western oats, at 48¼c, c.i.f., for shipment, from Fort William. Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, July 22.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ended July 20 were 1450 cattle, 1450 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 625 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale amounted to 600 cattle, 600 sheep and lambs, 1250 hogs and 250 calves.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle to-day except that the feeling was steadier than it has been of late, owing to the smaller offerings and the improved demand, owing to the cooler weather. Really choice steers were scarce. Demand on the whole was fairly good and an active trade was done. A few full loads of choice steers sold at $7.25, but the bulk of the trading was done in cattle at prices ranging from $5 to $6 per cwt. Common and inferior stock met with a slow sale.

Owing to the continued small supplies of hogs coming forward a much stronger feeling has developed in the market since last Wednesday and prices have scored a further advance of 25c to 30c per cwt. The demand from packers for supplies was keen as there is a scarcity of stock on spot and in consequence an active trade was done. Selected lots sold at $9 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

Small meats were about steady as the supply of such was not in excess of the requirements. The demand for lambs was good, but the trade in sheep and calves was only fair, as butchers in many cases had sufficient stock of the latter on hand for the present.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.25 to $7.50; medium, $5 to $6; common, $3.50 to $4; choice cows, $5.50 to $5.75; bulls, $3 to $4.25; milkers, choice, each, $75 to $80; common and medium, each, $50 to $70; springers, $40 to $50.

Sheep—Ewes, $3.50 to $3.75; bucks and culls, $3 to $3.25; lambs, $6 to $7.

Hogs, f.o.b., $9.

Calves, $3 to $8.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, July 22.—Cattle—Receipts, 11,000; market slow, steady, to 10c up. Beeves, $6.90 to $9.50; Texas steers, $4.80 to $7; western steers, $5.80 to $7.80; stockers and feeders, $3.90 to $6.50; cows and heifers, $2.60 to $7.65; calves, $5.50 to $9.65.

Hogs—Receipts, 44,000; market active, 5c to 10c lower; light, $7.85 to $7.55; mixed, $7.30 to $7.85; heavy, $7.10 to $7.85; rough, $7.10 to $7.30; pigs, $5.90 to $7.50; bulk of sales, $7.50 to $7.80.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 27,000; market steady to 15c lower; native, $3.20 to 5.25; western, $3.40 to $5; yearlings, $4.15 to $5.50; lambs, native, $4.25 to $7.50; western, $4.25 to $7.50.

Steamers from Liverpool to New York saw icebergs 1,000 feet long near the spot, where the Titanic sank.

"Your belt is gone!" cried Solano.

"Yes. That's the best part of it," gurgled Brockett. "Half an hour before the game, not wishing to be too heavily weighted, I took my money, my packets of letters—everything of any value or any weight—and placed them in the safe at headquarters. The captain of Company F fixed it all up for me. That took two or three pounds and a lot of bulk off my waist, and gave me a chance to work more freely. Whoever lassoed me wanted that belt. They jerked me in among these bushes, flung me on my face, and went through me in less than five seconds' time. And they got the belt, they got the belt, and ran away with it!" Brockett again collapsed with laughter.

"Didn't you see them at all, my boy?" questioned the chaplain.

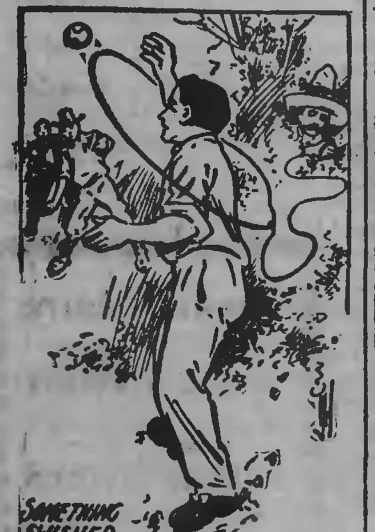
"No, sir," Brockett replied. "They jerked me in here so fast I had no chance to turn, and then laid me face downward, so that I couldn't see them. They didn't even speak, but robbed me and were gone before I could even roll over and look after them. It was finely done—just the way the wild west melodramas used to have the Mexican villain lasso the heroic cowboy."

"Didn't they get anything besides the belt?" asked Solano.

"Yes, they did." And again Brockett was convulsed. "They got a nice set of nonsensical messages and faked ciphers that I put in four hours constructing on the train. I hope they get rich with their plunder."

An old trooper, a veteran of the plains, had pushed a short distance into the chaparral while this conversation was going on.

"There was three of 'em, sir," he reported to the captain of Company C. "Two was Mexicans, one a cheap fellow that didn't amount to much, and the other a vaquero, with new, high-heeled shoes, and a new black velveteen jacket. His arm caught on some thorns, sir, and here's a bit of the goods. The third one was a little man—at least, his feet were very small—and he wore regular city shoes. That's all the trail tells, sir. I suppose they had horses the other side of this brush, and are a long ways from here by now."



SOMETHING SWISHED THROUGH THE AIR AND SETTLED ROUND HIS SHOULDERS.

Six troopers rode out, beating the chaparral, but with little hope of overtaking the lasso-throwers. The triumphant common citizens and the defeated cavalry returned to camp, exchanging much persiflage, and mapping out the preliminaries for the third game of the series. Brockett and Solano, assigned to a comfortable tent, started a debate as to the identity of their latest adversary.

"The fact that he was a small man, leaving a small track," said Solano, "seems to indicate that our Japanese friend swam out of the North river. Doesn't it look that way?"

"It surely does," assented Brockett. "Still, the German baron may have a few small men as his confederates. That would be possible, wouldn't it?"

"The baron is still locked up at Little Rock," objected Solano. "He would have considerable difficulty in directing any operations from the cell where we last saw him. I can't see anyone in this but the gentle Jap. Can you?"

"It appears to be some of his playful doings," said Brockett. "He has kept himself well under cover, though. The officers—who keep their eyes and ears open—all tell me that no Japanese gentlemen have been seen in this vicinity."

Solano smiled, significantly. "That may be—but did it ever occur to you that the average Chinaman looks very much like the average Japanese? And there are quite a few Chinamen along the river, so I'm told."

The boys looked out of the tent and gazed upon the dreary panorama of brush, rock, sand and turbid river. Then, smitten with the pangs of excellent appetites and remembering an invitation to the eating-place of the war correspondents, they stepped over the threshold. A Mexican—poorly clad, miserable of appearance, intercepted them.

"I beg pardon, senores."

"Tell it in Spanish, if you can't in English," said Solano, amiably. The Mexican at once started a brief, but energetic oration in the Castilian tongue, and wound it up by pressing a soiled piece of cardboard into Solano's hand.

"He says," interpreted Solano, "that he was a poor peon, very much in debt; that he had saved a little money, and took a gambling chance today by staking it on the ball game. Says he got five to one for his money. He says that the catch you made saved him; that he can now not only pay off his debt, but that he will be quite a rich man, for Mexico. Just to express his gratitude he also says that his brother, Juan Torrejon, is a very noted bad man on the Mexican side of the river, and that if we should ever encounter Mr. Torrejon the card he has just handed me will recommend us quite highly to his good graces. Very civilized of the gentleman, isn't it?"

"You can never tell. That card may be more than useful yet. Let's hurry along to supper."

CHAPTER XXVI.

Colonel Lewis, under whose command both the Fourth and Sixth cavalry were temporarily guarding the border, was a soldier of the old school, white of mustache and hair, erect and stately despite his sixty years and more, and possessed of but one great grievance in life—that wars did not happen often enough to really keep him busy. As a boy he had blown a bugle when the very regiments he now commanded swept into the fight at the battles of the Shenandoah Valley. The war over, he had been sent to West Point to put the finishing polish upon an education acquired in actual campaigning. Graduating in 1869, he had fought Sioux, Cheyennes, Comanches and Apaches; he battled in twenty states, and received five wounds in action. In 1898 he served conspicuously at San Juan Hill; then, transferred to the Philippines, he won honors and promotions in Luzon and Samar. The old gentleman was now commanding two whole regiments and two batteries of light artillery—the largest force ever assembled under his personal direction. Counting in the stormy days of his bugling boyhood, Colonel Lewis must have taken part in 200 fights, and yet he was unsatisfied.

"Confound it all," he growled to his young aides, "there was a Roman once—I forget his name, but I read about him at the Point—who took part in one thousand battles, and personally killed one thousand barbarians. That fellow had some enjoyment out of his life. In his time, there was fighting to be done, real fighting, coming to you all the time, and you didn't have to sit around doing nothing or watching a yellow old river for fear somebody might declare himself in on some graft that the other fellow had barely overlooked. Those were the happy days, young men, those were the happy days!"

The colonel, having just returned from San Antonio to the cavalry camp below El Paso, was in a grumpy mood, somewhat augmented by memories of the times when he had fought three battles with the Lipan Indians not fifty miles from his present location.

"There's one thing," be grumbled, "that I deeply regret about those fights with the Lipans. I killed too many of 'em, and scared the rest away. If I had gone a little slow about it, and not played hog, they might have lasted till the present time, and I might go right out this morning and chase them over the river. Well, Conroy, what do you want?"

The old trooper saluted. "Couple of young fellows to see you, colonel. They've been here two days waiting for you, sir. Blamed good ball players, too, both of 'em."

"What the blazes do I care about their ball playing? Tell 'em to come in, and show their excuse for living!"

Brockett and Solano, two handsome athletic youngsters, somewhat frayed as to dress, saluted the old warhorse with becoming gravity. Brockett drew from his clothing a flat package, and handed it to the colonel, who received it with a quizzical smile.

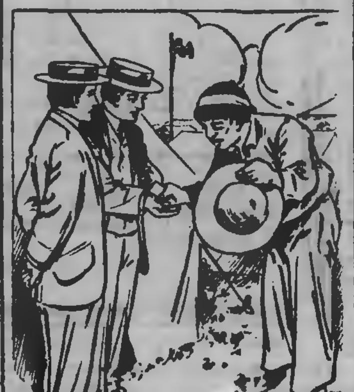
"Never mind any explanations," said the old soldier. "I have been given a little advance explanation concerning you. You are the secret service messengers who were to bring me certain orders and instructions in a cipher that no foreign spy could translate without the aid of a chisel. If you got through and brought me the papers safely, I was to learn the confounded cipher, and adopt it for future correspondence. If you didn't get through I was to report the fact with deep regrets. Correct, isn't it?"

"Yes, colonel."

"Have much trouble getting here?"

"A trifle, colonel."

The old fellow chuckled. "A trifle, eh? I'll bet it was more than a trifle. Good game boys, both of you. This package contains orders that may mean a lot to our general foreign policy, and at least two governments that I could mention would give a good deal to get the key. Tell me about your trip, and what they tried to do to you."



HE PRESSED A SOILED PIECE OF CARDBOARD INTO SOLANO'S HAND.

The boys, thus encouraged, told the veteran the full details of their journeys, while the old man alternately laughed and stormed. When the recital was finished, Colonel Lewis shook hands with them heartily, and the youngsters knew that the grim old hero was their friend for life.

"I'll have to devote my attention to this cipher code of yours for the next two hours," said the colonel. "You boys will mess with me today, I hope?"

"We must be on our way as quickly as possible," Brockett negatived. "There is still some margin in our time-limit, but we would like to round up everything as rapidly as possible. After delivering these papers to you, our orders take us to Rancho Nogal, on the other side of the Rio Grande."

"Rancho Nogal, eh?" And the colonel's eyebrows were raised in surprise and interrogation. "Message to Gomez Esteral, I suppose?"

"Yes, colonel."

"You know who Gomez Esteral may be, of course?"

"No, sir. We didn't find out anything about him. All we know is that we are to deliver him a message, and that was all we cared to know."

The colonel beamed with appreciation.

"You boys will make good soldiers yet. The first essential of a good soldier is to obey orders without asking questions, and that, I see, you have already learned to do. Under the circumstances I think I will give you a little information concerning Gomez Esteral—it may help you to realize the importance of your final mission."

The boys sat down and hitched their chairs near to the colonel, who spoke in a low, impressive tone, while his young hearers fairly gasped at the revelations that were now unfolded to their attentive ears.

A Son of the Samurai

A Lesson From the East to the West

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Mr. Briscoe, though he would only have a Japanese servant, was not always good tempered. Something was wrong with his dinner, and it irritated him. Picking up a plate, he threw it at his cook.

Tado Hashojuri dodged Briscoe's carefully aimed plate, and the china crashed against the opposite wall, and the fragments tinkled to the floor.

"Mr. Briscoe is not satisfied with the dinner I have so carefully prepared," remarked the Japanese as he brought another plate and set it down before his master.

Ned Briscoe glared in astonishment at the oriental who had taken his reproof so calmly, or was it contempt in the oblique black eyes bent upon him?

Briscoe knew he had not acted like a gentleman, and it made him angry because he knew the reason why—the wine he had drunk exerted its usual quarrelsome effect upon him. If he was with friends when he took liquor in any form he was minus one friend when the next day dawned. When he dined alone it was the waiter, and when at home in his own apartment it was Tado, his cook, valet and general factotum, who bore the brunt.

"Huh," muttered Ned sulkily as Tado brought in a delicious salad. It was made of nuts and white grapes and was Briscoe's especial favorite. He trifled with it and refused anything more except a cup of black coffee. This he quaffed in two gulps and left the room.

He would have been angry if any one had told him it made him feel ashamed to see the imperturbable countenance of his cook staring at him.

"It's awful to be a cad and not be able to help it," groaned Ned as he threw himself on the couch in his den. "I wonder what's the matter with me anyway?" Somehow the answer rang in his ears almost as if some one had heard his query and replied to it.

"Too much money, too little energy and perseverance, too lazy, too fond of pleasure, no sense of obligation to his fellow men or his country." Ned Briscoe knew it all and despised himself for it.

"What's the use of having money if I can't get some fun out of it?" he grumbled weakly, and that was always the way his conscience was driven into the background.

In the kitchen Tado Hashojuri was frowning over the fragments of the shattered plate. It had been a long time since Mr. Briscoe had thrown the companion plate at his cook, valet, etc., and the memory of the first insult had grown dim. Now it was revived as the sensitive Japanese gazed upon the porcelain.

"Wait, wait, wait! Some day I must teach this scalawag how gentlemen should be treat even in kitchens when much drink is full of wine," muttered Tado, with sudden incoherent rage bubbling over. He flung the fragments of the plate at his gas range, and there was another tinkling crash. He smiled with satisfaction. It had relieved his tension. Now he understood why Mr. Briscoe threw plates at him, but it did not remove the sting of indignation.

One day three months later Tado Hashojnri received a letter from his home in Japan, and straightway he packed his cheap American trunk, cleaned Briscoe's apartment from end to end, served a delicious dinner and at its close laid the key to the refrigerator at his master's elbow.

"I leave with much dissatisfaction all around," bobbed Tado solemnly.

"Huh?" demanded Brisco, who was drinking nothing but water now.

"I go tonight after dishes are washed. I am needed at home," patiently explained Tado.

"Oh, well; why didn't you give me notice?" demanded Briscoe indignantly, and as the Japanese made no reply he continued, "I don't see that I am compelled to pay you wages when you are leaving me without notice."

Tado's eyes narrowed, but he only shrugged his narrow shoulders and turned away.

"Here!" thundered Briscoe, and tossed a yellow back upon the table.

"Thanks," returned Tado laconically.

"Where do you live?" asked Briscoe, not as if he cared a hang whether his erstwhile servant lived or died.

"Tokyo, sir, Mr. Briscoe."

"I may be in Japan myself next winter. If you will give me your address, Tado, I'll look you up if I need a valet," remarked Briscoe patronizingly.

"Mr. Briscoe is most too kind," murmured Tado, with a smile in his eyes. He took from his pocket a neat white card inscribed with a few characters in Japanese.

"Most anybody can direct the honorable foreigner," he hinted and so faded from the room, only to appear at intervals during the meal, and when morning dawned he appeared not at all, and Briscoe ate at his club.

The idea of a trip to Japan appealed to Briscoe's jaded sense of enjoyment. He had never visited the orient, and it was only a few months after his valet's departure that Ned Briscoe found himself crossing the Pacific to Nippon's fairy islands.

He had been in Tokyo three weeks and had quite exhausted all the gayeties in the foreign quarter before he thought of Tado Hashojuri. Then it happened that he came across the neat card among the folds of his wallet.

"I've missed the services of a man," mused Briscoe, turning the paper over in his hands. "Suppose I look him up. Very likely he will be glad of a job with me. No one could shave me like Tado."

After a leisurely breakfast Briscoe called a ricksha man and gave him Tado's card.

"Take me to that place," he said, getting into the vehicle.

The man stared at the easy going American, and an added respect came into his voice and manner as he lifted the shafts and started down the long street that lifted into a hill in the distance.

It was an hour's ride at a swift trot, and the man between the shafts seemed tireless. Ned Briscoe felt rather bored at first, but presently the beauty of the suburban landscape and the manifestations of tireless industry as exhibited by the tiny farms scattered everywhere and yielding produce from every inch of soil set him to thinking.

He could see that each of the peasants bent above his daily toil was doing some share in the work of the universe. Soldiers' drilling barracks showed him where one might serve his country. All about him were tense, purposeful faces. He thought of the bored reflection that had met his own face in the mirror that morning.

Now they were passing beautiful country estates, and over high hedges he caught glimpses of gardens laid out in miniature reproductions of nature's wildest fancies.

Now the thought of Tado occurred to him.

"By Jove, he must be working out in one of these places!" he thought uneasily.

Nevertheless he said nothing, and when his ricksha finally turned into a gateway flanked by great stone lanterns he would not have been surprised if he had been whisked around to the kitchen entrance.

Instead of that, the vehicle drew up under the formal portico of a handsome dwelling, and an obsequious maidservant pushed back the paper door and invited him to enter the reception room.

Briscoe removed his shoes and thrust his feet into the straw slippers waiting in the veranda and followed the servant into the reception room. Here he waited while his card was carried to his late cook. He had hesitated about this ceremony. He had asked for Tado Hashojuri, and the maid had nodded and smiled and disappeared.

Presently she appeared and beckoned him to an inner guest room. Here the light was dimmer, but there was little Tado Hashojuri standing attired in rich robes with a queer smile on his lips and an added dignity in his manner. He was talking to the American minister, whom Briscoe knew very well.

"Ah, my old friend, Mr. Briscoe," murmured Tado in his halting English and with a flash of white teeth at the newcomer. "Welcome to Nippon!"

"Thank you—much obliged, I'm sure," stammered Briscoe, quite taken aback by the evident prosperity of his late servant.

"If I may have one word with the baron—you will excuse us, Mr. Briscoe?" asked the American minister, and as Tado accompanied the diplomat to the door Ned Briscoe had time to do a little more thinking before his host returned.

"Well, Baron Tado," said Ned when Hashojuri returned to the room, "it seems I've been putting my foot in it all along. Please explain."

Tado did. He said he had gone to America to study the country and its people. Suddenly his father had died, and he had to return to Japan as the head of his house.

"I was much anger," he said politely, "at some plate episodes in our experience, and I think maybe when you come to Nippon I might revenge my honor, for I am the son of a samurai, Mr. Briscoe, and pass not insults! But when I returned to my own country what I left behind, insults and all, seemed small and mean beside the great questions of war and one's country and life and death. So I forget—and am your very good friend!" He held out his hand, and Briscoe was glad to clasp it.

Strange to relate, it was through the man who had one time been his valet and cook that Ned Briscoe reached a realization that he, too, had a country to serve in some capacity and that his wealth had been given him to use widely. In the case of Ned Briscoe it was an occasion when the east taught another lesson to the west.

MERRY MOONLIGHTERS ENJOY OUTING ON THE OTONABEE

Knox Church Young People Held Most Enjoyable Evening Trip – Loads of Fun for All.

To the tune of about 300 "cruisers" did the steamer Stoney Lake cast off last night for a sail down the river in the pale moonlight. The society which chartered the ship was the Young People of Knox Church (old folks were young once more), and a right merry bunch they made.

The course was set down stream for about an hour and a half, and the searchlight and moon threw the vicinity into a haunting prominence, making the cruise most delightful.

Added to the evening's pleasure was the "sound of the pibroch" by Mr. Yeaman, and to the skirl did his son, Master Gordon, dance the old-time movements so dear to those especially who are "faur across the sea." One could almost hear the heartbeats of the "chiels and lassies" from "ayont the Tweed" as the pipes skirled and the dancer danced. 'Twas an inspiring sight.

Another interesting and entertaining group was Mr. J. A. Smith's Orchestra, which body discoursed lively airs during the evening.

The credit for this most enjoyable outing is due Mr. G. H. Williamson and a willing body of assistants—chiefly of the fair sex—and no doubt they are well pleased with the results.

The party arrived home at 11.30, with the happy thought of an evening well spent.

VALIANT WORK OF BUCKET BRIGADE

Employes of J. J. Turner & Sons Fought Flames Until Arrival of Fire Brigade.

Only the valiant work of the employes of the J. J. Turner and Son's factory yesterday afternoon prevented a serious blaze, when fire broke out from spontaneous combustion among the tow in the store room the employes rapidly organized a bucket brigade and fought the flames vigorously, and with great success, until the quick arrival of the fire brigade. The damage will amount to $250.00, the stock suffering worst to the extent of about $200.00.

Picturesque Neckwear.

This new collar is very picturesque It reaches to the base of the hair at the back and opens in a deep V in front. A frill of plaited lace falls away from the front opening, which effect softens the rather severe line of the collar.

THE ROBESPIERRE COLLAR.

Washing Woolen Scarfs.

It is an easy matter to cleanse at home white woolen scarfs and shawls.

Prepare soapsuds by boiling pure white soap in rainwater. Soak the article first in warm, clear water. Dip it in the soapsuds and gently knead with the hands until it appears clean.

Press between the hands without wringing. Wash through fresh soapsuds and place in cold water.

Rinse through several waters and dry it between cloths.

Never hang woolen articles upon the line. To stretch the full length upon a towel and cover with another absorbs the water without stretching the article out of shape.

SARTORIAL HINT.

How to Successfully Use a Lace Shawl.

PARISIAN GOWN WITH SHAWL DRAPERY.

It is always a pity to cut into a rare old lace shawl, and this costume, designed by a great French couturier, suggests a way to use a handsome shawl without cutting. The lace is draped at the back to suggest a hood and deep watteau plait, and at the front it opens over a gown of white chiffon and lace.

KNITTING CURE FOR NERVES.

Berlin Doctor Prescribes Practice In Bed to Benefit Women.

Knitting in bed as an effective antidote for nervousness is the latest remedy prescribed for women by Berlin's great specialists. Among the distinguished patients who at present are undergoing this novel cure is Mrs. Leishman, wife of the American ambassador. All accounts agree that the preoccupation and concentration required for needlework, when performed in a sitting posture between pillows and coverlets, are working wonders in women afflicted with nerves. They find it vastly more agreeable and efficacious than the ordinary and sometimes tedious rest cure, and it is producing results found unattainable from the old time nerve panaceas.

"Our grandmothers," said a distinguished Berlin woman specialist, commenting on the knitting cure, "were not nervous as a rule. They were placid souls, who were not easily ruffled, and were passionate knitters. What is more natural than that we should resort, for nervous women of today, to the favorite pastime of our maternal ancestors? I have at present a dozen Berlin society ladies who are spending from four to six hours a day abed knitting. If possible I require them to be alone and set themselves a task of accomplishing a fixed amount of work each day.

"Their progress is marked and apparently permanent. They are learning to become fond of knitting and tell me it is the best anti-nervousness cure they have ever tried. It remains to be seen, of course, whether the present effects, which are undoubted, will last."

Summer Hand Bags.

In the region of hang bags pique is being made up for white summer wear. Many bags are now of crochet, and this looks charming with a linen frock, but one can not as a rule say much, for the sack of colored crochet, a thing that contrives to look vulgar even when it happens to be in complete harmony with the tub frock with which it is carried. Macrame is successfully worn with linen or tussore.

Bags are at the moment in a transition stage, or perhaps they have fallen into line with the fashion in regard to other accessories of wearing whatever individual whim dictates. Anyhow, some of them are enormous sacks trailing from long cords and hung with deep fringes, while others are quite neat and small, so small, indeed, that they are merely overgrown purses and can serve no vanity purposes at all.

The "Bunty" Bonnet.

Children's millinery is really bewitching. For everyday wear there are some "bunty" shapes, with rather high crowns of coarse straw, the crown carrying the regulation band of ribbon or black ribbon velvet and numbers of close fitting basin styles in drawn taffeta or pliable pedal, some being completely round and others showing an inclination to stand out a scintillation at either side.

Especially pleasing is a pliable straw with a narrow brim and high, squarish crown—in fact, a vertical Paddy shape. Worn at a saucy angle and by the right child, with laughing, piquant face, this Paddy is an assured success Nor is the sugar loaf crown at all conspicuous by its absence, allied for the most part to a pliable brim that can be rolled or caught up at any angle most becoming to the small wearer.

This Is Good.

Mildewed spots moistened with clean water and then coated thickly with pure white soap and powdered chalk can be banished. Let the coating remain at least an hour, then wash off. Sometimes a second application is necessary.

Just Remember.

That a few drops of oil of lavender will sweeten the air in a room and a little sprinkled in the bookcase before it is shut up for the summer will keep the books from molding.

The Evil Eye.

Belief in the evil eye exists in all lands, but especially in Italy. It existed in ancient Egypt. The "eye" is seen on the prows of Spanish and Italian ships and on Mexican bucklers. It is seen on amulets taken from the ashes of Herculaneum and Pompeii. In some places it is surrounded by elephants, serpents and scorpions, animals that were supposed to hold a talismanic power against it. Many celebrities of history—Napoleon among others—believed in the evil eye and feared it. Among the masses of the eastern and European nations the belief is almost universal.

CLEANLINESS IN HANDLING MILK

The following is a synopsis of an address given to the milk vendors of Port Hope, by Dr. G. A. Dickinson:

Much has been said and written about butter fat and total solids and rich milk. This is all very good, but there is a much more important matter, a matter that cannot be discussed too much. As upon it more than upon any other factor, the health, yes, the very life of a great number of our delicate children depend, especially during the hot summer months. This is the subject of pure milk. So I have prepared a few notes on clean milk.

Just as we differ in our tastes in regard to many matters, so no doubt we may differ on the matter of cleanliness. What one nation or people may consider clean and wholesome, another nation may detest. So with individuals, what suits one person cannot be tolerated by another. Indeed cleanliness is in a very great measure, a matter of habit and education. And with the increase of our knowledge of bacteria we have had to change our ideas of cleanliness very much.

Milk contains all the elements to nutrition and is often said to be, and probably is, the most perfect form of raw food that we possess. And when suckled from the teat by the offspring as doubtless it was intended to be in nature's scheme for the nourishment of the young, it is a most valuable food. But when milk is drawn from a cow's udder into a vessel it very frequently is exposed to contamination. The air, the pail, the cow's udder and flanks, the floor, the stall, the ceiling and walls of the stable, the milker's hands and clothing may each be a source of filth. The amount of dirt that may fall into the milk pail during milking depend on the condition of the stable, the cow and the milker.

Milk in its purity is the best, and only food given to many infants. It is also a most excellent food for many kinds of bacteria. And when contaminated milk is a most fertile medium for the transmission of such diseases as summer diarrhoea, diphtheria, scarlet fever, cholera, foot-and-mouth disease and pleuro-pneumonia. And as cows may suffer from tubberculosis, scarlet fever, diphtheria and typhoid fever (from drinking sewage-polluted water) these diseases may be transmitted by the milk to human beings. Every particle of dirt which falls into the milk carries with it millions of bacteria, some of which may be very virulent. Most of these bacteria multiply very fast and the majority of the changes which take place in can be traced to the effects of bacteria.

When we think over the matter, can we not with much truth say that the cow stable is the kitchen in which the milkers produce the food that nourishes thousands of babies in the land? Filth and bacteria go together. Dirt in milk means also millions of bacteria. Now it is quite possible by careful and thorough straining to take out any pieces of dirt that are visible to the naked eye, but by no process of straining or clarifying can you remove the bacteria. So the proper and only thing to do is to keep them out; keep the milk clean. It is useless to try to remove the bacteria by straining.

The main sources of dirt are the udders and flanks of the cow. The cleaner the stable, the bedding, the gutters, the cow, and the milker's hands and clothing, the less amount of filth that will fall into the milk during milking.

The milker that allows mud and manure to drop into the milk pail, is—it may be unknowingly—sowing the seeds of destruction and contamination which sooner or later may be unfortunate enough to be fed from milk produced under such conditions.

It has been shown that the average weight of dirt which falls from unwashed dirty udders during milking is ninety times as great as that which falls from the same udders after washing. And when udders are slightly soiled it is thirty-two times as great.

By simply wiping the udders and flanks of the cow with a damp cloth just before milking, in a very efficient method of reducing the number of bacteria which falls into the pail.

The tidy housewife wears a clean apron. she is particular to have her hair neatly arranged and her hands scrupulously clean when she bakes the pies and cakes and rolls the butter. It would be a shocking thing if a long hair should find its way into the butter or a fly should be baked in a pie. If the same care were taken in the stable—the kitchen where baby's food is produced—as is taken in the kitchen where the bread is baked and the meat is fried; where everything is spotless, clean and fresh, there would be no complaint of sediment being found in the bottom of the milk pitcher, but the stable is seldom as clean as this. It is often dusty, the floors and gutters may be very dirty, the ceiling covered with cobwebs and dust, and the stable boy may do the milking. And perhaps he wears the same suit of clothing that has done duty for almost every other work on the farm. Such clothing may contain dirt from the hog pen, the chicken coop or the sheep shed. He may have been cleaning the horses or removing the manure from the cow stable and maybe without washing his hands he sits down by the side of the cow and milks. Safe and wholesome milk cannot be produced under such conditions.

Milk pails should have as small a top as possible and preferably the best pails are made of tin with smooth seams and joints so that particles of dirt cannot lodge in them. A rough porous material, such as wood or galvanized metal is not suitable for milk vessels.

BITING A BIVALVE.

Andrew Lang Says It Doesn't Hurt a Live Oyster a Bit.

The statement that oysters "suffer agonies" when they are ripped from their shells, tortured with vinegar, pepper and other condiments and then eaten, which President Craft of the Alabama state oyster commission is said to have made, is vigorously attacked by Andrew Lang, the famous English naturalist.

"The bivalve," he says, "is a creature of low sensibility. It does not even pretend to the head development of a limpet or a snail. It lies buried in its mud bank. Active oyster life is represented by currents of water which are swept in and out of its shell. All the rest is purely automatic action. Its nervous system is of low order. A series of three nerve centers or so, scattered through the body, represents its sensitive apparatus. It has no head, no brain mass. It is as nearly as possible a mere molluscan machine which lives and no more.

"This being so, where does any question of pain intervene? To have pain you must have the consciousness of it to begin with, and a sensory apparatus which feeds the consciousness with intelligence of what is happening to the body at large. You have no more evidence or warrant for presuming the existence of consciousness in the oyster than you have in the case of a jellyfish."—New York World.

The Danger From Flies.

Notwithstanding all that has been said and written, many people continue to ignore the constant danger from flies as carriers of infection. Everywhere food is exposed to the visits of these distributers of disease. A series of reports on this subject has recently been published in England, in which it is shown that infections may remain active upon flies which have been exposed to them—and their habits thus expose them continually—for from four to ten days. An idea of the distance to which infection may be dispersed by flies is given by recent investigations at Postwick, near Norwich, where it was found that marked flies traveled nearly a mile from the notorious refuse heap that served as their breeding ground.

The fire loss at the recent conflagration at Vancouver may reach $2,000,000.

CRAVATH WINS

A SERIES OF TEN STORIES
BY JOHN T. McINTYRE

I.—The Adventure of the Pelican Club

THE first time I ever saw Cravath was at Halsey's—you know the kind of place—full of palms, Hungarian fiddlers, spotless napery and superior waiters. And, as is usual with such places, it was the gathering ground, after certain hours, for blooded youth and ladies fair. At least that's what they called themselves; but I've heard them called other things, with quite a bit of emphasis.

When Cravath came in, his shoulders filled the doorway; a good looking chap, too, with a clear, humorous eye, and a skin as healthy as a baby's. The place was pretty well filled, and as I was alone at my table, he selected a chair and sat down.

"A man," said he, "might travel the streets up and down the whole night through, and yet never get so much as a sight of $1000."

The saying had a strange sound and I examined him carefully. But he seemed entirely rational, so I answered:

"It may be that your vision is defective."

He seemed pleased at this.

"I note," said he, "that you have the gift of repartee, which is a thing entrusted only to the elect. Will you take a drink of something with me?"

"I will take a number of them—with you," said I. "Or with any one else, as a matter of fact."

He called the waiter, and after we had spoken our hearts to him, Cravath gave his attention to me once more.

"Something," said he, "is out of tune with you."

"You are not without perception," I replied. "I came here tonight hating the race, and with the intention of matching my capacity against Halsey's vinous and spirituous stock."

He looked me over with a valuing air.

"I would never have thought it," said he. "You don't in the least look like a quitter."

This stirred me a trifle, and I said, rather sharply:

"Do that again."

"I remarked," said Cravath, as pleasantly as you please, "that you don't look like a quitter. And the saying was apropos of the fact that my experience has shown me that only the quitter shows the tankish tendency."

Here the waiter arrived with our glasses.

"George," spoke Cravath, as he settled with him, "have you any inkling as to where a perfectly respectable person may come by $1000?"

"Sir," replied George, distantly. "I never joke during business hours."

And upon his frigid departure, I made an effort to set myself right.

"The rule may be as you say," said I. "An insatiable thirst may be the sign of a yellow streak. But, like other rules, it has its limitations. What would you do if your dearest hope was shattered? How would you temper your manner if your most cherished project suddenly blew? What countenance would you assume if some one stepped upon your fondest aspiration?"

He sipped at his drink and wore the air of one who knew.

"I am unacquainted with both yourself and your sorrow," said he. "But, in spite of my ignorance upon these points, I will say—"

Here he arrested the progress of a knowing-looking young man by the simple process of hooking him by the arm with his stick.

"Pardon me," said he, "but perhaps you can tell an earnest seeker where he can sight $1000."

"I can't," replied the knowing-looking young man, without hesitation. "But should you ever spot a place where such things are to be had, old chap, I'd take it as very friendly if you'd pass me the word."

So saying, he unhooked himself, and went his way; then Cravath turned to me.

"As I just said," resumed he, "I am absolutely ignorant as to the nature of your woe; but I make bold to say that whatever it may be, I can match you pang for pang."

I made no reply to this; the statement was too absurd to deserve one. He took another sip at his glass and then looking at me over the top of it, inquired:

"Have you ever been in love?"

"Within certain limits—yes; but never with abandon. Being a man who makes a business of taking chances, I have slipped that particular condition because in it one has no chance."

"Be that as it may," said Cravath, "I am in love. Frantically, perhaps—desperately, maybe—but with rejoicing certainty."

"The willing victim is always more or less of a shocking spectacle," said I. "But, if you have the mind, go on."

"Your attitude," said he, with concern, "is that usually assumed by youth. I am appalled to find it in one whose years have reached the number commonly described as ripe. However, we will not discuss that. That I am in love is a fact; and that I am pleased with my condition is another one."

"The lady—" I began.

"Is also pleased," said he. "We are both highly tickled, so to speak. And yet, happiness is not ours."

"Ah!" said I.

"I have often wondered," said he, "what we would do without such exclamations as that. They express a great deal and their application is boundless."

"Something has obtruded itself between you and the lady," stated I.

He nodded moodily.

"A pistol," said he.

I took the situation under advisement for a moment.

"The excuse is sufficient," I told him, finally. "A pistol has an awkward and ugly way of swinging into action, providing there is sufficient causation behind it."

"There is enough stuff behind this one to keep me busy for some time to come," said he. "You see—" Here he paused and leaned across the table. "Does it not occur to you that the head waiter is more than usually intelligent looking?"

"I had not given the matter any thought," returned I.

"I have found," stated he firmly, "that it pays to observe small things. Not that the head waiter is small; rather the reverse." He got up. "Romance," said he, "has placed its stamp upon his countenance; and it would not surprise me if an inquiring wayfarer found him possessed of much secret knowledge. Pardon me for a moment."

He advanced toward the personage in question; after a few moments' conversation I saw the head waiter assume an astonished look and shake his head. Cravath returned and sat down once more.

"I was wrong," admitted he. "He is not gifted with romance; neither is he possessed of knowledge of any sort." Settling himself comfortably he took up the thread where he had snapped it.

"No," affirmed he, "the weapon I spoke of will never do me any harm, unless I fail in my quest."

Knowledge, a thing lacking in the head waiter, came to me.

"Your quest of $1000," said I.

He nodded.

"You see," said he, "it's this way. The girl comes of a family which, while very old, as American families go, has never been addicted to renown. At least, never but once, and that was in colonial days. A great personage, it seems, became involved in a matter which necessitated a challenge. But, as it happened, he was unable to maintain his honor in this way, at the time, being ill. Fire-eating friends he had a-plenty, but none of them were by him at the time. So out stepped an ancestor of my lady love, a gentleman never thought of; calmly he took the matter upon himself, sent a challenge, met his friend's foe, and shot him through the body. As a mark of the exalted personage's appreciation of this service, he presented his champion with a beautiful silver-mounted dueling pistol, upon the barrels of which was engraved an account of the affair. And this is the pistol that is now causing the trouble."

"I hardly think I understand," said I.

"That deed was the only noteworthy thing ever accomplished by the family," said Cravath. "No other heroism ever fell to any one bearing the name—not an added touch of distinction in any field of effort came to them before or after. So the pistol was cherished by succeeding generations."

"A sort of family idol, I should say," I remarked.

"Just so," admitted Cravath. "Well," continuing, "at length only two of the family remained—the young lady in question and her brother. The brother was a bad egg. He spent his share of the family fortune and then began selling the paintings, old furniture and such like. In this way the pistol went, without the sister's knowledge; when she hurried to repurchase it, she was too late. It had already been disposed of. A hunt was begun, which resulted in nothing. The center of my universe was heartbroken. When I protested my love, she, like a lady of old time, gave me a task to perform.

"'Find the pistol,' she said, 'and you may speak to me upon any subject.'

"As you may well believe, I sought and sought, but no tidings of the missing heirloom was had until I received a message at Southampton, almost two weeks ago."

"Southampton?"

"Yes; the girl, you see, had gone abroad with some friends. There was a fellow named Blaylow, son of a man who had made millions somehow, who had manifested a great degree of interest in her, and he also went abroad immediately afterward. Now, if young Blaylow was interested, his family were mad in the matter. Their money had just ceased to dazzle them; and in looking about for something to take its place, they heard of good breeding and gentle blood. The only way to get some of this into the family was by marriage; and knowing this, I suspected Blaylow's design. So, although I had very little money, I, too, took ship for the far-away places.

"But no sooner had I reached Southampton than I received word from a dealer in this city that he had come into possession of the dueling pistol, and that he would sell for $1000. At once I cabled that I would buy. At the same time I telegraphed the object of my affections at Genoa. She replied:

"'If you really love me, you will not lose it.'

"An answering cable came from the dealer:

"'Will give you twenty days' option for $50.'

"I cabled the fifty and booked passage on the next ship out of Southampton, which sailed four days later. Being made acquainted with this, my star of hope notified me that she would also sail for home, from a French port, and would reach here the same day I did."

"I see," said I.

"When I boarded the ship," resumed Cravath, "I had something more than a thousand dollars; when I left it today I hadn't a cent."

"The gamblers," I suggested.

"Blaylow," said he.

"What! Was he on board?"

"He was. He gave me a plausible business reason for curtailing his trip. But I now see that it was all moonshine. He had been with Miss So-and-So's party when my message reached her. He knew of the one she sent me. He left for Southampton at once, meaning to prevent my making good. During my absence, he slipped into my stateroom and took my all. I can see it now as plainly as though it were done before my eyes."

As this seemed to be all that he had to tell me, I gazed at him fixedly. And if there was scorn in my face, I do not wonder, for my soul was full of it.

"And this," said I, "is the cataclysm which you propose matching against mine?"

"You do not consider my case sufficiently harrowing, then?"

"No; for even if you do not secure the pistol, the young lady will do so herself."

"Wrong," said he. "She missed the steamer which she had intended taking and will not reach here until some days after my option is expired."

"Borrow the money, then."

"I thought of that," said he, rather sadly. "But it seems that I have never interested any one a thousand dollars' worth."

Another idea occurred to me.

"Secure an extension of the option," I suggested.

But he shook his head.

"That also presented itself. But Blaylow had thought of it first, and no more than twenty days was to be had."

I realized that the situation bore acute traces which I had not noticed before.

"How many of the twenty days have passed?" I asked.

"This is the eleventh," answered he.

"Have you taken any steps to accumulate the money?"

The humorous look which I had at first noticed returned to his eyes.

"I have inquired in numerous places where such a sum might be had. My reading of old and valued authorities on the subject of hidden treasures has taught me to expect the unexpected. But as yet there has been no sign of success."

"You'll travel far and ask a many and still be without the price, if you hang to that method. The books you speak of were written for another day. It is not now in the nature of things for $1000 to dangle before the nose of any man—except, perhaps, myself."

"And can you," said he with interest, "see such a sum, dangling or otherwise?"

"I can see it so plainly," replied I, "that in comparison the air-drawn dagger of Macbeth is a mere speck on the horizon."

"Perhaps," said he, "you'd oblige me with the history of this fancy."

"With pleasure. But first let us have the waiter repeat."

"Not in my case," said he. "Remember, I have nine more harassing days before me."

So I waived the point and came to my mutton.

"Know you, then," I informed him, "that for the space of three months I have been seeking a Hope—color white, dimensions unlimited. And only a short time ago I came upon a youthful and mammoth stonemason, bearing the title of Prezeblowitz—beautiful name. In a conversation he assured me that his appearance as a human being was the merest assumption. In reality he was a lion. I hired a trainer for him and a training quarter. I scattered about some tidings as to an amazing unknown, and in a little while I had a match for him at the Pelican Athletic Club."

"Remunerative, of course," said Cravath.

"Your own favorite sum—$1000. The time named for the match was tonight, and tonight, when I sought Prezeblowitz, I found that he had flown, apparently having changed his mind as to his leonine qualities."

"When the people at the Pelican heard you tell this, what did they do?"

"They haven't heard me. I never lacked nerve before, but tonight I just couldn't face that matchmaker. There are thousands of folks within the walls of the Pelican Athletic Club at this moment, watching a routine of bad preliminary contests so that they might be on the ground when the great unknown—otherwise Prezeblowitz—makes an appearance."

There was speculation in the eyes of Cravath—speculation and interest.

"Then," said he, "for all they know, you are likely to walk in at any time with your Hope?"

"Exactly."

"And $1000 was to be the portion of that interesting person?"

"Yes."

He bent toward me, the look in his eyes increasing.

"Being an 'unknown,' the personality of Prezeblowitz is, I suppose, more or less shadowy."

"They had never seen him."

"Then," said he, calmly, "for a period of time, I am Prezeblowitz." He looked at his watch. "The Pelican is just ten blocks from here. A street car will get us there in no time at all."

I grasped the situation with some speed. And at the same moment I took another look at his shoulders, the clear eyes and the flawless skin.

"What particular qualifications, other than those visible, have you for this job?" asked I guardedly.

"If we had time," said he, "I could show a room full of things popularly known as trophies. But, as we have not, I'll merely say that I am Cravath and hope that will get me by."

"The Cravath?" I asked, various and notable achievements of an amateur nature flitting through my mind.

"The same," said he.

"You're on," spoke I.

At the door I got my coat and also a leather bag. The latter I held up.

"This," said I to Cravath, "contains the things that were to supply the needs of Prezeblowitz in the ring. They are now yours."

"Good enough," said he.

We had alighted from the car and were but a few steps from the Pelican when I spoke again.

"You haven't asked whom you are to meet."

"No," said he. "If the one thousand is ready and on the premises when I'm through, I'm satisfied."

At the side door we were met by Ogilvie.

"Well," said he, "I'll postpone my very natural remarks for the nonce, because the crowd is now waiting. But, believe me, the next fighter I hire must get here at 8 on the morning of, or he don't see a nickel."

"A little delay in getting in from the training camp," said I. "Sorry it happened."

Ogilvie followed us into the dressing room. When Cravath threw off his overcoat, thereby displaying his dress clothes, the manager appeared dazed.

"He doesn't always put up a front like this," said he in low-voiced incredulity.

"Not always," answered I; "only upon occasions. Dress clothes have a nifty look, and he is strong upon appearance."

"That," said the manager, "is an impressive quality, but it will get him nothing with the patrons of this club. What they expect is action."

"The unknown will attend to that weakness," said I. "Action is his especial fondness. Once let him get started, and he'll show you some speed."

"I'll never stand in the way of his starting," said Ogilvie fervently; "trust me for that."

Just then Teddy Callahan came in with towels, buckets, bottles and other paraphernalia. At sight of Cravath he dropped all upon the floor and called upon his gods. But I shut him up with a look.

"Now," said Ogilvie, "I'll go out and make my usual talk. Be ready in ten minutes."

When he had departed I spoke to Teddy.

"Prezeblowitz blew," said I. "This gentleman takes his place."

Teddy performed the functions for which he had been engaged. As he kneaded the supple muscles and examined the magnificent torso of Cravath he nodded to me admiringly.

"In the pink!" quoth he. "Where did you pick 'im up?"

"Never mind that," said I. "Here he is, and it's up to you to get him ready."

The Pelican was what the sporting writers always called "huge," and that night it was packed to the peak.

"Ogilvie," said Teddy, as he followed us with his traps, "is making a mint. All the high-priced chairs are taken. A lot of swell guys are here to examine the goings. It takes a Swede for luck."

As we climbed into the ring Ogilvie was saying:

"Tonight, as all of you who follow the sporting pages know, the public gets a first peep at the great unknown." He pointed to Cravath as he spoke, and Cravath bowed, pulled his bathrobe closer about his shoulders and sat down. As Teddy was inspecting the gloves in the center Cravath ground his feet in the rosin and said:

"On the third row, left of the aisle, as we just came through, there is a man. Take a look."

I did so. It was a man of 60, partly bald and with a craggy, deep-lined face.

"A hard-old flint," said I to Cravath. "Who is he?"

"Blaylow's father," replied he.

"A surprise," said I; "a distinct surprise! He is a patron of the art, then?"

"I never knew of him to attend a thing like this before. But," with a smile, "it seems that fate would have him see me take down the money that's to defeat his aspirations."

"Has he recognized you, do you think?"

"He has thrown me no sign as yet; but, then, I'd just as lief ignore him as not. Eminence, you know, must not condescend too much."

A few minutes later I had to go to the dressing room for a forgotten something. As I passed the man, third row, left, he held up his hand.

"You," said he in that superior sort of way which so ill becomes some folks, "are the manager of the unknown, I believe?"

I nodded.

"Also his friend," said I.

"Ah, yes; to be sure!" He eyed me askance. "That being the case, perhaps you know why he is there," pointing to the ring, "publicly degrading himself?"

"A little matter of $1000," answered I.

He stared at me, his craggy face gradually turning purple.

"Ah!" said he. Then: "Is it possible? Is it really possible?"

"It is as stated," said I. And, leaving him to reflect and marvel, I proceeded on my way. When I got back into the ring the various things considered necessary to such an exhibition had been gone through. Cravath had the gloves tied firmly on, and Teddy was preaching caution, while he balanced delicately upon the middle rope.

"Guard your jaw," advised Teddy, "and look out for his shift. He's got a long left, too, that feels as though somebody had shoved the end of a plank into your face. Duck away from it. Also keep expecting his right uppercut, for if he connects with it—goodnight!"

"When," questioned Cravath gravely, "do I try something on him?"

Teddy grinned.

"After the eighth round, if you're still feeling fit, you might make a slap or two at him. But up to that stay away."

Cravath indicated the opposite corner, where his prospective opponent sat, with a horde of attendants about him.

"Can he hit?" he asked.

"Hit?" echoed Teddy. "Can the 'Gravedigger' hit! Oh, my!"

"Oh, it's the fellow they call the 'Gravedigger' is it? The crowd made such a noise a while ago that I didn't get the name."

Cravath was as calm as a summer sea. Teddy, amazed, gazed at him with wide-open eyes.

"Say," demanded he, "didn't you know who it was till now?"

Cravath shook his head.

"No," said he. "But, all things considered, I'm glad I do know, for, as it happens, I once saw this gentleman perform."

Here the referee, trim and agile, leaped over the ropes. Nodding to the principals, he said:

"Gentlemen, are you ready?"

Teddy drew the bathrobe from his man's shoulders and as Cravath stood up, he said to me:

"If it is true that brevity is the soul of wit, who knows but what it is also the soul of such a proceeding as this?"

"If it is in you to make it brief," said I, "go to it."

"Will it make no difference in the coin?"

"Not a bit. As a natural result of protracted and somewhat dull disputes, the management has come to admire celerity. Be as hasty as you may, but don't forget the 'Gravedigger.'"

Then the gong rang and I turned and climbed down. Being rather slower than I once was, it took me a moment or two to negotiate a landing without stepping upon an upturned face. And while I was still so engaged there came a sudden roar. They were still roaring when I turned. The 'Gravedigger" was upon his back, the referee was counting over him and Cravath was leaning over the ropes, beckoning to me.

"Pile into the office and get the money while your man is helping me to dress," he said in my ear.

"What!" said I, and I had to about in order to be heard; "did you get him?"

Just then the count stopped, and the referee threw up his hands to indicate that it was all over, and Cravath leaped out of the ring as the "Gravedigger's" seconds leaped in. And though I did not understand how the result came about and never have understood it, I hastily made away to the box office. The money had been paid down when Cravath came hastily in, and as the one thousand, representing his share, was passed to him, he said:

"Have you anything to do?"

"No," said I.

"Then come for a run across town. I'm going to settle the affair of the pistol within the hour."

As we were about to enter a taxi we saw old Blaylow and some friends on the point of entering another.

"Ah, Mr. Blaylow," spoke Cravath smoothly, "a favor, I beg."

Blaylow grew rigid with dignity.

"Sir," said he, "in view of what has just happened, I would prefer that you would not address me."

"Only a word," besought Cravath. "Your social standing will not suffer from a thing so small as that, I'm sure."

"Well?" demanded Blaylow.

"Mention to your son that I regard him as an exceptional workman. Also, please say to him that if he were to cling to the business in which he exhibited his skill on the steamer coming over, his success would be undoubted."

The other snarled and climbed into his cab. Cravath waved his hand jovially.

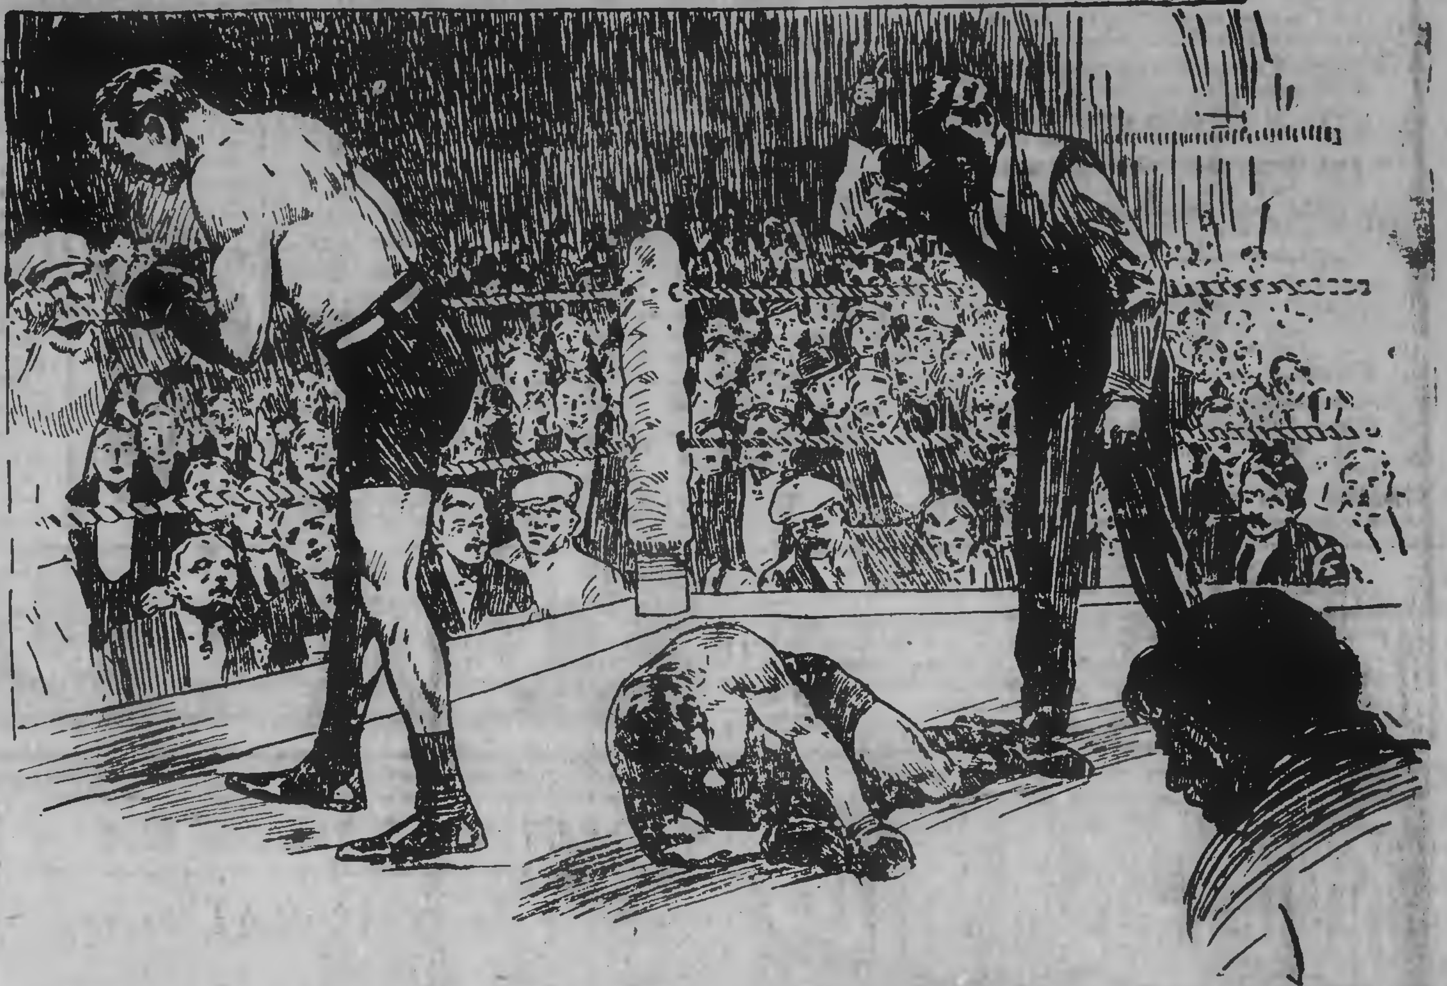
"Second-story work would also probably be well within his scope," said he. "And, as one who would naturally desire him to realize his talent to the full, I beg of you also to mention that to him."

But the taxi drew away, old Blaylow making no reply. And as our own started, Cravath sank back in the seat with a sigh of comfortable satisfaction.

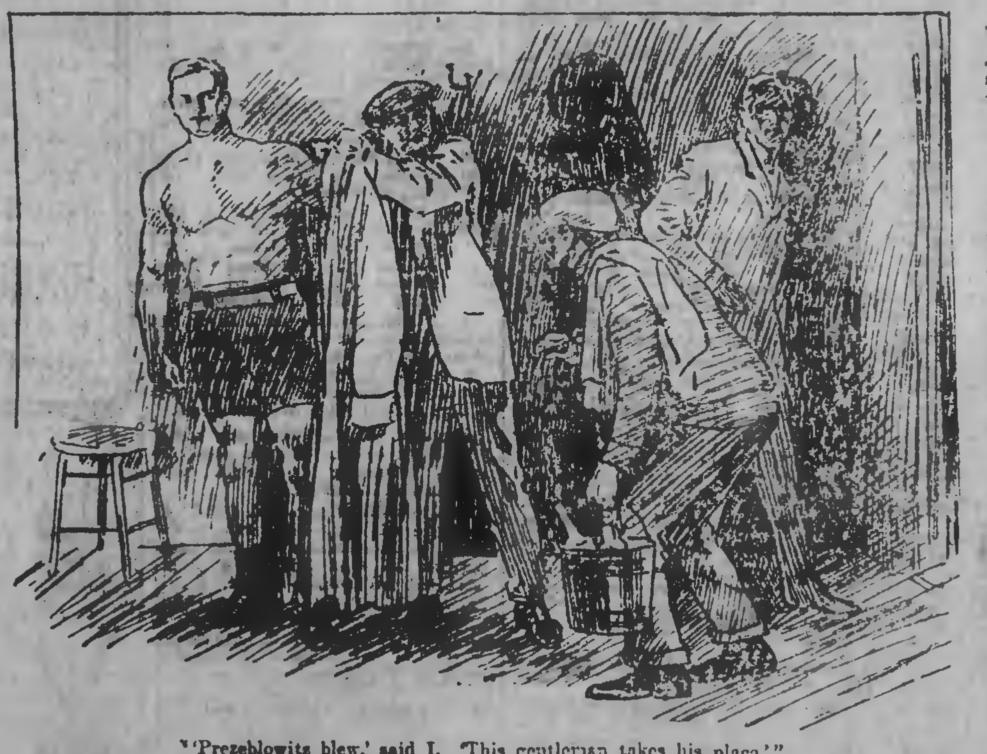
"But, in spite of his talents," said he, "I've beaten him. In a little while longer the pistol will be mine, and shortly thereafter, the lady herself will be mine."

"Do you know that?"

"I do," replied he promptly. "I know it because I know the girl."



"The 'Gravedigger' was upon his back, the referee counting over him."



"'Prezeblowitz blew,' said I. 'This gentleman takes his place.'"

Dandelion Salad.

Rub a salad bowl with a cut piece of garlic, then a leek cut into thin rings and season with salt, pepper and a dash of mustard and mix with a tablespoonful of vinegar. Next blend with olive oil, cut a hard cooked egg into rings and add to the dressing. Put the dandelion leaves, previously washed and drained, with the above and toss together with fork and spoon. It is said that no other salad has more medicinal value than this. It is a fine tonic for the blood in the spring.

RELATIVE OF DR. TAYLOR HAS NO FAITH IN THAT FORTUNE

Mrs. W. H. Hill, of this city, one of the heirs to the Taylor fortune, as a granddaughter of Rev. Dr. Taylor, has not yet given an opinion as to her belief or disbelief in the reality of the wealth, but one of her relatives has done so in a letter to the Mayor of Montreal. The letter is as follows:

'To the Mayor of Montreal:

Dear Sir.—Have received papers and letter from several relatives and friends in Montreal, of the Taylor fortune waiting heirs. I am a daughter of Alexander Taylor, son of Wm. Taylor, D.D We lived in grandpa's house, 479 Mansfield street. After his death until my father's death in 1881, when I was taken care of by Mrs. Agnes MacDonald, (now dead) at 147 Metcalf street, William Taylor (cousin Willie) boarded there the first years of his coming to Montreal from his father's home, then in Peterborough. I have no reason to believe there is any foundation for this fortune to be true, but would consider it very kind of you to notify me if your hear of any further particulars. My father-in-law thinks it rather probable, as the man has written to the Mayor. I think it may be some one in his dotage who thinks the money is there to be claimed. I have written him, also cousin Willie, and will write after furnishing this to my father's cousins, the Drummonds, whom I have been in touch with since leaving Montreal.

"My elder sister, Mrs. M. M. Taylor, is of the children's home—Mrs M. M. Taylor, 190 Somerset street, New Brunswick, New Jersey.

"My youngest sister is a widow with four children in British Columbia.—Mrs. Agnes Smith, Royal Oak Road, MacKay, P.O., British Columbia.

"I remain, very truly, Elizabeth Adela Taylor Rolfe. Care of Mrs. Harvey M. Wolfe, Ottawa Park, Cape Elizabeth, Maine."

A GREAT MOMENT IN A GREAT CRISIS

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir.— It must now be plain to everyone interested in the fate of the British Empire, that the coming of the pro-British party into power in Canada was not a moment too soon. The latest cables show the supreme anxiety of the Government of Britain to increase its naval effectiveness in the face of the German peril. There is no mincing of words Mr. Churchill points his finger squarely at the "German peril." The despatches show that a tremendous cheer went up when Mr. Churchill announced that Mr. Borden had just told him that Canada would do whatever is necessary to aid in meeting the foes of the Empire. What a contrast this is to the faint-hearted policy of Mr. Borden's predecessor, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who refused to commit Canada to an unequivocal position in this or any other supremely important imperial matter. The re-adjustment of alliances, Japan going to Russia and Italy to Germany also, makes Canada's aid worth having and it is a matter of intense gratification that our chief representative has spoken boldly, definitely and like a true loyalist in this hour of trial. There is no doubt where Canada stands.

HORSE ON DUTY SUDDENLY QUITS

A horse attached to a bay delivery waggon lay down in its harness at the corner of Hunter and Chambers streets this morning and refused to budge until it was freed from the vehicle when it resumed a standing posture. There was no apparent reason for the sudden cessation of labor. The equine alone knows the cause. Perhaps the load was too heavy and the horse meant to convey a hint that a transfer of a portion of the feed from vehicle to the propelling power would be acceptable.

MANGLED HAND CLEANING PIPE

While in ecstasies produced by a liberal application to John Barleycorn, a man named "Pete" McCrae graphically described how he had mangled his hand with a knife, while cleaning out this pipe. It was evident that he had swallowed the hot stuff to deaden the pain of the wound. Anyway he was jubilantly happy and a reporter had difficulty in escaping beyond the sound of his rapidly revolving tongue.

DIED

RABEY—At Peterborough, on Monday, July 22nd, 1912, William Rabey. Funeral from the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Gilbert Borland, 165 Hunter street east, on Wednesday afternoon, at half-past two. Funeral private.

From the Book of Mormon.

Not every one who reads the name of Mahonri Young, whose bronzes and drawings are attracting attention just now, knows whether it is a name of foreign or domestic make. Mr. Young is a grandson of Brigham Young, and his resonant first name is taken directly out of the book of Mormon. He is still in his early thirties and is self taught. One of his most striking pictures is called "Building the Mormon Temple," and some of his subjects are drawn from the land of the Latter Day Saints. Mahonri Young is not the only artist who has come out of Utah and gained much fame for himself. Cyrus Dallin, also a sculptor, came from the Mormon fold, and there are several others.—New York Mail.

Biggest Salary Raise on Record.

When the government last July decided to pay $492 per annum to the man who would carry the United States mails between Springfield and Lake Geneva, Wis., the pay for that work was raised 49,200 times more than it had been the year before. During the preceding twelve months Louis Wade had contracted to do the work for 1 cent a year. For this large compensation he or his employee had to make twelve trips a week, traveling eighteen and a half miles a day and disposing of 500 pounds of mail each trip.

He did it for this small sum because he ran a stage line and wanted the prestige of handling the mails.—Popular Magazine.

STRENGTHENED WHITE CAPS TOOK FIRST FROM BRANTFORD

Brant and Nicholls Got Away Well—Barthold Twirled For Petes—Team is in Winning Form—Good Work of Byrne.

The Peterborough White Caps again jumped strongly into favor yesterday by giving Brantford the unit in a 5—1 score, in a fast, snappy and popular exhibition. Incidentally Manager Rowan showed considerable gray matter in freezing onto short-stop Brant, and second sackman Nicholls for his team. Both additions are valuable, and will round out the team, it is hoped, into something more like winning form. Their work yesterday tickled everybody and at every test they made good.

Brant is a fast fielder, quick as a flash and uses his head to advantage. The same bouquet can be applied to Nicholls, who held down second.

"Johnny" Barthold handled the sphere for the "Petes," and although eight hits were obtained off him, his support was excellent. Tasker, the visiting twirler, was only one behind him, allowing eight hits.

Pitcher Frederick has not yet reported owing to a sore arm, and Marty Connors is still laid up.

Manager Rowan was able to watch the game from the bench yesterday.

The Petes made a great getaway, Nicholls, the new man at second, retiring Novak and Courtney by clean fielding. Kane hit through the box and beat out Trout's attempt to get him at second, the throw being somewhat wild. Coose ended with a fly to short.

While Brant fanned, Shea was safe when Elcook messed up his grounder, only to be forced by White. Swartz grounded.

* * *

There was nothing doing for Brantford, but Beard beat out a hit down third after Trout skied. He, too, was forced, but Nicholls grounded.

* * *

Byrne went to the fence for a hard chance, and this play with a fast double by Brantford were features of the third round.

* * *

Burrill planted a nice hit in right while Byrne got another warm hand by going to the fence for another foul fly. The Petes scored twice here. White drove one between short and third, and scored from first bag on a double to left by Jimmie Swartz. Trout was out when he became mixed up with his hit, but Beard's drive into right garden scored Swartz. Byrne and Nicholls grounded.

* * *

Clarke dropped a single in left and went to third on an unexpected double by Tasker after Lamond had missed three. Both men were left stranded as Clark held the bag when Novak flew out to Beard in short centre and Byrne took care of a foul fly by Courtney.

It was tough medicine for Brantford and by way of rubbing it in the Petes took two more. Barthold drew a pass and while Courtney took Brant's fly, he fell down on Shea's easy grounder, White came along with a triple to the new fence, Osborne who ran for Barthold coming home with Shea. The next two were easy outs.

* * *

The Brants took their only counter in the sixth. Kane singled to centre, Coose gave Beard a hard chance which he accepted and Burrill fanned. Elcock came over with a three base bang that scored his manager. He was left as Clarke grounded.

It was up and out for the Petes.

* * *

Two flies and a nice throw by Trout to get Courtney going into second killed the visitors.

With Barthold disposed of, Brant singled and scored on Shea's long double. Dubbie made the third bag when Courtney's relay throw from Coose went high to the plate.

* * *

Nicholls all but robbed Kane of a hit, but the bingle was wasted as Coose wafted into a double play, Brant to Nicholls to Shea. This was something unusual from this territory. Burrill hit and Elcock grounded.

Trout and Beard flew out, Byrne was hit and Nicholls grounded.

* * *

Swartz took a fly from Clarke and another from Lamond. Tasker was safe when Byrne let loose on a low throw, Tasker taking second. Novak ended with a fly to White.

BREEZES FROM THE DIAMOND

Under a large out, announced to depict Cornelius McGillicudy Murphy, the Hamilton Spectator says:

What goes for popularity: It is a question which has often been asked by many a ball player. In Connie Murphy's case it is the ability of giving a club and the fans faithful service, of doing one's best all the time, no matter the obstacles or the task. In addition to playing an exceptionally good game in left field this year. Murphy has conducted himself in such a manner that he has gained the esteem of every fan in Hamilton, for the fans are quick to appreciate the player who gives them his best all the time, especially when that best is above expectations.

Will Float Either Side Up.

A new kind of dumping scow is being tried at New York. The new scow is made so that it will float either side up. It is loaded up and towed to sea. At the proper time the man who is in the scow turns a valve and water is let into a chamber. Gradually this causes the scow to list or careen to one side and finally to "turn turtle," thus dumping its entire load. The operator is placed like a squirrel in a cage, and as the boat turns over he easily keeps his upright position. What was the bottom of the scow before now becomes the deck, and it is ready to receive another load.—Exchange.

Munich's Doll Theater.

In a Berlin newspaper there is a description of a benefit performance which took place at Munich in honor of the birthday of Josef Schmid, popularly known as "Papa" Schmid. The beneficiary has been the manager of a theater since 1848, on the stage of which only dolls appear. "Through all the changes which have taken place on the stage and in its management," writes the correspondent, "Schmid has remained true to the puppet play, and children who laughed and wept over his Kasperl plays have seen their grandchildren do likewise."

New Kind of Sirup.

To make sirup that epicures cannot tell from genuine maple sirup boil a dozen dark corncobs in a gallon of water.

Switzerland's Tourist Traffic.

The Swiss government is being urged to create a federal office to supplement the society now engaged in the promotion of the tourist traffic which is maintained by the various cantonal governments and to expend $200,000 a year in attracting tourists. With the $800,000 which the railways, hotels and local development spend each year for the same purpose, this would mean an expenditure of $1,000,000 a year for the encouragement of a trade which annually brings many millions into the

MIXED MARRIAGE FEATURE NOT SUBMITTED TO COURT

Privy Council Did Not Hear Arguments on the Question of the Legality of Marriage Between Catholics and Protestants Probably Because That Question is Now Before Quebec Courts—May be Considered Later.

The Privy Council declined to hear arguments on the mixed marriage feature of the marriage case appeal. It is understood that they did so because the question of the legality of such marriages is at issue in the Hebert case still pending in the Quebec courts. It was for this reason that Chief Justice Fitzpatrick declined to vote on that question when the marriage case was before the Canadian Supreme Court. It is said that this phase of the case may be taken up later.

London, July 24.—The Privy Council reserved judgment in the appeal by the Canadian Government on the marriage question.

Mr. I. F. Hellmuth, continuing the argument yesterday before the Privy Council, urged that the provision now sought to be imposed would be at various with the code in the case of two Roman Catholics, whose marriage could only be validly solemnized before a Roman Catholic priest, because no other minister upon the true construction of the code had the necessary authority to solemnize such.

The Lord Chancellor referred to articles in the code based on the decision of the Counsel of Trent.

Mr. Hellmuth said: "The greatest social evil that could befall a country would be legislation leading to laxity in solemnization of a marriage clandestinely. The code of Quebec was based on the general French law that clandestine marriage was no marriage.

Mr. Smith then opened the case for the Province of Quebec. When this bill was introduced by a private person, he pointed out, the question at once presented itself whether the Dominion Parliament was not acting ultra vires in allowing such a bill to be promoted. Lord Atkinson replied: "The question, it seems to me, is one as to the locality where the ceremony takes place and whether it is performed according to the rules of the church of the contracting parties. The act provides that a marriage is duly solemnized in accordance with local law when the requirements of a person's own church are observed."

Lord Halsbury: "You ask whether in accordance with a proper construction of the clause, the jurisdiction expressly given to the Dominion Parliament over marriage, divorce includes this particular subject of solemnization of marriage in the province. Why do you say that?"

Mr. Smith submitted that the jurisdiction over this particular subject was invested exclusively in the provinces by the act of 1868.

In reply to a question by the Lord Chancellor, counsel submitted that failure to legislate reasonably upon any subject within its exclusive jurisdiction could not have effect transferring such jurisdiction to the Dominion Parliament. Whatever the law in Quebec might be, the answer to the question should be in the negative as the question related only to the solemnization of marriage.

GERMAN POLITICIAN MAKES LIGHT OF LATEST WAR SCARE

When Interviewed In Vancouver, Dr. Herman Paasche, Vice-President of the German Reichstag, Declares That the Whole Thing Is Being Stirred Up by the French Chauvinists.

Vancouver, B.C., July 24.—"The German menace now occupying so much attention is only a myth. Belief in its existence has been encouraged by French Chauvinists, or ultra-patriots, with the idea of embroiling Britain and Germany. I think that war between these two countries is inconceivable. It is unfortunate that an element among the British people misunderstand the aims and aspirations of my countrymen," said Dr. Herman Paasche, vice-president of the Reichstag, at the German Federal Parliament to a representative of the Western Associated Press here yesterday.

The distinguished visitor and his wife reached this city yesterday morning by the C.P.R. from the east and were met by the residents of the German embassy. They will sail for the orient on the Empress of India today.

"We want to live in peace with Great Britain and with the rest of the world. Our policy is one of 'defence,' not 'defiance,'" continued Dr. Paasche, in discussing Anglo-German relations. "It is unfortunate that the policy of the German nation is misunderstood, thanks to the misrepresentations of our avowed enemies. I feel certain that the great majority of the people in the British Empire, like the great majority of the people of the German empire, desire peace and not war."

"The growth of our navy is a natural revolution in harmony with the development and expansion of the empire and the strong position our nation occupies as a military people. We feel justified in protecting our seaports, lines of communication and sea borne commerce.

"We want to keep the peace while being prepared for invasion. The danger lies with France, who is not well disposed towards us and sees a possible advantage in arraying Britain against us."

FOUR KILLED BY EXPLOSION

Perth, July 24.—Four men were killed yesterday afternoon in the railroad construction camp of Wheaton & Co., one of the contractors on the new Canadian Pacific line which crosses from Glen Bay to Belleville. The men were engaged in blasting and had poured about half a can of powder into one hole, which they proceeded to pack.

The powder exploded, killing the four men instantly, and throwing another, who was standing by, about 30 feet. Two of the killed were foreigners, the other two being Patrick Ryan of Perth and J. Robertson of Kingston.

The whole gang of men employed by Wheaton & Co. had a lucky escape in the accident, as there were cans of powder standing close by, which were upset by the explosion, but not ignited.

ROOSEVELT PARTY GETTING READY

New York, July 24.—In his first speech since he returned from Chicago, Col. Roosevelt yesterday set forth his reasons for leading in the formation of a new party. His address was delivered at a meeting of the New York State county chairmen.

"No man knows better than I," said Col. Roosevelt, "that enthusiasm and high principles cannot be effective without organization and work. A great responsibility rests upon you men here who are undertaking the organization of a new party which is to stand four-squared to democracy, which is to be literally the party of the people. It will fight on live issues and not dead ones. It will embody a protest against the corruption in both of the old party machines. It will be a party into which ex-Democrats and ex-Republicans, without regard to their political past, are to come in on an exact equality and have each the same share in the party management.

"When we get this started it will be a party not only representing the people at election time, but will represent them in party management."

Bold Robbery In Chatham.

Chatham, July 24.—One of the biggest robberies reported in this district in a long time occurred in the Village of Sombra, in Lambton County some time during yesterday morning. Thieves entered the general store and tailoring shop owned by C. J. Logan, by forcing a door. They ransacked the establishment and departed taking with them goods aggregating in value over $1,000. There is no clue.

Woman Kills Her Father.

Kansas City, Mo., July 24.—Edith Gamble, 24 years old, shot and killed her father, Charles Gamble, here early yesterday when he broke into their residence, to which he had been denied admittance, and attempted to attack his wife and daughter.

Mrs. Gamble recently sued her husband for divorce.

WANTS MEN WHO ARE HIGHER UP

Commissioner Dougherty Has Done His Best, But the Remainder of the Police Force Are Doing Nothing Declares Prosecuting Attorney—"Gun Man" Harry Vallon Surrenders to the Authorities.

New York, July 24.—"There are bigger men than Becker in this case, and I want them. What has the police department, except Dougherty, done? Nothing. They are not doing anything now. Dougherty is honest and on the level, but can he swing this thing alone? The murder smells of police connivance."

This was the remark made by District Attorney Whitman, when told that counsel for Sapiro was ready to have the chauffeur of the "murder car" turn state's evidence if he would be protected, said: "I will protect every man in this case if I can get the evidence I want against policemen; evidence I know exists. I will let Sapiro and Libby and "Bridgie" Webber and Sam Paul and Jack Rose himself turn state's witnesses if I can get the public conspirators. But I have got to be first.

The gun men wanted for the killing of gambler Herman Rosenthal are beginning to fall into the nets. Harry Vallon, gun carrier and gambler, one of the five notorious gangsters who were in the "murder car" the night Rosenthal was shot, surrendered himself to the police yesterday morning and within ten days Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty expects to round up the whole gang of gun carriers.

With the men who actually did the shooting in the toils the main work of District Attorney Whitman and Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty will commence, that of trying to learn the identity of the real conspirators who so greatly desired that Rosenthal be done away with before he could make further revelations of the relations between the police and gamblers.

GERMAN PRESS REMAINS CALM

Churchill's Speech Causes Very Little Comment.

Berlin, July 24.—German public opinion is neither disturbed nor irritated over the naval debate in the House of Commons in London. The press generally seems satisfied with Germany's comparative position under the new order of things and praises the speech of Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, as frank, without the usual provocativeness. It criticizes, however, the attempt to throw the responsibility for the increased armaments on Germany.

The Vossische Zeitung in commenting on the subject points out that the increase in the German fleet was due to the tone of British statesmen during the Morocco crisis, which compelled every German to regard an increase in the German fleet as a commandment of self-preservation. The Vossische Zeitung takes up Arthur J. Balfour's phrase in which he referred to senseless competition in shipbuilding and asks: "Who is responsible? It was not Germany that invented Dreadnoughts, super-Dreadnoughts and submarines."

A responsible official corroborated the standpoint of the press and asserted unequivocally that the speech delivered by Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, at the Mansion House, London, in 1911, was the direct and sole cause of the new German naval bill.

O, WISE AND UPRIGHT JUDGE

Witnesses swore Withers passed the stopping trolley at high speed and did not wait to learn of his victim.

FORMER SPEAKER OF LOCAL HOUSE HAS PASSED AWAY

Cayuga, Ont., July 24.—The Hon. Jacob Baxter, M.D., registrar of Haldimand County, passed away at his late home here early yesterday morning.

Hon. Dr. Baxter was one of the best known and most highly respected residents of the Niagara Peninsula. He was born in the Township of Bertie, Welland County, on June 6, 1832.

He was elected to the Ontario Legislature as a Liberal in 1867 and sat continuously until 1898, save for a few months when a Patron of Industry held the seat, being removed on petition. The Hon. Dr. Baxter was elected Speaker of the Ontario Legislature in 1887, which office he held until 1891.

He took a great interest in military affairs and was gazetted surgeon of the 2nd Battalion of Haldimand in 1856, and continued to act in that capacity in the 37th Regiment for many years, and retired with the rank of surgeon-lieutenant-colonel, holding a Fenian Raid medal, as well as a long-service medal.

Hon. Dr. Baxter voluntarily retired from Parliamentary life in 1898, and was afterwards appointed registrar of deeds for the County of Haldimand.

BOY KIDNAPPED BY HIS FATHER

New York, July 24.—Kidnapping his son Thomas, 5 years old, from under the eyes of the Sisters of St. Vincent's Academy in Williams place, Newark, N.J., Frank O'Brien, a clerk for the W. H. Carroll Drug Co., of Passaic, N.J., last Saturday, disappeared with the boy.

Mrs. Violet O'Brien, mother of the boy, and the father decided to separate last spring, after seven years of married life. They were married in Toronto on Dec. 23, 1905, and went to Passaic soon after. Following the separation the child remained in the custody of Mrs. O'Brien.

According to the story told by Mrs. O'Brien in a habeas corpus proceeding on June 10, her husband drove up in an automobile and forcibly taking the child from her arms, dashed back into the machine and drove away.

Medicoes Declare War.

Liverpool, July 24.—The British Medical Association has finally declared open war on David Lloyd-George, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and the national insurance scheme, by which 13,000,000 people are brought into a system of contributory insurance against sickness and disability.

The matter has been under advisement of the committee of the association, and yesterday at its annual meeting here the doctors present passed a resolution breaking off negotiations and refusing to accept office of any kind.

TWELVE GIRLS DIE IN LONDON FIRE

London, July 24.—Seven girls were killed, five were fatally injured, and several other severely injured in a fire which occurred yesterday in a four-storey building in Moor lane, in the heart of the city, occupied by celluloid Christmas card manufacturers, who employed many females. The fire started in a front room on the top floor and spread quickly. To reach the stairs the girls in the back room had to pass through the front room, and before they realized their danger the flames had cut off the means of escape.

Canadian Plans Cause Comment.

London, July 24.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Evening News says that there is to be an acceleration of many months in the shipbuilding program. Four armored ships are to be laid down before next July. The Canadian ships will be included in this earlier start.

Hon. R. L. Borden and other Ministers were in the distinguished strangers' gallery during Hon. Winston Churchill's naval speech.

The Pall Mall Gazette says: "They were silent but keenly attentive witnesses to the tremendous fact that Canada is about to lead the overseas dominions in the giving of their young strength to support the Motherland in the great struggle that lies ahead for the maintenance of the Imperial supremacy and the peace of the world.

WOOD PULP AND PAPER TO BE TAKEN FROM FREE LIST

In Case the American Congress Repeals the Reciprocity Pact, the Only Operative Clause of Which Admits These Articles to the United States Free of Duty.

Washington, July 24.—One effect of the proposed repeal of the reciprocity agreement as a whole would be to restore wood pulp and paper to the dutiable list. These products now enter from Canada free under the only operative clause of the agreement.

The U. S. Government began an investigation yesterday to determine whether the right of free entry should be extended to wood pulp and paper made from certain crown lands in British Columbia on which that province recently removed the restrictions on exportation. Ordinarily this action would abolish the duties. Secretary of State Knox will make the investigation.

Quits Job to Help Roosevelt.

Washington, July 24.—Francis W. Byrd, appraiser of customs at New York, resigned yesterday. In his letter to Secretary MacVeigh, Mr. Byrd says he quit his office to join Col. Roosevelt's new party. Mr. Byrd has held the position less than a year. He was a student and later an associate in the law office of Senator Root and Henry L. Stimson, secretary of war in the Taft Cabinet.

Labor Disputes Bill.

London, July 24.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer, David Lloyd-George, announced in the House of Commons yesterday the intention of the Government to introduce a bill to deal with labor disputes, such as the present dock strike.

The Chancellor did not define the measure but indicated that it was likely to involve compulsory arbitration and financial guarantees for observing agreements.

German Spy Sentenced.

Edinburgh, Scotland, July 24.—Amgaad Karl Graves, a German, was found guilty yesterday by the Scottish High Court of Justiciary, on a charge of spying. He was sentenced to eight months' imprisonment.

Notes regarding guns under construction in the British Government arsenals and other incriminating documents were found in his possession.

PARLIAMENT MAY BE CALLED TOGETHER IN SEPTEMBER

Tongues Wag Busily at Ottawa as Result of Churchill's Speech and Contribution of $15,000,000 Is Predicted—French-Canadian Press Not Enthusiastic—Borden Will Soon Be Back In the Capital.

Ottawa, July 24.—The naval situation is the sole topic of discussion in political, official and even financial circles here at present. All other matters have been relegated to the background. Everyone is agreed that the month of September will witness the most interesting and perhaps far-reaching political developments, that Canada has known for years.

While there are a batch of opinions as to what announcement Mr. Borden will have to make to the people on his return, it is held that the Government will give an immediate contribution of from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000. This would furnish the swiftest possible aid to the Mother Country, as well as ample time for a free and full discussion throughout the country, should the Conservatives be desirous of ascertaining as far as possible what the people believe, should be adopted as a permanent policy.

That a plebiscite will be taken, no one now for a moment believes. This, it is felt, could only lead to large sectional majorities for or against any policies, and would merely tend to consider the naval question apart from everything else, but this is not at all likely.

Mr. Borden, however, will be home much sooner than was at first expected, and it is understood, has asked all his colleagues to be in Ottawa early in that month, to discuss this information which he is bringing with him from the British Admiralty, and it may be that Parliament will be called to discuss the matter of an immediate contribution. All indications point to an early session, in which the naval policy will likely be the most important matter for consideration.

No Loud Applause.

Montreal, July 24.—La Presse, discussing Canada's naval contribution to Imperial defence, says in part:

"Canada is the granary of the Empire. Is not that the most useful manner in which to contribute to Imperial defence? We supported Sir Wilfrid Laurier without hesitation when he consented to prepare, little by little, a Canadian navy for the defence of own territory, but what Mr. Borden proposes to-day is not the same thing. Led astray by a false sentimentalism, intoxicated by incense which mounts to his nostrils from the Unionist censors, he sees nothing more nor less than the progressive effacement of our national autonomy. We cannot follow him so far. Canada is ready to help Great Britain generously, but it has no need to sacrifice for that any one of its present rights."

Henri Bourassa in Le Devoir refers to the impropriety of a British Minister undertaking to define the attitude of the Canadian Prime Minister on the naval question before Mr. Borden had returned to Canada and submitted his policy to Parliament and the people.

"This strange proceeding has been evidently adopted with the authorization of Mr. Borden," Mr. Bourassa says. "Till further information is received, it may be taken for granted that Mr. Borden is preparing to return to his attitude of 1909, i.e., to reserve for a nebulous future the definition of the terms of Imperial partnership and the settlement of the condition on which the political authority and the military burdens of the Empire will be apportioned. In the meanwhile he is preparing to run to arms on land and sea, and to take an immediate plunge into a policy of preparation against the still problematical dangers that Britain may encounter in the North Sea or the Mediterranean.

"A fresh dose of the Drummond-Arthabaska election medicine might do him good at the present moment."

HON. FRANK COCHRANE.

He is on a trip, inspecting the new railways, under process of construction in the west. He will visit Peterboro shortly, on business connected with his department, that of railways and canals.

OTTAWA HAS TYPHOID SCARE

Ottawa, July 24.—There were 100 cases of typhoid reported in Ottawa up to noon yesterday, as a result of contaminated water being supplied to the city through a break in the intake which was discovered Monday night.

The break is between the station where hydrochloride is placed in the water and the pump house, so that after the water was purified it was afterwards polluted by sewage from the body of dirty water through which the intake pipe passed.

Troops to Quell Strike.

Charleston, W. Va., July 24.—One company of militia and a machine gun squad left here early yesterday for Peyton, Boone County, where a deputy sheriff was fatally shot yesterday during a fight with striking coal miners. Sheriff White called upon Governor Glasscock for the troops, declaring he was unable to handle the situation.

Except that Deputy Sheriff Southpin was shot, no details have yet been received of the trouble.

Notes About Women.

Mme. Kaissavow of St. Petersburg died a few days ago, leaving a library containing 18,000 volumes, all written by women. This is said to be the most extensive individual collection of the kind ever formed.

One of the ardent workers for equal suffrage in the national capital is Mrs. Atlee Pomerene, wife of the new senator from Ohio. During her husband's campaign in Ohio she took a great interest in the political changes and is said to be one of the best informed women in Washington.

Ohio will be the scene of general suffrage activity for the next few months or until the time of the special election, which is expected to take place in midsummer. Advocates of equal suffrage throughout the United States are rallying to the support of the women of Ohio in their campaign for the vote, under the leadership of Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton, president of the State Suffrage association. Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois have already arranged to put workers in the field, and many women from states farther west and south stand ready to respond to the first call for assistance.

SOUR RISINGS FROM STOMACH

Those Who Experience Fullness and Pain After Meals, Stomach Disorders, and Indigestion, Should Read Below.

"When I was working around the farm last winter I had an attack of inflammation," writes Mr. E. P. Dawkins, of Port Richmond. "I was weak for a long time, but well enough to work until spring. But something went wrong with my bowels, for I had to use salts or physic all the time. My stomach kept sour, and always after eating there was pain and fulness, and all the symptoms of intestinal indigestion. Nothing helped me until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Instead of hurting, like other pills, they acted very mildly, and seemed to heal the bowels. I did not require large doses to get results with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and feel so glad that I have found a mild yet certain remedy. To-day I am well—no pain, no sour stomach, a good appetite, able to digest anything. This is a whole lot of good for one medicine to do, and I can say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the best pills, and my letter, I am sure, proves it."

HOW HAVE THE MIGHTY FALLEN?

President Taft, who a few years ago was an upright Federal judge unskilled in the ways of the professional politician, is fast learning the game, the first lessons in which he received as he sat at the feet of Col. Roosevelt.

The man who, during the early part of his administration, was ambitious to distinguish himself by some notable act of public service, who brought his country into a friendly alliance with France and England and saved it from threatened war with Mexico and Japan, has forgotten the high ideals of yesterday, and seems to have lost every ambition but one, to secure another term of office.

Regardless of a treaty made with England that the United States should permit all the nations of the world to use the Panama Canal on equal terms, he now favors a policy that will admit the vessels of his own country free while imposing a toll upon other vessels that pass through the waterway, thus giving the United States an unfair advantage in the commerce of the sea. He seems to have forgotten that the Republic could never have constructed the canal unless England had waived certain rights which she held on the isthmus and the other powers had consented to the United States undertaking the work.

President Taft is making a palpable bid for the support of the railway and vessel interests and for the jingo element of the country. On no other ground can his extraordinary position be explained. And the Congressmen who are carrying their axes to the same grindstone have a similar object in view. They must face their constituents simultaneously with the president, and are naturally ambitious as he is to succeed themselves.

Now we are informed that in order to hold the votes of the farmers of the northern border states he has recommended to Congress the repeal of the Reciprocity Pact, taking care to address his communication to the upper branch, where his own party is still in the majority. His friends have advised him that on account of the objection of the treaty by the Canadians it would be wise to drop it as a dead issue and purge the records of the measure, however much ratification might mean to the United States. A few votes might thereby be saved the party, notably in Ohio, the president's own state.

And so as a matter of policy alone, a vote catching scheme, Mr. Taft turns down what was to have been the masterstroke of his public career.

There is no likelihood that the treaty will be repealed. The Republican Senate killed it once, but the Democratic lower branch of Congress refused to concur. Moreover, the Democratic convention at Baltimore made it a leading feature in the keynote speeches, and will continue to stand by it in the forlorn hope that it may yet be ratified by the Canadians.

THE GLOBE SQUIRMS

The Globe has receded from its attitude on the trade question, forced into its new position by some of the discussions carried on by the press with regard to the election in Saskatchewan. Anyone who reads the Globe may be forgiven if he regarded that paper as a free trade advocate but the Globe says any such conclusion is absurd. To defend itself it proceeds to split hairs by drawing a fine distinction between free and freer trade. It never meant to stand for free trade in manufactured goods and has been grossly misunderstood by any one who thinks it did.

The Globe takes as its text a statement made in a recent issue of the Regina Leader which warns the "Big Interests" of the East that it is a delusion to suppose that the West is not in earnest in its demands for freer trade and wider markets. This, the Toronto organ claims, as it rushes to the aid of its party contemporary, does not mean actual free trade but only a reduction of the present tariff. Dropping a word of advice to the Liberal papers of Canada the Globe warns them to observe the distinction carefully so that no misrepresentation on this point may be possible on the part of the enemy at the next general election.

Facts are stubborn things and will not down. Ever since the present government took office the Globe has been preaching free trade on this or that commodity, or at least a reduction of duty to an extent which would bring what was left of a tariff tax under that heading, and it will take more than its present somewhat frantic avowal of innocence to convince the public that it did not mean mischief to some of the established industries of Canada. We need go no further back than the agitation on cement and undressed lumber duties to secure evidence in support of the charge that the Globe has been calling out for free trade and that without any of the fine points of distinction which it now essays to establish.

Seeing that the Globe endorses what is said by the Regina Leader the statement with regard to freer trade and wider markets may be taken as its own. We should all have some idea by this time what is implied by the latter phrase seeing that it has been thoroughly discussed for months. Wider markets such as the West calls for cannot be secured without concession in the shape of tariff reductions, which mean free trade if they mean anything. A proposition looking to such an exchange was proposed and overwhelmingly rejected by the Canadian electors.

While this measure did not include goods manufactured in Canada it was a step in the direction of danger which the people wisely refused to take. But Saskatchewan is not content to demand only wider markets. It wants free or freer trade. Can the Globe deny that the western farmer is not calling for free trade in the agricultural implements which he uses? If a binder, a plow, a wagon or a threshing machine is not a manufactured article what is?

By backing up the West in its demands the Globe places itself upon the wrong side of the trade question and its labored attempt to explain and submit a distinction without a difference must go for naught.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The striking English dock workers want Sam Gompers to assist them, but the American labor leader seems to have troubles enough of his own just at present.

Our George street contemporary not so long ago "roasted" the local administration of immigration affairs. Now that a change has been made, it raises the old cry of spoils. What does it want anyway?

The Examiner cannot make any reference whatever to the local Dominion representative without betraying the personal animus which pervades every article. Perhaps it is too much to expect the crushed head to have kindly feelings for the heel which has trodden upon it.

Stratford agreed to use power furnished by the Hydro-Electric Commission in the event of the installation of the street railway system. The city now asks the Provincial Government to release it from that agreement, but the request has been turned down. Furnishing light and power at cost as it does, the commission does not propose to go out of its way to establish a rival in any part of the field.

Latest Quotations in Grain Dairy Products, Live Stock Etc

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, July 23.—Anxiety on the part of shorts in grain, especially those whose contracts call for July delivery, brought about a rapid advance in that option to-day amounting at one time to 3⅝c for wheat, 3⅞c for corn, and 4⅝c for oats. Black rust is spreading, and the scantiness of the supply of fodder in store here was responsible. Cereals closed nervous all around, with wheat up 1⅝c to 2⅞c. net, corn at a rise of 1¼c. to 2⅞c. and oats lifted ½c to 4½c. The outcome in provisions varied from 15c decline to 7½c increase in cost.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ⅜d to ⅞d higher on wheat, and ⅝d higher on corn.

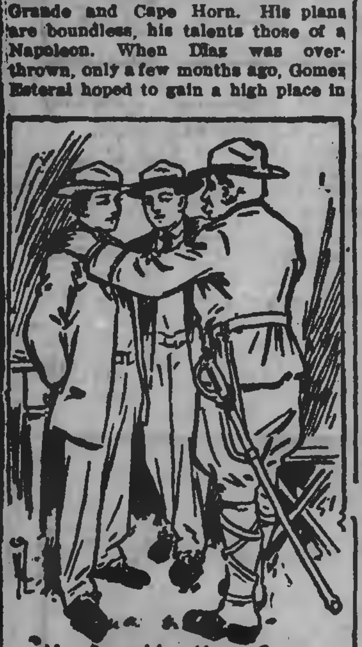
The Diamond Cipher

A Baseball Romance

BY W. A. PHELON

Copyright, 1912, by W. G. Chapman. Copyright in Canada and Great Britain.

"Gomez Esteral," said Colonel Lewis, "is probably the brainiest and most ambitious man between the Rio Grande and Cape Horn. His plans are boundless, his talents those of a Napoleon. When Diaz was overthrown, only a few months ago, Gomez Esteral hoped to gain a high place in the new government of Mexico—a position that would serve as a stepping-stone in his ambitions. Disappointed in this, he has been raising men for a new revolution, and the fighting which has already taken place between his men and the government forces has furnished the excuse for the cavalry's being stationed on the river, exactly as was the case when the insurrection against Porfirio Diaz broke out.



"YOU BOYS WILL MAKE GOOD SOLDIERS YET."

"If Gomez Esteral and the Mexican government were simply fighting out their troubles to a finish, there would be no special activity, either on the part of the United States or of any foreign powers. You probably thought it a little singular, didn't you, that there should be such marked interest shown in your messages and cipher code? Of course you did. If it had been merely a case of guarding a frontier, or maintaining an even break between the Mexican factions, neither Germany nor Japan would have cared a hoot in Halifax about you or the documents with which you had been entrusted."

"It does look that way, colonel," assented the wondering Solano.

"It so happens, however," resumed the colonel, "that the situation is one of far greater importance than a mere frontier campaign of idleness and scheming. Gomes Esteral has much greater ambitions than even the presidency of Mexico. He has for years been planning, plotting, working a net of fine wires all the way from Sonora to Chile, and his plans are nearly ripe. Some plans, too, believe me, lads."

"What are the gentleman's ambitions?" questioned the eager-faced Brockett. "Does he wish to be an emperor?"

"Perhaps," smiled the colonel, "but that would be merely an incidental. Gomez Esteral plans a confederation of all the Latin-American nations, with a united front and a central government—himself, of course, to be the head—and that united confederation is to offer its tremendous strength to the highest bidder, whether that bidder be Japan or Germany, for an alliance against the United States and the conquest of the nation!"

CHAPTER XXVII.

The boys sat half-dazed for several minutes, while the colonel's fierce old eyes twinkled above them. Then Solano spoke, slowly, measuring his words.

"Has Esteral made much progress with his plans?"

"Yes. Wonderful progress. The Latin-Americans in nearly every nation have accepted his propaganda blindly. They honestly believe that the United States, land-hungry, eager for conquest, intends sooner or later to annex and colonize the whole world of Mexico, Central and South America. Once president of Mexico, Esteral would consolidate his empire of 'mutual defense and vested rights' in less than two years. Then he would sell his alliance to Japan or Germany. Both are eager to gain his friendship, and both are making him tremendous offers. He is financing his revolution with Japanese and German gold. Japanese and German spies swarm all over this country, bribing, scheming, working to gain the secrets of defense and military policy. Japanese and German agents also try to block every avenue by which certain messages could be conveyed to Gomez Esteral. If those messages reach him I believe his dreams will be shocked into sudden awakening, and a great light will burst upon him."

"How—how do you mean, colonel?" Brockett questioned.

"Because"—and the old soldier's words fairly burned their way through the very souls of his young auditors—"because both Japan and Germany have every plan arranged by which Esteral is to be deceived, betrayed, and made a catspaw. Germany proposes, if the United States is crippled, to seize upon Brazil and make it the home of Prussia's overflowing millions. Japan already counts upon Sonora and Lower California as part of the Pacific empire which the mikado is to rule. These schemes are all matured, and the execution of the plans would be commenced as soon as the war was over. In other words, Gomez Esteral, dreaming of a great Latin nation, is to be awakened by the shock of finding himself the tool of a great land-grabbing conspiracy, and his new-formed nation the prey of Germany or of Japan."

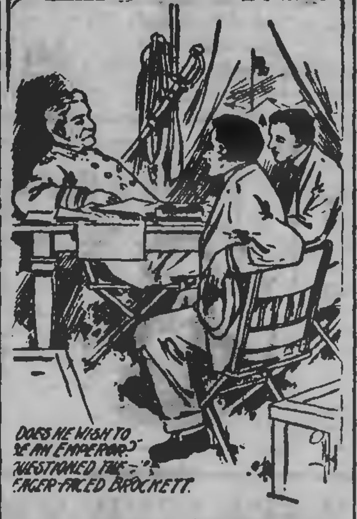
"You have quite a part to play," said the old soldier. "If I am not mistaken, the packet which you carry to Gomez Esteral contains not only the cipher code, and messages from the United States to Esteral, but absolutely irrefutable proofs of the Japanese and German treachery—proofs made out in the cipher code, but fully convincing to any man of ordinary intelligence. Esteral, I think, is a man of rather more than ordinary brains, and the evidence that will be set before him will give him a sudden shock and a complete awakening."

"I think I can understand now," said Brockett, "why so many attempts were made to rob us on the road."

"Exactly," concurred the colonel. "And now, boys, I have something else I entrust to your keeping—a little addition to the messages you must give Gomez Esteral. Here are some papers taken from your friend Baron Zollern—papers which were sent to me from Little Rock, with instructions to give them to you as soon as you reached me. They will pretty nearly clinch the case, so far as Esteral is concerned, as they contain notice to Baron Zollern that he will be appointed governor of a Brazilian province when everything has been properly adjusted. Rather foolish of the kaiser, don't you think? However that may be, here's the documents. Add them to whatever you already have in stock for Gomez Esteral, and start for Rancho Nogal whenever you feel so disposed. I can't even send a cavalry escort across the river with you—Esteral would take to the high grass if he saw a solitary trooper approaching. You will have to look out for yourselves and for the safety of your letters."

* * *

Under the rich light of the Mexican moon, two young horsemen rode the trail that leads to Rancho Nogal. Both boys could ride fairly well, though neither could lay claim to the skill of a cowboy, and the thoughtful old colonel had provided them with mounts. "If you can stick on your horses," said he, "it will shorten the distance to the Rancho, and may also carry you out of danger if anybody stops you on the way." Well-provided with directions, and with heavy cavalry revolvers buckled at their hips, the messengers set out on the last stage of their journey in royal spirits. Six troopers saw them safe across the Rio Grande, and dismissed them with waving of hats and urgent requests to be back in time for the deciding ball game. The group of friendly horsemen faded into spectres and then blended with the night; dark stretches of shadowy chaparral advanced its gloom in contest with the bright rays of the moon—and the boys, bearing missives whose vast importance they had never known till that same day rode onward through the dusk, mile after mile. They expected to make Rancho Nogal about daybreak, if all went smoothly—but the progress of these youngsters, somehow or other, never seemed to have much smoothness anywhere along its line.



"DOES HE WISH TO BE AN EMPEROR?" QUESTIONED THE EAGER-FACED BROCKETT.

Perhaps ten miles from the river, they encountered a slight rise in the road, and walked their horses slowly up the grade. Suddenly, as the moonrays fell upon the summit of the incline, a solitary horseman loomed up, huge and menacing in the shadows. Silent, grim and somber, he sat his horse five hundred feet beyond, and seemed to patiently await their coming.

"He doesn't look specially good to me, either," replied Solano. "Still, there are two of us, and there's only one of him—no, I'm mistaken. He is distinctly plural."

Three other mounted figures ranged up beside the first one, all equally grim and menacing in the moonlight. Brockett half turned his horse's head. Too late for a retreat—five more of the silent horsemen were slowly walking their mounts from the direction of the river. For one moment the messengers halted, irresolute, and then moved forward towards the watchers at the summit of the hill. Perhaps 200 feet further on, they came upon a cross-road—a mere thread of a trail breaking forth from dense undergrowth and midnight jungle. Instantly Brockett wheeled and plunged into the new-found trail, while Solano followed. They drove their horses to a gallop, and as they started on the dash for safety the silent horsemen, both before and behind the fugitives, came charging after. They gave no cry, they voiced no shout or threat, but the clatter of the hoofs and the clanging of accouterments made wild discord on the evening air. Down the thread-like trail, straining every nerve to increase their horses' speed, fled the messengers and, fast closing up the distance, the nine pursuing riders sped along behind.

A Generous Gift.

A valuable collection of Ontario plants has recently been presented to the department of botany of the University of Toronto by Principal William Scott of the Normal School, Toronto. There are about 5,000 sheets in all, thoroughly representative of the flora of certain parts of the province, particularly of the east and central south. This collection embodies the work of many years, done by Principal Scott during the recreation hours of his busy life. As Principal Scott is known to be a careful collector and a discriminating botanist, this latest contribution adds much to the working store of Ontario plants in the herbarium of the university.

Gypsy Jan

Her Prophecy and What Came of It.

By CONSTANCE D'ARCY MACKAY

Clayton struck off from the wood path he had been following to the main road. He had chosen the end of September for his vacation. Already summer was mellowing into autumn, the maples were tipped with yellow, and in the dark recesses of the woods sumac glowed with a color that was already flamelike. As he walked on either hand stretched fields of alternate stubble and green grass, starred here and there by patches of goldenrod or slender purple asters. Fall sounds were in the air. Late crickets chirped. Crows cawed across the fences. Bits of thistledown floated lazily in the morning sunlight. Except for occasional farmhouses standing by the way or a passing team, the road was deserted, and Clayton was musing pleasantly on its solitude when an unexpected turn past a clump of trees brought him upon a camp of gypsies. He went forward with quickened interest.

They had pitched their tents in a little hollow through which a stream ran in the background stood a canvas covered wagon and a half dozen lean tethered horses. In the foreground smoldered the ashes of a fire. Round this clustered a few half naked children and some wrinkled crones with huge gilt earrings in their ears.

The men of the camp had evidently gone foraging, nor were the women slow to turn a penny, for one of them called out to Clayton that she would tell his fortune. Clayton shook his head impatiently and went on. If he had it told at all it must be by some young, black eyed girl, such a one as he saw approaching half a mile beyond the camp, a tall, lithe creature, who walked with the grace of those accustomed to the open. She wore a red skirt, a white blouse falling away from her throat and caught with a bit of dull yellow that matched her girdle. One sleeve was torn, and her arm showed through, dusky and rounded. Her dark hair was twisted with what looked to be scarlet beads, but which upon nearer inspection proved to be rose fruit strung on grass.

"The princess of her tribe," thought Clayton.

She was playing with a curious dagger that she held and did not see him till he accosted her. Then she looked up, startled.

"Will you tell my fortune?" he queried, smiling, and held out his hand.

"When it has been crossed with silver," she answered, her black eyes gleaming.

"The life line is deep," she went on quickly. "You have made your way so far, for you are ambitious and hardworking. You do not come from Brierley village nor from the country round here. You are from the city. You are nearly thirty and unmarried. Do I read true?" she asked, with a swift upward glance.

"Quite true," said Clayton amusedly.

"No woman has touched your heart, but there is one who soon will."

"Dark or fair?"

"Dark—and very wealthy. You will see her this afternoon at 4 o'clock."

"Well, I'm glad I'm warned," said Clayton, with a laugh. "How long have you been here?" nodding in the direction of the camp.

She shrugged her shoulders.

"How can I tell? A few days—a week maybe. We gypsies do not measure time."

"And what is your name?"

"Jan," she answered, turning on her heel with the indifference of a queen. Now that she had told his fortune, she seemed anxious to be gone.

"A mercenary young wretch, like the rest of them," murmured Clayton, looking after her.

That afternoon he strolled toward the village. The season was over, and most of the large hotels were closed. So were the handsome private cottages, save a few whose owners preferred the luxury of solitude.

Arden, the summer home of Alyard, the copper king, was still open, Miss Alyard, it was said, caring more for her stables and kennels than for society.

As Clayton passed it, admiring its green lawn and well kept flower beds, a smart trap came down the driveway. In it sat a girl dressed in white. Clayton could not see her face, for she held a lace parasol to screen her eyes, but he liked the patrician poise of her head. As they rattled past him with a gay clanging of silver harness the coachman turned in answer to some question.

"It's exactly 4 o'clock, Miss Alyard," he said deferentially.

Clayton started and then laughed at himself for being foolish enough to mind a gypsy's prophecy. And yet—the prospect was alluring—a rich wife and money to pursue his studies in Paris untrammeled, for, though Clayton's name was beginning to be known in the world of architecture, it had been hard fighting every step of the way. Even now he was not free from financial difficulties, and instead of putting up at the luxurious country club which was still open to visitors he was housed in a farm at the village outskirts.

But, whether the gypsy had read his fate truly or not, there was something tantalizing and mysterious about her prophecy, and next day he went again to the camp. Jan was nowhere in sight. In vain he questioned the old hag who had offered to tell his fortune the day before. She declared there was no such person and called on a swarthy devil-may-care young fellow who lounged close by to confirm her in what she said.

"No," he reiterated. "No Jan is here."

It was useless to argue, and Clayton turned homeward with a feeling of defeat, when, perched on a fence near where he had first seen her, he espied Jan.

"I've been to find you at the camp," he said, "and they told me there was no such person."

"They told you that?" She threw back her head, and her brown throat shook with laughter.

"And there was a young fellow there who looked as if he would like to murder me."

"You mean Zingare? He is terribly jealous. The least thing puts him in a passion. That is why he pretended not to know where I was."

"And where were you?"

"Out in the woods at the edge of the hill to see the sunrise. It was like a campfire burning behind the trees." She was as voluble as she had been reticent before, and, vaulting up on the fence beside her, Clayton sat and talked till noon.

It was only when he reached his farmhouse that he remembered that he had meant to ask her about his future, and she had bewitched him so that he had forgotten it. The next two days it rained, and on the third he found the gypsy camp deserted. A charred spot marked the place where their fires had been, and that was all. They had vanished as silently as they had come.

And no one seemed to know what trail had been taken. Clayton was disappointed to the verge of moodiness. Try as he would, he could not drive Jan from his thoughts. Now he pictured her walking down the road, erect and graceful; now he fancied her crouching by the fire at night and probably with Zingare opposite, a thought which made him grind his teeth. Again and again Miss Alyard passed him in her high red cart, but he would not so much as turn to look. What were all the heiresses in the world compared to what he had lost?

In a crisp twilight as he wandered down the road some one stole up behind him and touched his arm.

"Jan!" he cried joyfully. "It's you! Where have you been? I've searched and searched. Perhaps"—he frowned—"perhaps you and Zingare"—

"Zingare!" Her voice was full of scorn.

"You do not love him?"

"No!" contemptuously.

"Then, Jan, will you marry me?"

"I, a gypsy? But your people—your friends"—

"Confound my friends! I love you!"

"Even if you find that I've deceived you as only some gypsies know how to deceive? At first, when you mistook me in my Hungarian walking costume, it was a joke—telling your fortune and then driving past you afterward—and then I meant to tell you I was Clorinda Alyard and I couldn't. I couldn't because I wanted to see if you'd care for me and not for anything else. And you do love me?" It was the girl and not the heiress who spoke.

"More than my life," said Clayton.

They are called the eccentric Claytons because people sometimes meet them in the woods, walking together, hand in hand, laughing like children, she in a curious red and yellow costume and he in a blue flannel suit decidedly the worse for wear.

AT RESIDENCE OF MR. A. O. FISKE

The Astronomical Society "At Home" Under Delightful Auspices.

Tuesday evening the handsome residence and grounds of Mr. H. O. Fiske, McDonnel St., was, through the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. Fiske, the scene of a gathering of members and friends of the local branch of the Royal Astronomical Society, the Society being At Home during the evening. The grounds were brightly illuminated with colored electrics and presented a gay and charming appearance. Mr. and Mrs. Fiske received the guests, assisted by Lieut.-Co.. and Mrs. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Schneider and Misses Ada and Ethel Miller.

On the lawn was placed the large telescope of the Society and also the fine instrument presented by Mr. J. R. Stratton, a gift at once being useful and most highly appreciated. The instruments were to afford an opportunity of viewing our nearest neighbor, the moon, but that familiar luminary coyly hid behind the clouds, affording only occasional glimpses. This proceeding on the part of the moon, was not nice, and members feel that they should transfer their patronage to some other moon, more considerate and accommodating.

An hour was spent on the lawn and afterwards, in the residence, an informal meeting was held with Dr. Marsh, the secretary of the Society, in the chair. Mr. Fiske, is president, but being also the host of the evening he was barred from taking the chair.

Miss Florence Scott sang a charming song, and Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P., Mr. W. A. Logan, Mr. D. Easson, Mr. F. H. Dobbin, Dr. Eastwood and Mr. Wm. Madill, spoke briefly. Occasion was taken to refer to Mr. Fiske's connection with the Society and the many services he had rendered from time to time. It is well known, and appreciated, that his services are always at command at the lectures, contributing much to the interest with his lantern slides and care of such matters. Mr. Fiske is a most useful citizen, and he is highly esteemed for his invariable helpfulness and good nature.

After the program, refreshments were served, Hooper being the caterer. The collation was dainty and afforded a pleasant half-hour of social intercourse. Those who received invitations availed themselves of the opportunity and the gathering numbered quite so many as to fill the residence and grounds. The Society acknowledges its indebtness to Mr. and Mrs. Fiske for a very enjoyable evening.

AT THE SEASIDE

One of the greatest drawing cards of New London, the popular sea-side resort of the Grand Trunk and Central Vermont Railways, so favorably situated on the coast of Connecticut is the annual visit of one or more of "Uncle Sam's" splendid battle-ships. Visitors there this week were delighted then at the arrival from Newport of no less than three floating leviathans, the "Ohio, the "Missouri," and the "Mississippi" as this means largely increased social activiteis of a pleasantly informal kind. These three ships were preceded by four torpedo boat destroyers last week, the "Preston" "Flusser" "Reed and "Lamson' and will be succeeded by four other ships, the "Delaware" "Utah" "Presrida," and "Michigan." It is understood that battleships will make New London their head-quarters for the remainder of the summer; each division of the North Atlantic Squadron having one week on duty and one off while the annual manoeuvres are in progress. The division at present anchored in harbor is under Rear Admiral, N. R. Usher.

THE BLESSING OF MOTHERHOOD

Healthy Mothers and Children Make Happy Homes

Motherhood is woman's highest sphere in life. It is the fruition of her dearest hopes and greatest desires; yet thousands of noble women through some derangement have been denied this blessing.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong. This is evidenced by the following letters which are genuine and truthful:

London, Ont.—"I wish to thank you for the benefit I received by taking your famous medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Before my baby was born I was so ill I could not stand long or walk any distance. I had to lie down nearly all the time. After I took your medicine I felt like a new woman. I could work from morning till night and was happy and well. I certainly think it relieves pain at childbirth and recommend it to every woman who is pregnant. You may use this testimonial if you like. It may help some other woman."—Mrs. FRANK CORRIN, 132 Adelaide St., London, Ont.

Brooklyn, N.Y.—"I was ailing all the time and did not know what the matter was. I wanted a baby but my health would not permit it. I was nervous, my side ached and I was all run down. I heard that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was good and took the medicine. I have now a beautiful baby and your Compound has helped me in every way."—Mrs. J. J. STEWART, 299 Humboldt St., Brooklyn, N.Y.

Peterboro and Victoria counties will unite in asking the Dominion and Provincial Governments for a new bridge to replace the floating structure, across Pigeon Creek, which connects the two counties and which is now considered unsafe, as the under timbers are rotting away.

Warden James Steele, County Councilors J. J. Devitt, J. A. Michael, A. E. Bottom and I. Fee, of Victoria County, visited Peterboro for a conference with members of the county and city councils, and the result of the meeting was the decision to ask for a new bridge, in the interests of public safety. The danger at present is increased owing to the fact that Government waters have been recently raised considerably, in the locality.

Deputations will be sent to Ottawa and Toronto to urge upon both Governments, the counties' claim for a new bridge.

DESPERADO POINTED REVOLVER AT SPECIAL OFFICER PINCHIN

The Officer Had an Exciting Struggle Before Handcuffing His Prisoner—Young Man Charged With Theft.

Many a Nick Carter episode would look tame compared with the scuffle and narrow escape from death experienced last night by Special C.P.R. Detective Pinchin. The alert officer peered into the face of a fully loaded 38 calibre revolver, flourished by a desperate looking foreigner, giving his name as Flynn Brosevicky, apparently and Austrian. Detective Pinchin is convinced that he had a narrow shave, and is felicitating himself on a certainly miraculous escape.

DREW REVOLVER.

While on his rounds the officer came upon the body of a man lying prostrate on the tracks. He was ordered to get up and became very angry. An altercation immediately started during which the man whipped out a revolver and pointed it directly into the detective's face. Although surprised, the officer closed with him and the two grappled, the former striving to disarm his man. He succeeded in knocking or twisting the gun from his hand and immediately drew his own gun. The man was overpowered and the officer after some difficulty succeeded in slipping on the bracelets and taking him into custody.

In police court this morning he was charged with carrying a pistol on the C.P.R. tracks and was remanded until Friday, July 26th.

Acting Magistrate S. R. Armstrong presided.

CHARGED WITH THEFT.

A young man this morning was charged with stealing a watch. He told the Magistrate that he was suffering from a nervous affliction, and his limbs and features twitched convulsively while standing.

"Booze is his worst trouble just now," said the Chief.

"Too many cigarettes, I believe," remarked Crown Prosecutor Wood.

He was remanded until Friday.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL WILL BE COMPLETED IN THREE YEARS

Plans and Specifications Are About Ready for Great Waterway.

The plans, and specifications for the Canal through to Georgian Bay, are understood to be about completed. The contracts will be let this Autumn. This means that the Trent Valley Canal will be open from end to end, inside of three years.

The works at the upper end of the canal, are not so difficult as at the lower end, which are about completed.

The canal, will, in all probability, be an eight foot canal, as it is understood that the Minister is desirous of making this great waterway worth the money it has cost the people.

"Did you ever notice how much more refreshing Kuntz's Original Lager is than ordinary lagers?" remarked a man to a friend, as they were enjoying a bottle the other day. "Yes," replied his friend, who, by the way, was a physician, "and the reason is because Kuntz's Original Lager is brewed from naturally pure spring water, instead of ordinary or city waters which require to be artificially or chemically purified."

CRAVATH WINS

A SERIES OF TEN STORIES BY JOHN T. McINTYRE

COPYRIGHT 1912 BY THE NORTH AMERICAN CO.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING STORIES

CRAVATH is an athletic young fellow in search of $1000. The quest for the coin leads him to a gilded cafe, where he can most readily get rid of his sole remaining cash. Luck favors, however, and he meets his Boswell, the narrator of his subsequent adventures, in the person of a good-natured promoter of athletic sports named Scanlon. It so happens that the latter is in the dumps. His "white hope," a mammoth specimen of stonemason that he had matched to fight the "Gravedigger" at the Pelican Athletic Club, has decided not to risk having his beauty spoiled in the ring. The purse is $1000 and as that is just the amount Cravath needs, he agrees to be a "substitute." It seems that the thousand is the price of a certain old pistol belonging to a Miss Betterton, then in Europe, with whom Cravath is in love. When he recovers it, he gets the girl. She wants the pistol because it is her sole and only claim to aristocratic lineage. One of her ancestors used it when he [illegible] a gentleman in a duel, so it is proof positive that the ancestor was a gentleman.

When Cravath enters the ring, he goes after the thousand as rapidly as possible—in the first place, because he needs the money, and in the second, because he is not in trim to stand a long fight. The "Gravedigger" goes down, and the "white hope's" substitute walks away with the coin.

Next day the papers are full of the sensation—an aristocratic amateur has entered the professional ranks and pounded the other fellow for what there is in it. Most scandalized of all are "Old Blaylow" and his son, who are intent upon taking Miss Betterton and her money into their family. Blaylow calls upon Cravath at his suburban home, to induce him to give up his claims to the young woman, but without avail. In the afternoon, however, Cravath is obliged to call up Scanlon and impart the information that the thousand has been stolen. Suspicion, of course, attaches to Blaylow. In the night the two repair to Blaylow's house, where the money is supposed to be hidden in a Venetian cabinet. Unfortunately, another has taken up the quest before them, and he gets away with the money. Not to be outdone, they pursue the thief and rob him, regaining the stolen money.

Still determined, "Old Blaylow" induces a racing man, who is the worse for wear, to borrow Cravath's thousand to bet on one of his superannuated thoroughbreds. But Scanlon gets on to the game in time, and substitutes a live horse, so that the money is not lost.

Next the two buy the pistol. But Cravath is visited at his home by a beautiful woman, a sister of young Blaylow, who palms a bogus weapon off on him. The men suspect, however, that the dealer has "done" both parties, so they visit him and bluff him into disgorging the genuine firearm.

Taking another tack, the Blaylows endeavor to have the real pistol stolen by a Swedish butler, whom they "plant" in Cravath's home, but the plot is discovered, barely in time.

A cleverer plot is next hatched. Cravath is requested to show the curious old pistol to an antiquarian friend who has been hurt in an automobile accident and cannot leave his house. When Cravath lays it on a table, there is a mysterious upset, the antiquarian is bowled over and the pistol is gone. Again Cravath and Scanlon suspect that a butler has been subsidized. They force him to admit it, and get the pistol from young Blaylow, who has taken it and hidden in a recess behind a Venetian panel.

VII.—The Adventure of the Lonely House

ON THE evening of the seventh day I also dined with Cravath, and during the course of the meal he seemed more than usually light hearted. Finally, I inquired as to the cause.

He considered a little and then began to smile.

"I hadn't known that I was in noticeable spirits," said he. "But, since you mention it, I realize that I am. And, I suppose, my mother is the cause of it."

"Your mother?" said I.

He nodded.

"I am just like the little boy we all know—made happy by the return of my mother," said he.

"Oh, she has returned then?"

He shook his head.

"Not here. But she is now with some friends at Croyden Park."

He took out a letter.

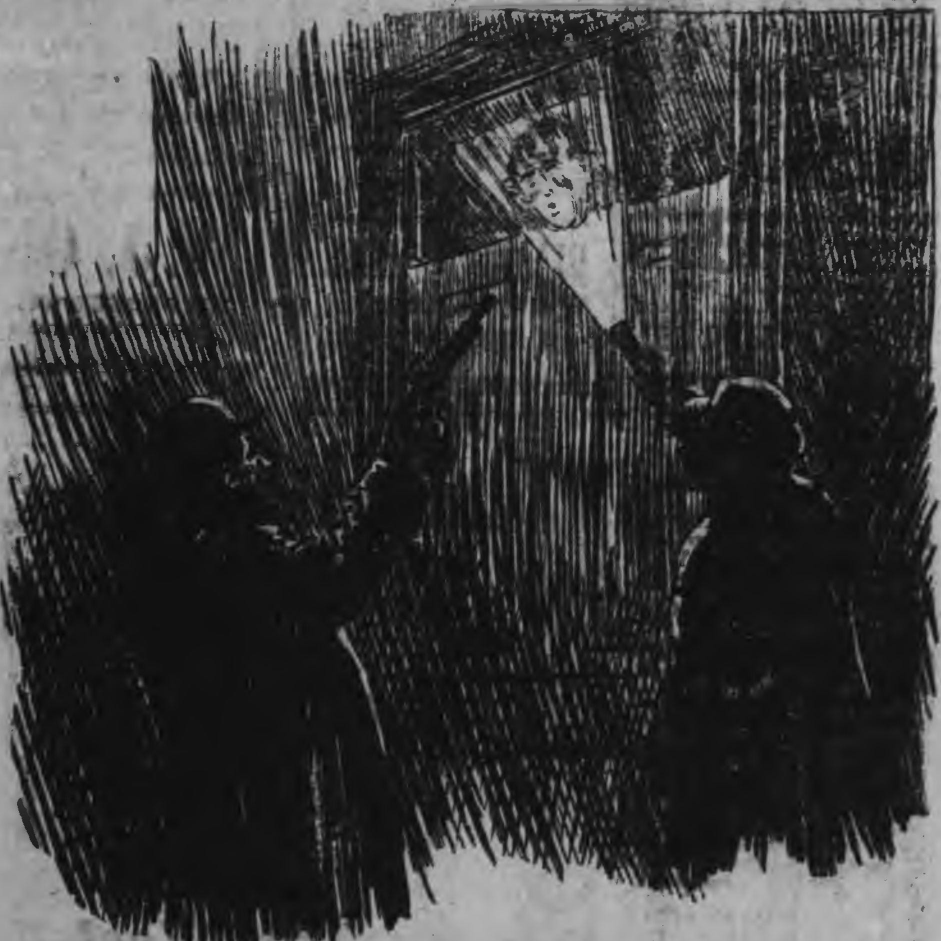
"I got this this morning," said he, and then read:

"Croyden Park.

"My Dear James—I had been no more than two days with Amy when I had a letter from poor little Mary Croyden. Her husband has been called away to Mexico this time—to look into some mining interests, and she was, except for the servants, alone in this great house. So I packed at once and came to her. I shall be here for a week, perhaps. Run up and see us, there's a good boy."

"Croyden Park, eh?" said I. "I've heard of that place."

"About three miles beyond the city line," said Cravath. "The Croydens own the whole section—the town, the farms and everything about them, from the churches to the blacksmith shop. And they are all models of their kind, as modern and as scientific as they can stick."



"Cravath produced the Betterton flintlock and pointed it at his head"

"That is a very excellent thing to do with surplus money," said I. "Somehow, I admire these efforts at improved living and working. They are the sanest notes of the time. I would like to see Croyden Park."

"Well," said he, "I suppose, then, we had better postpone our little run up there until tomorrow."

"Had we meant to go tonight?" I asked.

"We had. You see, I was anxious to see my mother; also, I was anxious to have her see you."

"Then we shall go tonight," decided I. "My view of Croyden Park by day can wait."

"Good enough," said he.

All the way on the train he talked about his mother with the enthusiasm of a lover; when we left the coach at Croyden Park Station he still held to the subject devotedly. The station was a beautiful little place of brick, stone and tile; the roads leading to it were lighted by incandescent lights. There was a public carryall awaiting business, but Cravath said:

"The house is only twenty minutes away and the road is of wood blocks. Let's walk."

This suggestion pleased me, for the night was a brisk, enlivening one.

"I have been here only once before," said my friend, as we started off, "but I know that the house stands back some distance from the road among a growth of trees. It's only about ten years old, but its surroundings make it look a hundred."

The fine road seemed to spring under our feet; the lights along the road sparkled like stars; never did I swing along with greater enjoyment, never did I feel more confident or thoroughly at ease. And then I was spilled from the heights.

"I wish," said Cravath, "that the old-time craftsmen had put less material in their productions."

"Why?" I asked, with comfortable curiosity.

"Because," said he, "this confounded pistol wouldn't be so hard to carry."

I stopped in my tracks, appalled and clammy.

"Have you the pistol with you?" I asked.

"Yes," replied he, easily.

I was still casting about for a remark of sufficient strength to cover the situation when I heard a chuckle; we both turned, and a few paces away, under the rays of one of the lamps, we beheld a man.

"Hello," said I, startled.

He nodded, with a wide smile, his elbows upon a low stone wall and his lean chin resting in his palms.

"Nice night, ain't it?" said he.

"I guess it'll do," I replied.

We approached him and he stood erect. He was very tall and very lean; his face was long, like that of a horse, and his ears stood out from a small round head.

"Sort of browsing around, eh?" said I. This was meant to be a lead that would draw a counter; but he merely replied:

"Yes." And then he smiled with much content.

"Work hereabouts, I suppose?" suggested I.

He nodded.

"I do a little now and then," chuckled he. "Not a great deal, but a little."

The attitude of the stranger was an aggravation; what my further procedure would have been is a problem; but Cravath plucked me by the sleeve.

"How far is it to Mrs. Croyden's?" asked he.

"A little more than half a mile," replied the man, nodding his head and smiling at the top of his bent.

"Thank you," said Cravath; and with his hand still upon my arm we went on our way. When we got out of earshot, I said:

"There is a gentleman who is properly mysterious, and he also possesses the dramatic instinct in no small degree. He selected the time and place with a practiced judgment."

"Seemed a bit like an idiot to me," said Cravath. "But," and I noticed a surprised side glance at me, "why so short of temper? I detected in your tone a something which the lady novelists of another day called asperity."

"It is a weak word," said I, "and does scant justice to my feelings."

"I may be wrong," said he, "but I think I detect something personal in both your bearing and your voice."

"You are not wrong," I assured him. "There is quite a bit of personal feeling stored away within me. The plain fact of the matter is that if you were some years younger I would spank you."

"Why?"

"In the face of all that has gone before, you place that which is most valuable to you in danger. The events of the last half dozen days and nights have apparently taught you nothing. Once again you stand upon the verge of an experience; and once again the Betterton pistol is in a position to be grabbed at by the first enterprising crook that happens along."

"Dear friend," said Cravath, soothingly, "the adventures which we have shared have made you unduly nervous. Brace up! There is no danger at all. We are only going to call on my mother."

"Last night there was no danger either, I suppose. Then, we only went to call on your old, old friend, the professor. But you know what happened."

He seemed rather impressed by this. However, he still scouted all notion of danger.

"Last night's affair," said he, "was planned by a parcel of rascals."

"And tonight's may have been arranged by worse. That fellow back there by the wall promises well; did you notice the pleasure he got out of the mere sight of us? His chuckle, when you answered my question about the pistol, held as much information for me as a book."

"It is a fine thing," said Cravath, "to have a friend who has one's interests so at heart. But in this you have been carried away by your feelings. The thing is impossible: for how could that fellow have been aware that I [illegible] my mother tonight?"

"If your mother had written you, I'd say that, too," said I.

I heard him catch his breath at this and felt triumphant.

"What's that?" he asked.

"Your mother had nothing to do with the letter asking you to come out here tonight," I told him. "It's another frame-up."

There was a distinct pause, and then Cravath laughed.

"You have a singularly inventive mind," said he, "and if I were not quite sure as to the handwriting of the note I might be a little disturbed."

"You are quite sure of that, then?"

"I am positive. There can be no mistake."

This was a flush hit dealt my suspicions, but I was not entirely bereft of a subject for discussion.

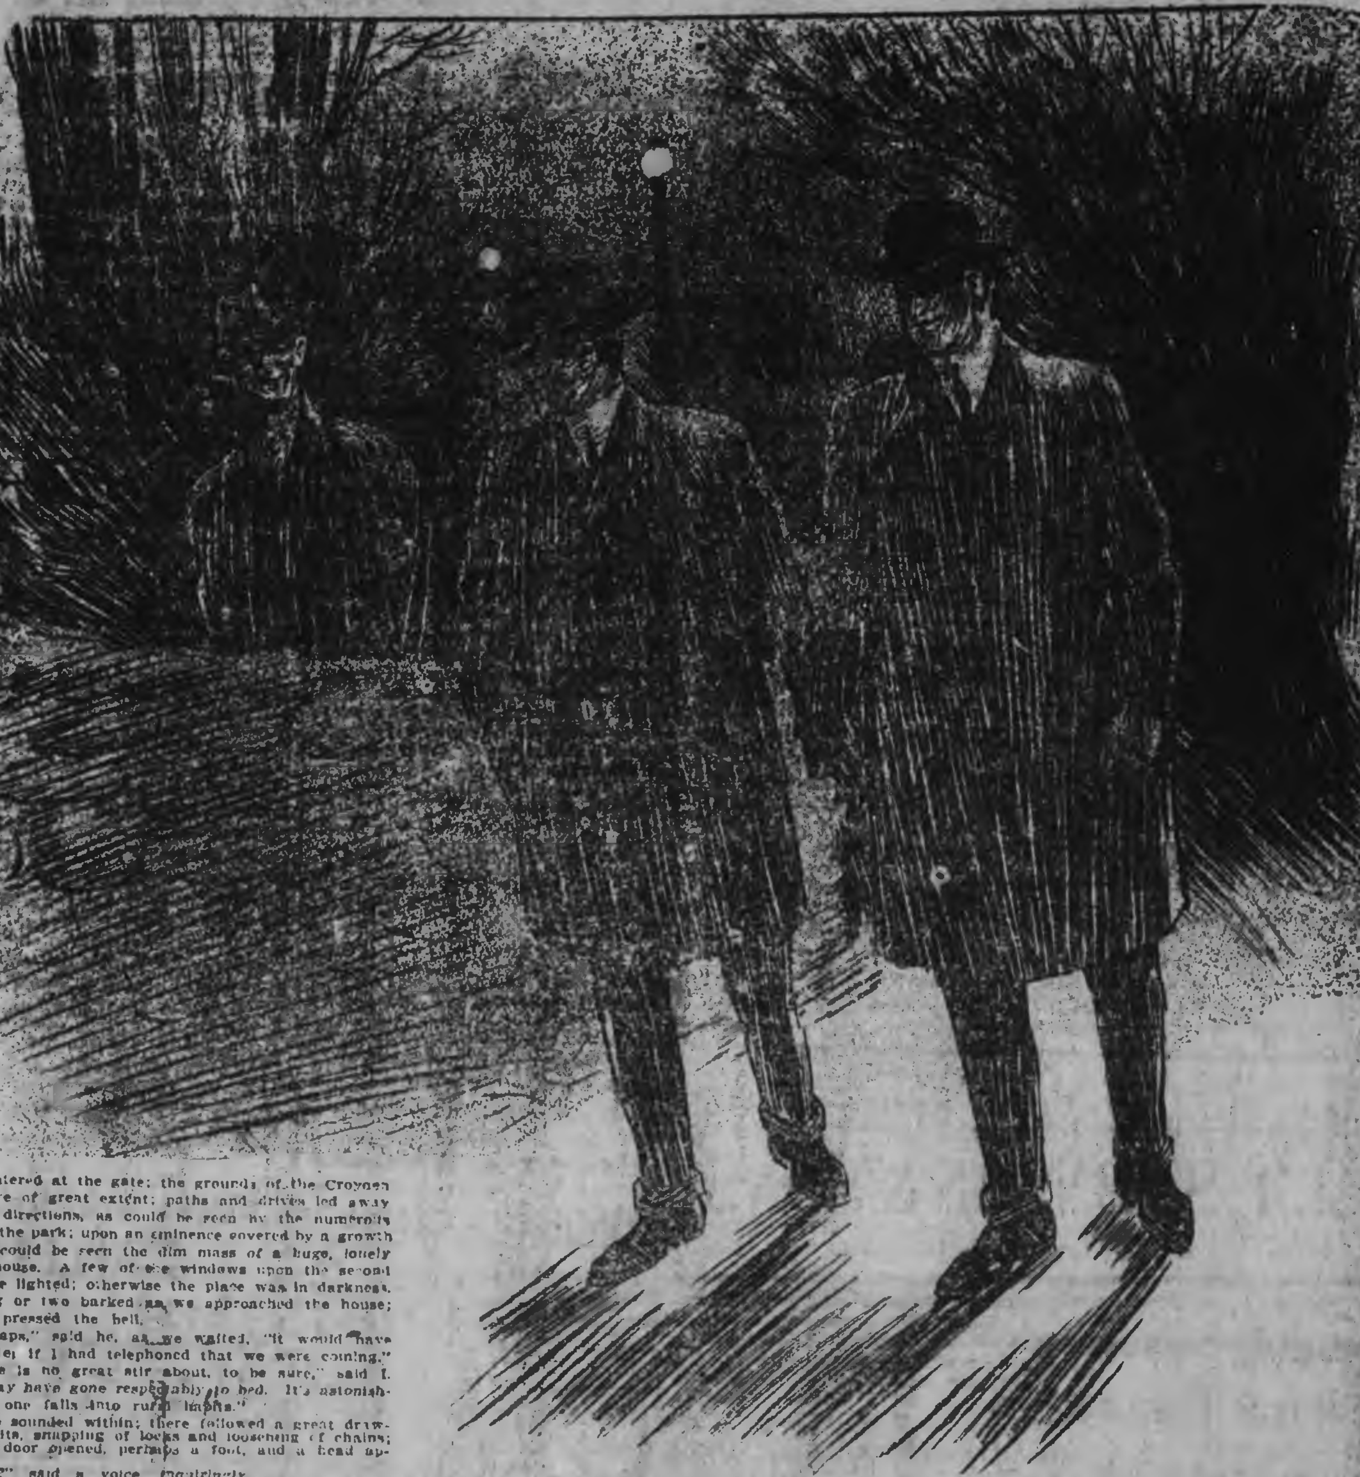
"Let us say that you are right, though I am far from being convinced," said I. "What excuse is the genuineness of the note for your lugging the Betterton flintlock out here with you?"

"None at all," said Cravath. "The note has nothing to do with it. I can explain my having the weapon with me by saying that the struggle for its possession has grown so acute that I no longer trust it out of my reach. I now carry it with me wherever I go."

"Oh," said I, "I see."

A few moments later, while I was still pondering the above, we came to a huge iron gate set in the wall.

"Here we are," said Cravath. "And," pointing, "there is the house up there upon the hill."



"'There is a gentleman who is properly mysterious'"

We entered at the gate; the grounds of the Croyden place were of great extent; paths and drives led away in many directions, as could be seen by the numerous lights in the park; upon an eminence covered by a growth of trees could be seen the dim mass of a huge, lonely looking house. A few of the windows upon the second floor were lighted; otherwise the place was in darkness.

A dog or two barked as we approached the house; Cravath pressed the bell.

"Perhaps," said he, as we waited, "it would have been better if I had telephoned that we were coming."

"There is no great stir about, to be sure," said I. "They may have gone respectably to bed. It's astonishing how one falls into rural habits."

A step sounded within; there followed a great drawing of bolts, snapping of locks and loosening of chains; then the door opened, perhaps a foot, and a head appeared.

"Well?" said a voice, inquiringly.

"This is Mrs. Croyden's?" asked Cravath.

"It is," said the voice, and there was an accompanying chuckle that had so familiar a sound that my quieted nerves arose all but full armed and bristling. Before another word could be spoken I produced a match and scratched it upon the wall and held it toward the head. Cravath and I recognized the long face, the small head and protruding ears, simultaneously.

"Hello," said Cravath, astonished, "it's you, is it?"

The long-faced man grinned widely and nodded his head through the opening.

"Yes," said he, "it's me."

Then he seemed to wag his lean chin in enjoyment of the situation, while he eyed us quizzically. As he showed no disposition to take the chain off the door, Cravath requested:

"Will you please say to Mrs. Croyden that I am here?"

The man withdrew his head for a moment. To this day I am not quite sure, but I fancied that I heard him whisper to some one who stood with him in the hall. Then came the clinking of the chain and the door swung wide.

"Will you step in?" asked the tall man. We did so. He locked the door elaborately, then started along the hall. "If you will be so good as to follow me, gentlemen," said he, "I'll make you comfortable."

Did I notice him leering at us out of the corner of his eye as he cast a glance at us over his shoulder? Perhaps it was imagination; but, at any rate, that is what I thought I saw, and the sight did not please me. I nudged Cravath:

"I'm liking that fellow less every minute," I told him in a whisper. "There is something about him that arouses my resentment."

He grinned.

"You have a specially well-oiled imagination," he informed me, in the same low tone. "You ought to be in something having to do with finance."

"Call it what you like," said I as we climbed the stairs after the man, "the fact remains that it is there. If I followed my inclinations at this moment I'd take these steps three at a time, get that fellow by the neck and make him tell all about it."

"All about what?" asked Cravath.

"Just wait a little," I replied. "You'll see."

The long-faced man opened a door on the second floor.

"If you will step in here," said he, "I will speak to Mrs. Croyden."

The room was dark, save for what light the single lamp far down the hall threw into it. We entered without hesitation; then the door slapped behind us. No sooner had the sound struck my ears than I leaped toward it. But it was too late. The door was fast and we were trapped.

Cravath struck a match; its dim flickering light showed us that the room was bare; there was not a stick of furniture, not a rug, not a picture.

"Hello," said Cravath, astonished. "What's all this?"

"It looks like taps for us," said I. Here the match went out and we once more stood in darkness. "I knew from the moment I set eyes on that fellow down the road that this Croyden Park thing was a 'plant.'"

"Oh, I say!" spoke Cravath, but there was only faint denial in his tone.

"Lombroso warns us to beware of the man whose ears stick out like those of the jackass rabbit," said I. "And even the least observant could have told you that neither religion, morals nor ethics have an abiding place in a head shaped like a doorknob."

Here a thin ray of light shot from the transom above the hall door; waveringly it illumined Cravath's face and then my own.

"Gentlemen," said a voice from behind the source of the light, "I trust that you are comfortable."

It was the man with the failings which I had just enumerated; we could not see him, but the tones of his voice were readily recognizable. It was Cravath who answered him.

"May I inquire," asked my friend, "why we have been treated in this summary fashion in the house of friends?"

The light shifted to his face and remained there. The effect was rather weird. It was as though a stream of light sprang from the darkness above the door, crossed a space of some dozen feet and splashed into the face of Cravath. All else was in darkness.

At the words of the young man there came a chuckling from behind the light, and then the unseen replied:

"I am sorry, indeed, to place any person of enterprise at a disadvantage. Your surroundings reflect no great credit upon the hospitality of the house. But your present situation is up to yourselves altogether. As a matter of fact, you need remain there no longer than you see fit."

With the light still streaming in his face, Cravath considered.

"I think," spoke he, finally, "I get an undertone of meaning in that saying. To bring our—shall we call it imprisonment—to a close, there is something which we must do."

Again came the chuckle; never in my life have I been more aggravated by a sound than I was by this; noiselessly I crept nearer to the door; the stream of light still held to Cravath and it was impossible for any one to detect my movements.

"From the first," said the unseen behind the light, "I have admired your enterprise, but your discernment of perception, I must confess, has received scant praise. However, I now take all that back. I now see that you have not only perception, you have instinct; one who recognizes a desire through a subtone in another's voice must have."

"You are very kind," said Cravath; "but this is scarcely the time for compliments. Let us approach the necessary things as speedily as we may. What is this thing which you demand of us?"

"Along with other rare qualities," spoke the long-faced man through the darkness, "I am delighted to find that of directness in you. It is a privilege to have met you, sir."

Cravath blinked in the direction of the voice; I could see by his expression that he was fast approaching my own condition of mind with regard to the unseen; but he controlled himself sufficiently to say:

"But the demand—what is it that we are to do?"

"There is in your possession," answered the man, "a pistol, I believe. Before we come to any other subject, I would request that you pass this weapon through the transom."

He had just pronounced this last word when I, from my position at the door, sprang upward and snatched the light from him. It was a good-sized electric torch, and instantly I turned it on him. At the same moment Cravath produced the Betterton flintlock and pointed it at his head. A cry of dismay came from the man; there then followed a crash, as though his support, whatever it was, failed him, and he disappeared from the open transom with a promptness that drew a shout of laughter from us both.

"That fellow," gasped Cravath, finally, "has a genuine talent as a comedian. What a pity he neglected it and took up off-side gumshoe work."

Our situation, however, was of greater moment to me than the long-faced man's accomplishments, and my amusement was briefer than Cravath's.

"Let's get out of this," said I.

The door being locked, my first thought was the windows; these, however, had an ornamental iron grating securely fastened upon the outside.

"Well?" asked I, turning to Cravath.

"There should be some action by the legislature against imitating prisons," said he. "It is not only unlovely, but it is inconvenient." Taking the torch from my hand, he shot the light about; finally it rested upon the transom above the hall door. "That is our way out," said he.

In a moment we had formed our plan. Bracing myself against the door, I gave Cravath a "boost"; then he reached down and drew me partly up. I stood balanced upon the door handle while he slipped through the opening into the hall; then I followed, and we stood in the now dark hall, flashing our light here and there.

"There's the stairs," said Cravath. "We might go down that way, but my recollection of the miscellaneous fastenings of the front door makes it all but hopeless as a way out."

"There are other ways," said I. "All the windows can't be barred."

We started down the stairs, I leading the way with the light; at one turning there was a tall clock which ticked with loud monotony; we were passing this when the torch was knocked from my hand. I heard it go rolling down the steps, the broken glass tinkling as it went; then there was a sudden struggle behind me, Cravath ripped out an oath, and the stairrail cracked under a heavy fall. Then racing feet went madly up the dark staircase.

"Cravath!" I called. But there was no answer save the stamping of feet through empty halls and up flights of stairs, the sharp concussion of closing doors and the flinging of them open immediately after. And when I had recovered from my surprise the cause of it all was plain enough.

"They were waiting here at the turn of the stairs," I reasoned. "Knocking the light out of my hand, they leaped upon Cravath, snatched the pistol from him and made away with it." The sound of sharply closing doors and running feet were still to be heard upon the upper floors. "It's like the clown being pursued through a trick house by a comedy policeman," I told myself, as I listened. "And it wouldn't surprise me a bit to have the harlequin jump out of the big clock and fetch me one with his wand."

I waited for some fresh developments. The sounds of flight and pursuit now came entirely from the third floor; and so long continued were they that I finally made up my mind that I was needed there to help round up the pursued. I had started on my way up the remainder of the first flight when there came the sharp, aggressive bark of a revolver from the upper regions, followed by another and another. Holding my breath, I paused and listened for what was to follow. The sounds of pursuit ceased with the last shot. After a pause I heard a door softly open and close, a step sounded in the hall on the third floor and then upon the stairs, a careful step, firm but cautious, the step of a man who knew there was danger to be faced and was willing to face that which was necessary, but no more.

Steadily it descended until it reached the second floor; here there was a pause, as though the unseen were scanning his surroundings; then the step came down the hall, a hand passed along the wall as though feeling for the handrail; then firmly, slowly, cautiously, the descent of the last flight was begun.

It would be impossible for me to tell of all the wild imaginings that filled my mind at that moment. But above everything else I clung to the hypothesis that the pistol shots meant that Cravath was stretched out upon the upper floor with a bullet in him and that his murderer was now seeking me to repeat the performance. I began a search of my pockets for a weapon, knowing very well that I should find none. The feet sounded upon a step only two removed from that upon which I stood. I braced myself for a spring, my hands outstretched to clutch at the other's throat.

Then a match scratched, and with a great wheeze of relief I recognized Cravath.

"Hello," said he, softly. "I thought I'd find you hereabouts."

"What happened upstairs?" I asked, anxiously.

"I was getting too close to him," said Cravath, "and he unlimbered a gun on me. And as I was in no humor for such proceedings, I thought it best to come down and hold a council of war."

"It's no time for saying I told you so," said I. "But the temptation is almost irresistible."

"The man with the stickup ears has the Betterton flintlock," said Cravath, gently. "He is a most excellent tactician and also some runner. You were right in your warnings, old boy, and I was wrong in paying no attention to them. But," inquiringly, through the darkness, for the match had gone out, "now that things have happened, what are we going to do about them?"

"I think," said I, "it would be good judgment to get outside, if we can. It won't be long before your man, or men, take the notion to leave the house secretly. Being outside, we'll have more chance to spot them."

"That sounds like good sense," agreed Cravath.

We tried a number of doors and windows on the first floor. At last a window was found which would open to the untrained; and then we leaped out into—it seemed, several dozen waiting arms. A moment before not a sound was to be heard, now we were deafened by a babble of voices. Where all had been darkness, there now flashed a number of lamps.

"Make no resistance," a voice advised us. "A fuss will get you nothing, except maybe a wallop or two."

I saw Cravath give a couple of heaves, as though testing the strength of the men who held him. Then he laughed.

"Well," said he, with calm philosophy, "now that you've got us, what next?"

The party bustled us away in the midst of a circle of lights; when we reached the big iron gate, the searchlight of an automobile added itself to these.

"Have you caught them?" asked a woman from the machine.

"Here they are," replied the man who had warned us to make no fuss.

"Wasn't it fortunate that the watchman telephoned to every one?" said the woman.

"Suppose they had broken into your house instead of that of your husband's brother!" spoke a second woman. "The wretches!"

Cravath seemed highly tickled at this, for I heard him chuckle.

"You don't object to being called a wretch, then," said I.

"Not when it is my own mother who does the calling," said he. "The other," in explanation, "is her hostess, Mrs. Croyden."

"Mrs. Croyden!" I echoed, a suspicion for the first time beginning to take possession of me. "Then we weren't in her house?"

"It would seem not," replied Cravath.

There came the thud, thud, thud of running feet from the direction of the lonely house. It was the long-faced man.

"Oh, you've got them," he said. He looked first at Cravath and then at me; in the rays of the searchlight I saw marked contempt in the glances. "I thought they were swell cracksmen, such as you read about," said he. "That was at first; now I've changed my mind. They are dubs. Not only do they try to rob an empty house, but they ring bells to let people know they are on the job. And then," here he drew forth the old flintlock, "they carry a gun like this. I almost broke my neck in the dark trying to get it away from him. Why, you couldn't shoot it off if it was loaded."

In his eagerness to get nearer the precious pistol, Cravath drew his captors into the strong light of the car lamps. A cry rang out, then came a scurrying and a pair of loving arms were about his neck.

"Burglar!" said his mother. "Burglar! How could you make such a stupid mistake."

LINDSAY TALKS SEPARATION

That Ambitious Town Threatens to Divorce Itself From County

Lindsay's tax rate for the current year will be 601-2 mills. Of this amount 11 mills will be required to run the schools of the town. The Board of Education wants $1,508 for improvements to the East Ward School, and $2,460 to install a new heating plant in the Collegiate Institute.

Last year there were a number of railway construction camps in Lindsay and the fines collected from the convivial railway navies proved a golden harvest for the town and kept the tax rate down. Of this money, however, $5,000 had to be turned over to the county.

Some of the Lindsay Town Councillors do not favor this idea of "whacking up," and have started an agitation for the separation of town and county. They argue that even if it did cost a little more at the outset separation would pay in the end.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. OLDEST MAN IN THE WORLD DEAD IN MEXICO

Manzanillo, Mexico, July 24.—An official investigation into the claim that Jose Calvario, who died a few days ago at Tuxpin, was 185 years old has been made, and it is announced that it was fully established by church records that he was born in 1727.

During a period of more than 75 years before his death he was known to the people of the town where he lived as the oldest man in the the world.

Women at a Card Party.

Kathleen Norris, the author of "Mother," in the first chapter of her new serial, "The Rich Mrs. Burgoyne," in the Woman's Home Companion, makes one of her characters say:

"Women are funny at a card party. It takes them an hour to settle down and see how every one else looks and whether there happens to be a streak of dust under the piano, and then, when the game is just well started, a maid is nudging you in the elbow to take a plate of hot chicken, and another on the other side is holding out sandwiches, and all the women are running to look at the prizes. Now, when men play cards"—

But nobody would listen to an account of how men play cards.

Cleaning Carpets.

A simple method of cleaning carpets is to get a ball of carpet soap and wash first a small piece of carpet with lukewarm water. Then rub the way of the grain with the soap, again moisten flannel and rub thoroughly, finish with a dry cloth. The colors of the carpet will be almost as good as new.

GARBAGE TAXATION SYSTEM MEETING WITH OBJECTIONS

Protests From Those Who Feel Unjustly Taxed — Efforts to Avoid the Fee Were Unsuccessful.

The howls of protest are now commencing, coming from those who think they are being unjustly taxed for garbage collection. In accordance with the garbage by-law, the cost of removing garbage from private residences—15 cents a month—has been added to the tax bills. During the eight months that the system has been in operation, the cost amounts to only $1.20, yet because of this trivial sum several objections to paying the extra fee have been encountered. These kicks are principally from those in the area of collection who have not had their garbage collected at all, not having allowed any to accumulate. It is because of this, and thinking that by not having any garbage they would thereby escape paying the fee in the taxes, that the kicks have been registered. Those who find themselves now in that predicament might just as well have allowed the garbage man to call and relieve them of what little garbage had accumulated, as under the existing by-law regulations, they must pay just the same.

People who live across the street from those in the collecting area are paying 25 cents and more a week to have their garbage removed by private carters, a much more expensive plan than the city garbage collection system.

Sanitary Inspector Spence, however, is receiving very few complaints these days regarding the garbage collecting, and it appears that Mr. Downer is doing the work now very satisfactorily.

WATER COMMISSIONERS WILL PAY C.G.E. ACCOUNT OF $135.45

For Lighting the Pumping Station — Company Must Keep the System in Order —Other Business — Petition for a Main.

At a meeting of the Water Commissioners last night, Mr. C. Rutherford was heard in regard to getting water for building purposes for an addition to the House of Providence. It was decided that if the water for this purpose was procured through the St. Joseph's Hospital metre, the hospital be charged at a rate equal to the average metre readings for the same months of 1911, and Mr. Rutherford charged at the tariff rate for building purposes.

Ald Johnson was heard in regard to a petition for a main on Bonacord street. It was agreed that the acting superintendent make an estimate of the cost of running a main the full length of Bonacord street.

A letter was read from W. H. Lytle regarding the rate for water for constructing pavements.

A letter was read from the Canadian General Electric Company, giving a statement of material put in by the company to light the pumping station, costing $135.45. It was resolved that the account be paid, the understanding being that the Canadian General Electric Co. will keep it in order.

A letter was read from the Canadian General Electric Company regarding the wing dam. It was resolved that if the Canadian General Electric Company would construct a permanent concrete wing dam the commissioners would assit in cleaning out the tail race.

CANADIAN BASEBALL LEAGUE WILL REMAIN UNCHANGED

Proposal to Reduce League to Six Teams Received Cool Reception — W. H. Denham and E. C. McLeod at the Meeting.

Messrs. W. H. Denham, president, and E. C. McLeod, treasurer of the Peterborough baseball team, were in Hamilton yesterday, where a proposal to reduce the Canadian League from an eight to a six club circuit did not even get serious consideration at the league meeting. The chief matter of business was the suggested transfer of the Berlin franchise to a larger city.

The Dutchmen have not been properly supported. It was expected that the patronage would be large with Berlin, Waterloo, Galt and nearby towns to draw from, yet the Berliners are the only club in the circuit to experience any difficulty.

The only other matter of importance to claim the attention of the directors to-day was the application of the Guelph and Berlin clubs to have visiting teams paid twenty-five per cent of the grand stand receipts in addition to fifty per cent. of the gate money. The other six clubs were solidly arrayed against the proposition and it was voted down. President J. P. Fitzgerald, of Toronto, was in the chair.

"Pop" Williams, owner of the Berlin baseball club, and Manager "Rube" Deneau called on President Fitzgerald this morning in Toronto, en route to Niagara Falls, in search of a new home for the club, which has been obliged to leave Berlin because of lack of support.

President Fitzgerald states that the finances of the league are in such a good condition that a further levy of ten per cent on the receipts for league purposes is not necessary for the balance of the season, but the amount will be assessed to Brantford and London for a fund, to be divided between the weaker teams, which must play out the season in order to benefit.

CANADIAN HORSE WON BIG RACE

Detroit, July 21—Joe Patcher, II, owned by R. J. Mackenzie of Winnipeg and Grand Opera, belonging to J. H. Moore of Toronto, started in the $5,000 race for 2.16 pacers, yesterday. The Winnipeg horse won the race, making the best heat in 2.03 1-4. It is believed that if he had been pushed he would have made the mile in less than two minutes.

WHITE CAPS LOST SECOND GAME TO BRANTFORD

Weak Pitching Partly Responsible —"Petes" Twirler Freely Hit —Good Work of the Outfield—Berlin Here To-day.

"Andy" Kane's aggregation of ball tossers decisively reversed the tables on the Petes yesterday, the score being 10-1, the White Caps being saved from a complete shut out in eight innings. The game was lost through an inability on the part of the home team to touch "Dummy" Donovan for anything worth while. Only five hits were got off him, while Ballinger, the "Petes" twirler was freely hit. The latter was the man responsible for the locals' defeat, when Berlin played here some time ago, when he pitched for the winners. His work yesterday, while fairly good was not up to the mark by any means of past performances.

A run in the third and another in the fourth, with four more in the sixth, put Berlin ahead with such a good lead, that it looked like a complete shut out. "Donovan" the Brantford heaver displayed reluctance to allow any hits, preferring to walk his man. He pitched good ball throughout.

Ballinger filled up the bases several times, and it was in that manner that the visitors pulled in most of their runs.

The fielding and support of the Petes left nothing to be desired. Swartz and Beard missed nothing that came any ways in their territory.

To-day Berlin is playing the Petes and will endeavor to do better than at the time of the visitors' last appearance here.
